'SMEAR TRIBUNE' ATTACK TO BRING SENATE DEBATE

Biddle's Move to Be Assailed on Floor.

New Johnston Story

Turn to the Graphic section for a thrilling story by Stanley Johnston about the life of Rear Adm. Frederick C. Sherman, who was in command of the aircraft carrier Lexington when it was sunk in the battle of the Coral sea.

Mr. Johnston will be heard in a special broadcast over W-G-N and the coast to coast Mutual Broadcasting System network tonight at 8 o'clock. During the broadcast he will tell his position with regard to the forthcoming grand jury investigation of his news story of the battle of Midway.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—Attorney General Francis Biddle's announcement that a federal grand jury will investigate the publication of a news story provided by Stanley Johnston, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S famous war correspondent, was regarded in congress today as another move in the Roosevelt administration's campaign to smear, purge, and intimidate prewar noninterventionists and others now demanding a more efficient prosecution of the war.

Coöperating with the administration in the smear and purge effort are the Communist press, the Marshall Field press, the Henry Luce press, the so-called Union for Democratic Action, and affiliated Communist front organizations.

Brooks Denounces Action.

Sen. Wayland Brooks [R., Ill.] will take the floor of the senate on Monday to denounce the smear and the purge, he disclosed today. Other senators are expected to join Sen. Brooks in condemnation of the administration's assault on THE TRIBUNE, just as they joined in denouncing the recent smear of Sen. David I. Walsh [D., Mass.], chairman of the naval affairs committee.

"It is apparent," Sen. Brooks said today, "that the efforts of the administration are divided—directed partly toward winning the war against Germany, Japan, and Italy, and partly toward smearing and purging members of congress, newspapers, and individual American citizens who did not always agree with the foreign policy of the administration prior to the Jap attack on Pearl Harbor. It likewise is evident that various officials of the government are using their official powers to denounce, smear, and intimidate every one who has not been subservient.

"The people are aware of this activity and have forcefully and repeatedly shown their disapproval."

Brooks Defeats Purgers.

Sen. Brooks is one of three senators and 26 representatives specifically marked for slaughter by the Union for Democratic Action, spearhead of the purge forces, which the Dies committee on un-American activities has branded a Communist organization with a background of treasonable associations.

The administration participated in the Brooks purge campaign thru Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and the New Deal press of Chicago. Sen. Brooks, who was one of the outstanding heroes of the World war, was renominated in the Republican primary on April 14 by a majority of 554,000 votes over the candidate of the purgers.

Attorney General Biddle announced that the grand jury investigation had been ordered at the request of the navy department. Beyond the bare acknowledgment that such a recommendation was made, there was no comment at the navy department.

Knox's Aids Silent.

Secretary Knox was said to be "unavailable." Adm. Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet and chief of naval operations; Rear Adm. Theodore S. Wilkinson, assistant chief of naval operations, in charge of information and security, and Rear Adm. Russell Willson, chief of staff to the chief of naval operations, refused to comment. All referred inquiries to the justice department.

The navy's specific complaint is that the Tribune story, published on June 7, alleged that the navy had advance information of the disposition and movement of the Japanese forces which were routed in the great

In the Open
(An Editorial)

The attack on The Tribune is now in the open. An administration which for years has been seeking by one sly means or another, but always with complete futility, to intimidate this newspaper has finally despaired of all other means and is now preparing criminal prosecutions. It is announced from Washington that a federal grand jury is to investigate the publication by The Tribune on June 7 of a news story interpreting the battle of Midway.

The theory is that this item violated an act forbidding the unlawful communication of documents or information relating to the national defense. The charge is as false as it is petty and we welcome the opportunity which may come to us to prove how false and petty it is.

We take pride in the knowledge that the administration was moved to this action because of its previous failures to scare us or cajole us into surrender of our independence. How far they were prepared to go is suggested by the fact that one Republican editor of a far smaller and far less influential Chicago paper has been taken into the cabinet. Obviously they would have gone much farther to gain the mastery of The Tribune, but this newspaper was not open to such offers. It is not for sale at any price.

For years they have tried to harass us, to alienate our readers, to weaken our influence, always without success. They encouraged the organization of a rival newspaper with results that to them were cruelly disappointing. And now, all else having failed, they are threatening criminal action.

We have no apologies to make, and only one regret. We regret that the effort to destroy The Tribune's independence is directed primarily against two of our most valued associates, Mr. J. Loy (Pat) Maloney, the managing editor, and Mr. Stanley Johnston, the correspondent whose account of the Coral sea battle thrilled every newspaper reader in the land.

To charge such men with anything smacking of disloyalty and dishonor is shocking to any one who knows them or knows about them. Mr. Johnston was still a child when he enlisted in the last war and fought thru it with gallantry. His conduct aboard the Lexington at the battle of Coral sea earned him a citation for valor. Mr. Maloney in the last war had a distinguished record as a pilot in Capt. Rickenbacker's 94th aero squadron. These are the men who have been chosen as victims. By smearing them it is supposed that The Tribune can be smeared.

We await the issue with confidence in our record and confidence in our men. We have said and proved that we cannot be intimidated, and now, once again, we are going to prove it.

SMASH AT JAPS OFF AUSTRALIA AND IN ALASKA

Army, Navy, and Air Forces Engaged.

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Aug. 8. (AP).—The first American offensive in the Pacific, aimed at rolling back the Japanese invaders and recapturing the bases they seized, is under way.

This was disclosed tonight in a communique issued by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the United States Pacific fleet and Pacific ocean areas.

He said forces of the United States Pacific fleet, assisted by units of the southwest Pacific area, launched offensive operations yesterday in the Solomon Islands simultaneously with an attack on Japanese held Kiska in the Aleutians.

The admiral significantly said operations were progressing favorably "in spite of opposition by enemy land based aircraft and garrisons."

Land Operations Hinted.

His reference to garrisons and his disclosure of the combined nature of the American forces indicate landing operations and the recapture of enemy held positions are involved.

Adm. Nimitz's communique said:

"Forces of the United States Pacific fleet and Pacific ocean areas, assisted by units of the southwest Pacific area, launched offensive operations in the Tulagi area of the Solomon Islands on Aug. 7, east longitude time.

"These operations are progressing favorably in spite of opposition by enemy land based aircraft and garrisons.

"On Aug. 8, east longitude time, a task force of the Pacific fleet bombarded enemy ships and installations in Kiska."

Turning Point in War.

Such an offensive marks a turning point in the Pacific war. For the last six months since Feb. 1 the naval raid on Japanese held Marshall and Gilbert Islands and American operations in the Pacific have been the harassing technique of war of attrition to chop down Japanese striking power.

This culminated in the decisive American victory in the battle of Midway Island early in June, which cut heavily into the Japanese striking power.

For reasons of strategy and security only meager information about these offensive operations, the composition of forces, or the scope of areas involved is being released. But it can be said that these are in no sense raids similar to the past operations of naval forces in the Pacific.

Previous Action at Tulagi.

The Tulagi area of the Solomons, mentioned by Adm. Nimitz, is no strange field for American sky and sea forces. It was there last May, just before the battle of the Coral sea, that American naval raiders took a toll of 9 and possibly 11 enemy ships.

The return now of American forces to this and other areas is not for the purpose of whittling down the Japanese units, but to drive them out.

The Japanese made their initial landing in the Solomons Jan. 23. Their heavy followup infiltrations in New Guinea and in the Solomons came March 8 to 10.

First landings by the Japanese in the Aleutians were early in June, coincident with the battle of Midway.

"Battle in Early Stages."

GEN. MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Aug. 9 [Sunday]—(AP).—The first allied offensive in this southwestern Pacific area was smashing today against Japanese bases in the islands north of Australia. The battle appeared still to be in its early stages.

United States and Australian warships were believed participating and the wording of a United States naval communique in Washington indicated ground forces were in the fight on the southeast Solomons.

Air forces stationed in the southwest Pacific also were lending their strength to the widespread operation, making heavy raids on New Guinea, the Solomon Islands, and New Britain.

Strike to Stop Passive Revolt Voted in India

BOMBAY, India, Aug. 9 [Sunday]—(AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi and other Indian Nationalist leaders were arrested today within a few hours after the All-India Congress party had approved a resolution authorizing a mass campaign of civil disobedience to support its demands for immediate Indian independence.

Among those taken into custody were Maulana Abdul Kalan Azad, president of the Congress party, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, and Gandhi's secretary, Miss Madeline Slade.

No Warrant for His Wife.

No warrant was issued for Gandhi's wife, who was told by police that she could accompany her husband but who elected to remain behind.

[Reuters, British news agency, said those arrested were taken by special train to Poona.]

Seventeen arrests were reported to have been made in the city of Ahmadabad, where the roundup started shortly after the congress adjourned.

Gandhi was arrested at 5 a. m. when three carloads of police pulled up before the house where he was staying and roused him from his bed.

Gandhi Says His Prayers.

Telephone communications thruout the city were cut off for some time, presumably to prevent leakage of information regarding the police moves.

The government acted just a few hours after the full committee of the Congress party had handed complete authority to the 72 year old leader of the India nationalist movement for a drive aimed at forcing an end to British rule in India.

Seventeen arrests had been made up to early hours today in Ahmadabad. They were the first reported after the Congress committee adjourned. The government has banned gatherings of more than five persons.

Government "Regrets" Challenge.

In a statement at New Delhi, the government reply to the Congress party's resolution said:

"There is nothing the government of India regrets more than this challenge at so critical a juncture, but on it lies the task of defending India . . . that task the government of India will discharge in the face of the challenge now thrown down by the Congress party with clear determination . . ."

"I am pledged to the Congress and the Congress is pledged to do or die," Gandhi declared in concluding a two hour address that wound up yesterday's crucial meeting of the party's general committee.

He said, "We shall make every effort to see the viceroy [Lord Linlithgow] before starting the movement," but last night at New Delhi the government declined to negotiate with the Congress on its demands.

Government Fears Anarchy.

The New Delhi statement said the government "would regard as wholly incompatible with their responsibilities to the people of India and their obligations to the allies discussions about a demand, the acceptance of which would plunge India in confusion and anarchy and paralyze her effort in the common cause of freedom."

The government prohibited the printing or publication of news about the mass movement or of measures

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

HONOLULU, T. H., Aug. 8.—The war may last 10 years, and if it does the allies will lose the first four years and win the last six, Sir Earle Page, Australia's representative in the British war cabinet, said today on his way home.

"The time for an allied offensive in the Pacific is coming fast," he said, "but the united nations must remember that they are fighting a tremendously clever enemy. Japan is no pushover. We have got to fight like blazes all the time. Our reverses now do not dismay me because our time is coming fast." He said a blow at Japan this year would be three times as effective as next year. "We must keep Japan from throwing her full strength against Russia," he declared. "It's inevitable that Japan will attack Russia."

U. S. EXECUTES 6 U-BOAT BORNE NAZI SABOTEURS

End Lives in Chair; 2 Sent to Prison.

Case of Haupt's Kin

J. Albert Woll, United States attorney, revealed yesterday that the government is considering increasing the severity of its charges against the six persons accused here of aiding Herbert Hans Haupt, who was executed as a saboteur yesterday.

One unverified report was that formal charges of treason might be asked of the federal grand jury, which is expected to begin its investigation this week.

The six suspects, all held in the county jail, are Haupt's parents, Hans Max and Erna Haupt of 2234 Fremont street; the saboteur's uncle and aunt, Walter Wilhelm and Lucille Froehling of 3643 North Whipple street, and Otto Richard Wergin and his wife, Kate Martha, of 5416 South Wood street.

The present charges against the six are that they aided Haupt while knowing him to be a German agent.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—Six of the eight Nazi saboteurs who came to this country by submarine on a mission to cripple the war effort were executed today in the District of Columbia jail's electric chair.

Beginning at noon the six walked one by one into the death chamber on the fourth floor of the old jail. There, one by one, they died in the presence of official witnesses.

Six times at intervals afternoon watchers in a dismal downpour outside saw the prison lights dim as the dynamos sent the fatal charges into the bodies of the condemned men.

Two Get Prison Terms.

The two other saboteurs, adjudged equally guilty by the military commission which tried them, escaped death by aiding the prosecution. One of them, Ernest Peter Burger, was sentenced to life in prison at hard labor. The other, George John Dasch, was sentenced to 30 years at hard labor.

Execution of the six was announced by the White House about an hour and a half after the first of the plotters was pronounced dead. The six were Herbert Hans Haupt, Heinrich Harm Heinck, Edward John Kerling, Hermann Otto Neubauer, Richard Quirin, and Werner Thiel.

The White House announcement of the execution of the saboteurs, who were given a trial to demonstrate democratic processes to totalitarian states and even were allowed to carry their fight to the United States Supreme court, was delivered in six short paragraphs. It read:

"The President completed his review of the findings and sentences of the military commission appointed by him on July 2, 1942, which tried the eight Nazi saboteurs.

Judgment Approved.

"The President approved the judgment of the military commission that all of the prisoners were guilty and that they be given the death sentence by electrocution.

"However, there was a unanimous recommendation by the commission, concurred in by the attorney general and the judge advocate general of the army, that the sentence of two of the prisoners be commuted to life imprisonment because of their assistance to the government of the United States in the apprehension and conviction of the others.

FDR Commutes Burger Term.

"The commutation directed by the President in the case of Burger was to confinement at hard labor for life. In the case of Dasch, the sentence was commuted by the President to confinement at hard labor for 30 years.

"The electrocutions began at noon today. Six of the prisoners were electrocuted. The other two were confined to prison.

"The records in all eight cases will be sealed until the end of the war."

Waacs Step Out on Parade, America's New Girl Review

BY MARTHA MURPHY.

Fort Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 8.—Officer candidates in the Women's Army Auxiliary corps—440 strong—held open house at this historic post today for the first time since they started training here July 20. It was a thrilling day for both candidates and their 340 auxiliary [private] sisters, for Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Waac director, came from Washington, D. C., to review her corps in their first full dress parade.

Behind a color guard and the post band, seven companies of officer candidates and auxiliaries stepped smartly across the parade ground. Their heads high, cap brims jutting stiffly over beaming faces, and man tailored khaki uniforms ruffled by a sultry Iowa breeze, the Waacs executed eyes right in salute as they passed in review before Mrs. Hobby, Col. Don C. Faith, commandant of the post, and Lieut. Col. Albert C. Morgan, assistant commandant.

New Arrivals Watch.

Girls fresh from college campuses, white collar girls whose typewriters lie quiet, society girls whose dancing shoes have been replaced by heavy army oxfords, wives whose husbands fought at Bataan—all have been blended together to form the Waac—the new American girl.

First honors in the parade went to the 2d company, 3d regiment of auxiliaries. Their lines were the straighest, their obedience to orders the quickest of any of the companies on parade. Mrs. Hobby and Col. Faith extended personal congratulations to the company's commander, Capt. Raymond Darrah and to its acting Waac leaders, Rose Wagner, student commander, and Claire Pirie, Ruth J. Ihle, and Caroline Hennicke, platoon leaders, all of Los Angeles, Cal.

Hold General Inspection.

At 8:30 a. m. today the Waacs lined up in front of their barracks for general inspection by Col. Faith and Mrs. Hobby. Each Waac wore her uniform smartly, the khaki tie tucked in and skirt seams straight, hair curled tightly above collars or nestled in coils high on the head.

Barracks inspection found the long rows of cots and lockers scrupulously neat. Waac shoes, oxfords, sneakers, moccasins, and rubber overshoes toed an even line under each army-blanketed bed. A cap perched jauntily on each pillow and in the clothes lockers hung uniforms and the few civilian clothes the candidates brought with them. Foot lockers swung open revealing tilted trays filled with neat rows of toilet articles, handkerchiefs, hose, and gloves. Beside each cot stood the Waac to whom it belonged.

"I've been training soldiers for 25 years and I have a thorough knowledge of what they can do," Col. Faith commented at the close of the day's review. "This parade is way and beyond what any one could anticipate. The miracle has been created by the women themselves. It's unparalleled."

Beyond Expectations.

Col. Faith estimated that the Waacs are learning two and one-half times as fast as ordinary soldiers. Mrs. Hobby joined Col. Faith's enthusiasm. "Frankly, I expected great progress," Mrs. Hobby said. "But I did not expect what I saw Friday and today. It was better than good."

"We've had only one difficulty," Col. Faith echoed. "They work too hard." Their enthusiasm, he said, has become a problem.

Already 20 companies of Waacs are "spoken for" by army posts. Soon after completion of their eight weeks' basic training, officer candidates, by then commissioned or noncommissioned officers, will be sent to such bases are Fort Devens, Fort Sam Houston, and Camp Grant. The two companies of Negro women now being trained will be sent to Fort Huachaca, Ariz. Other officers will be kept here to help train auxiliaries and more officers. Still others will be sent to the 52 principal recruiting stations thruout the United States.

HOME FRONT INSPIRATION

In all issues of tomorrow's Tribune will appear a full page of color features of The Tribune which have spurred the war effort in Chicagoland. These consist largely of color cartoons in poster form which have been presented recently with the object of inspiring those on the home front to aid the war effort.

GERMANS CRACK REDS' LINE; ROLL CLOSER TO OIL

Soviet Admits 2 Columns Strike at Maikop.

The army newspaper Red Star announced the German breakthru toward Maikop, whose wells supply 7 per cent of Russia's oil, and the midnight communique gave this version of a reverse at Armavir:

"In one sector after bloody fighting during which 14 enemy tanks were destroyed and 500 Germans killed our troops withdrew to new positions."

Fight North of Kuban River.

The German drive on Maikop apparently stemmed mostly from the northeast Kuban river bend because the Russians said their troops also were fighting the Nazis in the Kropotkin sector, 50 miles northwest of Armavir.

These Kropotkin fighters may be the remnants of the Russian divisions which had been fighting at Kushchevka, 100 miles to the northwest on the Rostov-Baku railway, because today's communique did not mention the Kushchevka sector.

[The Germans claimed their troops had crossed the Kuban river to capture Armavir, then seized Kurgannaya, 30 miles to the west on the Laba river, in the drive toward Maikop. That would place the Nazis only 30 miles from the oil city.]

Soviet Plight Critical.

The soviet plight in the Maikop area admittedly was so critical that it was possible the Russians already had planted demolition charges in the oil fields.

Red Star spoke of failure in the "Kuban river loop," an implication that the Nazis had bridged that natural Russian barrier altho there was no official word of such a development.

The Don and Kuban Cossacks and the Red army regulars fighting in the Kropotkin sector apparently had only one avenue of escape if the Nazis have solidified their hold in the Krasnodar-Armavir area. That would be westward toward the sea in the hope of being removed by soviet warships.

Nazis Gain Near Stalingrad.

North of this Caucasus front the Red army defending the southwestern approaches to Stalingrad "fought with varying success" against a German tank and infantry wedge into the Russian positions northeast of Kotelnikovo, 95 miles from the industrial city on the Volga river. The phrase, "northeast of Kotelnikovo," indicated the Germans were gaining ground in that area, too.

Thousands of German reënforcements were hurled into battle both above and below the Don river in the effort to reach Stalingrad, and another ominous development reported in the latest communique was that the Nazis had concentrated a huge tank force south of Kletskaya, which is 75 miles northwest of Stalingrad in the Don elbow.

The battle in the Kletskaya sector was a give-and-take affair with both sides registering small gains. The Russians admitted a slight German advance "on one narrow sector," but said Red counterattacks had thrown the Nazis back in another zone after killing 600 Germans.

There has been no indication that the Germans had reached the easternmost part of the Don river, the last big natural barrier before the Volga and Stalingrad. The Russians in this pocket were fighting with their backs to the Don curve.

The Russians also reported successes in the Voronezh area, far to the north of the upper Don. There the Russians were said to have seized two more large settlements on the west bank of the Don and were fighting in the outskirts of a third.

Marshal Semeon Timoshenko was employing the same tactics there that the Russians used in their winter counteroffensive—encircling and exterminating enemy points of resistance. Thousands of German and Hungarians were reported slain in this fight on the northern wing of the German eastward plunge.

The Russian aim was to relieve German pressure in the south, but thus far it has not checked the Nazi Caucasian drive.

In the Kotelnikovo sector German tanks thrust into Russian positions constantly, but the extent of the Nazi overall gain was not revealed. The Russians were handicapped both by lack of natural defense barriers below the Don on the approaches to Stalingrad, and by German reserve strength.

But the Russians too were moving reënforcements into the area in an apparent effort to save Stalingrad at all costs. This could explain the unchecked Nazi momentum in the Caucasus. There, it may be the Russian plan to fall back slowly to the mountains, which would afford a natural defense line.

Nazis Press Closer to Oil Area in Caucasus

Captions on the map and the ruled area indicate progress of the axis penetration into the Don basin and the Caucasus, where the oil region at Maikop appears to be the immediate objective point.

FRENCH ANTI-RED TROOPS CAN WIN VICHY'S MEDALS

VICHY, France, Aug. 8 (AP).—The French government announced today that the tricolor legion, composed of French volunteers fighting with the Germans against Russia, has been placed on the same footing as the regular French army so far as rewards are concerned. The volunteers, who receive considerably higher pay than the same ranks in the regular army, were given the right to be decorated with the legion of honor and the military medal for service in Russia.

Hint French Maneuvers.

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—A German broadcast today gave the first hint of maneuvers by Vichy French armed forces at a time when the Germans are making ostentatious preparations against a threatened second front. The disclosure was made in an offhanded mention of a speech by Adm. Jean Darlan, Vichy defense chief, when the broadcast said, "maneuvers of the second division were concluded."

Nazi Bomber Downed Near Moscow as Allies Meet

MOSCOW, Aug. 8 (AP).—A German bomber was shot down on the distant approaches to Moscow as Adm. William H. Standley, United States ambassador to the soviet union, and Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley of the United States army air corps conferred here, Red Star reported today.

RUSSIA RECOGNIZES PRE-MUNICH CZECH FRONTIER AS OFFICIAL

LONDON, Aug. 8 (AP).—Eduard Benes, president of the provisional government of Czecho-Slovakia in London, said in a broadcast today that Russia had officially recognized Czecho-Slovakia's pre-Munich frontiers. The Czech president said he talked with Vyacheslav Molotov, Russian commissar for foreign affairs, in London on June 9 and quoted him as saying:

"The soviet government never at any time had anything to do with Munich, was against the policy which led to Munich, and therefore does not recognize anything which took place there in relation to Czecho-Slovakia."

SINGLE GERMAN RAIDER ATTACKS IN LONDON REGION

LONDON, Aug. 8 (AP).—Sirens screamed and antiaircraft batteries boomed in the London area today on the second anniversary of the beginning of the battle of Britain, which raged for three months and cost the Germans at least 2,375 planes destroyed. But all the noise today in the capital was occasioned by a single Nazi plane making a token daylight raid on a nearby county. Some casualties resulted in a town where the raider strafed the streets.

Official circles also announced a few enemy aircraft appeared over southern England. The alert was brief in London, where large crowds continued about their business, refusing to take shelter.

Germans Building Pipe Line for Caucasus Oil, Report

LONDON, Aug. 8 (AP).—A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm quoted an arrival from Bucharest as saying 100,000 men were employed by the Germans on a pipe line from Constanta, on the Black sea, to Cernavoda, on the Danube, to transport oil Hitler hopes to get from the Caucasus.

IOWA BOY KILLED BY TRAIN.

Humboldt, Ia., Aug. 8.—[Special].—Buddy Hobbet, 15 years old, Thor, Ia., was injured fatally today when a Chicago North Western passenger train struck a tractor he was driving at a crossing east of here.

Germans Gird for Invasion but Say It Will Fail.

LONDON, Aug. 8 (AP).—The peoples of Europe tonight were reported to be in a state of mounting tension as their Nazi conquerors took strong preparatory measures against the threat of an allied invasion and at the same time tried to persuade them a second front would fail.

A Czecho-Slovak government source said the tension was particularly acute in Bohemia and Moravia because the Germans were sending more workmen to western Europe to labor on fortifications. Prague reports showed a belief among the people, this source said, that "decisive events will take place this year."

[Travelers reaching Istanbul, Turkey, were quoted as saying the Nazis were so fearful of a possible invasion along Europe's western coast that they had established large aerial intervention points from which parachute troops could be swiftly carried by transport planes. These concentration points are scattered thru western Germany, the Rhineland, and southern Norway. Planes and troops are held in constant readiness. A report from Turkey Friday night said 150,000 Germans and Italians in Greece, destined for service in Africa, were being held there temporarily lest a second front be opened.]

Norse Coast Under Alert.

Stockholm press reports quoted by Reuters [British news agency] said the whole Norwegian coast has been under a state of alert since Aug. 1, while the German-controlled Norwegian press emphasized that the party of Maj. Vidkun Quisling would not "allow themselves to be mown down either by Americans or British bolsheviks or their satellites here in Norway."

The Norwegian government in London said the Germans were constructing a great air base in the Vesteraalen island area, apparently for bombers which could operate against Iceland and convoys bound for Russia.

The Berlin radio said Nazi Grand Admiral Erich Raeder had spent the past week inspecting naval bases on the English channel and the Atlantic coast to see how strongly they were fortified.

The "Free Belgian" news agency reported many hostages have been arrested in Belgium and quoted the Nazi authorities as warning the people they could guarantee the lives of these hostages only if they refrained from sabotage and other hostile acts.

Halt Release of French.

"Fighting French" headquarters in London said German fears of a French uprising in the event of an allied landing had brought to a halt the negotiations for release of French war prisoners.

A spokesman said that "since Laval came to power, not over 1,000 prisoners have been freed and they are all sick or wounded. At the same time, only 15,000 French workers have gone to the reich, altho the Germans demanded 350,000."

The Netherlands news agency, Aneta, declared the German authorities in Holland today offered a reward of $54,000 for information leading to the arrest of saboteurs who wrecked a Nazi military train near Rotterdam last night, and threatened to execute Dutch hostages if the saboteurs were not caught by midnight, Aug. 14.

Meanwhile, there were fresh reports of intense fighting between Gen. Draja Mihailovitch's Jugo-Slav guerrilla forces and the Italians which Geneva dispatches from the Tass news agency said numbered about 30,000 men with heavy artillery support.

France to Take Drastic Action to Curb Anti-Nazi 'Agitators'

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VICHY, France, Aug. 8.—The French government has decided to take drastic action against agitators, it was announced today.

"Attempts by the Anglo-Saxons and their Communist allies to foment trouble in France or to create an impression of unrest and instability so as to prejudice the Laval government's negotiations for collaboration with the Germans will be ruthlessly dealt with," it was stated.

It was learned that not only terrorists who resort to acts of violence, but also those who are charged with propagating rumors and false news will be prosecuted and severely punished.

Fear New St. Nazaire.

A week ago the Vichy cabinet adopted measures to prevent any meetings or public manifestations derogatory to the public interests and it also was decided to inflict the death penalty against any one found collecting and storing arms.

What seems to be feared is that the population along the Atlantic coast will be aroused to rash acts by propaganda appealing to their patriotism. The government wants to protect its citizens from a repetition of the consequences of the commando raids at St. Nazaire [a German submarine base] last spring.

Describe "Atlantic Wall."

Newspapers published stories on the formidable fortifications which the Germans are said to have erected all along the Atlantic coast. The fortifications, running from the Bay of Biscay to Holland, are called the "Atlantic Wall."

The whole distance bristles with big naval guns capable of shooting a long distance, interspersed with smaller cannon, it is stated. There are no gaps anywhere in the line and the whole makes the Maginot line look amateurish. Back of this for a considerable depth are other fortifications and entrenchments, the whole being invisible.

Report Office Bombed.

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 8.—The Tribune de Geneve today reported that a bomb exploded this morning at Annemasse, France, in the offices of the organization recruiting French skilled labor for German armament plants. The office was opened Aug. 5.

FIVE MILLION SOLDIERS AREN'T IN BRITAIN JUST TO EAT, PAPER ASSERTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The Daily Telegraph, which consistently has been an unswerving supporter of the British government, today editorialized on the supposed second front negotiations in Moscow:

"It is useless to speculate at the moment on the larger possibilities of this gathering of the eagles. They certainly will take into account more than the immediate military situation."

Lord Kemsley's Daily Sketch, estimating "there are at least five million" British, Canadian, and American troops in this country, says: "One thing is certain—Britain is ready to take her proper part in the war and the immense military forces she has been accumulating with the help of her allies are not meant to eat their heads off in idleness. But just what is going to be done is not a thing to be predicted. Let Hitler consult his astrologers for guidance on this point. There is no reason why we should help him one way or the other."

Subject Peoples Look to American Way.

Subject populations of the western Pacific who have seen the beneficial results of the operations of American institutions in the Philippines will play an important rôle in the decision of the war in that area, Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, asserted last night in an address delivered over W-G-N on the America Loves a Melody hour.

"Our republic is now at war with Japanese despotism," he said. "Both cannot survive. What could help us more than to guarantee that the consequence of our success will be their [subject populations'] freedom?"

Col. McCormick sketched in turn the histories of the global nations—Spain, Portugal, Holland, England, and France—then American activities in the orient.

"American ideas first reached the orient in clipper ships," he said. "Traders were followed by missionaries; American philanthropy erected hospitals and schools. The orientals, accustomed to tyranny from the beginning of time, began to wish for freedom."

TEXT OF THE ADDRESS

The text of the address follows:

"We are hearing a good deal these days about global wars, to be followed by a global peace.

"This country has pretty generally attended to its own affairs and not paid a great deal of attention to globular matters. Let us look, therefore, at what might be called the global world, and see which are the global nations and how they became that way.

"The first global nation was Spain.

"Every one knows that Christopher Columbus discovered America in 1492 and that Spain then proceeded to exploit it.

"The Spaniards were purely military without any commercial capacity or desire. They only wanted military conquests and the lands which fell to them were easy to conquer and filled with plunder.

Broken Up by Republics.

"Spain at one time controled all of America, save Brazil, from the nebulous north boundaries of Florida and California to Cape Horn. This empire lasted for some 300 years and was broken up in the first instance by the encroachments of the republic of the United States and in the second by the encroachments of republican ideas which led to the revolt of Central and South America.

"In 1503 in the hope of finding valuable islands in the orient, west of the Portuguese claims, King Ferdinand sent Magellan to approach them from the west. Magellan found the strait bearing his name and also the Philippines.

"In 1898 in the process of throwing the last of Spanish sovereignty out of the American hemisphere, the United States took the Philippine Islands from Spain and perhaps started the present trend of events.

Commerce Goal of Portuguese.

"It was the Portuguese who made the first sea-going ships and navigating instruments. They discovered the Azores and the Madeira Islands, gradually crept down the coast of Africa, where they originated the slave trade, and Vasco de Gama circumnavigated the Cape of Good Hope in 1497.

"Thereafter for more than a hundred years, Portugal enjoyed a monopoly of the oriental trade around the cape.

"Her policy is said to have been conquest, commerce, and conversion—a conquest of Mohammedans and conversion of other religions. It really amounted to little more than commerce. The Portuguese established a number of factories, or armed headquarters, but did not attempt settlement or the governing of people.

Build Fort to Protect Trade.

"The Portuguese traded with the west coast of Africa and India. To protect their monopoly they built a fort on the Red sea to prevent traffic reaching Europe overland via Egypt. They established trading posts in the East Indies, in China, and in Japan.

"In the year 1500 the Portuguese discovered Brazil and proceeded to settle and administer that huge territory.

"A treaty concluded between the kings of Spain and Portugal gave the Philippines and all of America excepting Brazil to Spain—Brazil and all the rest of the orient being conceded to Portugal.

Empire Open to Dutch Shipping.

"When Charles V. became king of Spain he was also lord of the Netherlands. The Spanish empire thus was open to Dutch shipping.

"In 1581 the king of Spain became king of Portugal. Taking advantage of this situation, the Dutch merchants invaded the Portuguese monopoly and established factories in India, Ceylon, Sumatra, the Persian gulf, and the Red sea, and they laid the foundation of the city of Batavia in Java in 1618.

"The Dutch had long had access to Portuguese ports to move Portuguese imports to northern Europe. Perhaps because of these contacts, perhaps because of great tact, the Dutch invasion of the Portuguese monopoly was not resented.

"When, however, the English entered the Indian ocean and began to trade there, the Portuguese attacked them, and the English, after a series of naval victories, expelled the Portuguese from the orient, excepting Mozambique in western Africa, a portion of the Atlantic African coast, Macao in China, and a factory in Japan.

"The Dutch and British, because of their joint enmity to Spain and their frequent collaboration against Spain and France, managed to compete in the orient without too much friction until the British East India company began the conquest of India under the famous Clive. This great amateur soldier captured the Dutch post at Chinsura in 1758. Returned to Holland, it was retaken in 1781, when the Dutch entered our Revolutionary war. It was again returned in 1783.

"Chinsura and all of the Dutch possessions along the Indian ocean were taken by the English after Napoleon conquered Holland. Some of them were restored after the peace treaties of 1814 and 1815. It probably was the loss of these oriental possessions that caused Napoleon to cede Louisiana to the United States.

"Early in the last century the Dutch gave up their holdings in India for British holdings in Java and Sumatra. The Dutch sent settlers to the islands and encouraged intermarriage with the natives, but did not create either a navy or an army of any consequence capable of defending them against aggression, joining herself informally, therefore, to the British empire.

"French fishermen had sailed to America so long that the statement is sometimes made that they were there before Columbus, and at least one French ship appears to have visited India during the reign of Francis I., but the French global adventures did not begin until the famous Louis XIV.

"A French colony was established at Pondichery on the west coast of India. The French and British traders do not appear to have overtly quarreled, but when war broke out between France and the great coalition, the war spread both to Canada and India. In Canada the British fleet was wrecked in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, but in India the British prevailed both on land and sea and reduced the French holdings to the little town of Pondichery.

"Beginning about 1830, France began building up her empire in northern and western Africa. In 1858 she invaded the province of Indo-China, which she annexed in 1887 and which the Japanese have occupied in the last months.

England Late in Starting.

"Like France, England was late in starting her global operations. It was not until 1600 Queen Elizabeth founded the Muscovite company, which for years did a thriving trade with Russia thru Archangel, and the India company.

"This great company did not assume the complexion of a state, as did the American companies, yet concluded treaties, appointed governors, raised armies, and made war. It was the India company, for instance, which defeated the French royal governor, Dupleix. The great conqueror, Clive, was an officer not of the crown, but of the India company. Most of the territorial conquests and most of the treaties of alliance with native princes were made by that company. The Indian empire is a product, therefore, of a trading company, not of a government, which did not take over all of the activities of the company in 1858.

British Sea Power Begins.

"We have seen how the English navy destroyed those of Spain and Portugal. Holland allowed hers to decay. Nelson finished French sea power at Trafalgar. From that time British sea power has been supreme until the present, and globular affairs, except in Europe and America, have been subject to British approval.

"American ideas first reached the orient in the days of clipper ships. Traders were followed by missionaries; American philanthropy erected hospitals and schools. No complaint has been raised that the doctors and teachers intrigued in politics, but their attitude of independence itself furnished an example. The orientals, accustomed to tyranny from the beginning of time, began to wish for freedom.

"When we took the Philippines, it seemed for a while that we had gone imperial. Thru a variety of circumstances that have never been made clear, the army that went out to free the Philippines conquered them.

Return Money to China.

"After our troops marched to Peking with European and Japanese troops, we even extorted a fine. Then our national character reasserted itself. We returned the money to China. We set up self-government in the Philippines and set the date to make them completely free in 1946.

"In the meantime the oriental despotism of Japan had been waxing powerful. In recent years it has overrun large portions of China; in recent months Burma, Malaya, the East Indies, and the Philippines. Only in the Philippines was there any resistance by the natives, and in China.

"Our republic is now at war with Japanese despotism. Both cannot survive. The subject populations of the western Pacific who have seen the magnificence of American institutions in the Philippines and have heard of them from missionaries and doctors will be important in the decision.

"What could help us more than to guarantee that the consequence of our success will be their freedom?"

CHIMES OF NORMANDY

A medley from Planquette's operetta, "Chimes of Normandy," was the musical highlight of the program. Marion Claire and Attilio Baggiore were the soloists, with the W-G-N orchestra and chorus, directed by Henry Weber, providing the background.

RANKIN DEMANDS SPEEDY HELP TO YANKS' FAMILIES

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—Rep. John E. Rankin [D., Miss.] today demanded a showdown Monday on a bill calling for immediate payment of the allowances due service men's dependents. Two similar measures have been pigeonholed by the senate military affairs committee.

"I'm going to make a desperate effort to get this measure taken up and passed by unanimous consent on Monday," Rankin said.

Asserting that a majority of the house military affairs committee favors the bill, the Mississippian said:

"It is unthinkable that all these payments be held up for three months when so many of these helpless dependents of the men in our armed forces are actually suffering want."

War department witnesses before the senate military affairs committee were reported to have declared it would be impossible to compute the sums due and make out the checks before Nov. 1, the date stipulated by the law.

Army Seeks 100,000 Skilled Mechanics and Technicians

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—The army announced today a campaign to enlist 100,000 skilled mechanics and technicians for the air forces, signal corps, and ordnance department, saying they were needed at once to serve until schools turn out enough trained men. Physically qualified men between 18 and 44 will be accepted, after obtaining clearance from local draft boards.

CANADA TO DRAFT MEN AND WOMEN FOR WAR PLANTS

Registration of Entire Population Planned.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 8.—Every Canadian is to be made liable to a quick move into war industry or activities more in line with direct war effort than he or she is now performing, the government has warned.

First efforts to effect needed changes in employment will be conducted by persuation, but power to order changes in employment is vested in the national selective service board. The plain intimation is that compulsion will be used where and when necessary.

Plans for Unlimited Scope.

The man power situation, together with plans for dealing with the war industries, labor shortage, was outlined privately to a gathering of Canadian newspaper executives this week. Faith was broken in a single instance, since which Canadian newspapers have felt free to outline the general prospect.

The scope of Canada's man power plans is virtually unlimited; the objective is to see in the final analysis that every individual is working in the job he or she can best perform in the interests of war effort. Other things, except a few highly rated essentials such as food production and newspaper work, just aren't going to matter. No one may quit a job or be fired without due notice having been given central authority.

Register All Citizens.

Complete registration of the population is involved, wholesale training of workers for new activities is envisaged, movement of industries from one location to another where there is large man power reserve is contemplated, vast new housing projects, and resettlement of workers and their families are involved. A major aim of the plan will be to attain as great a replacement of male labor with female labor as possible.

The semiofficial revelations in connection with the plans now being laid declare that the labor transformations are to be made from the perspective of a life or death alternative for Canadians.

ANNAPOLIS STUDENTS HEAR SECRET REPORTS ON WAR FROM HEROES

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 8 (AP).—First-hand accounts of major naval engagements in the Philippines, the Coral sea and in the Midway area have been added to the United States Naval Academy's program for producing topnotch officers.

Speakers have included Lieut. Comm. John D. Buckley, credited with sinking several Japanese warships in Bataan torpedo boat actions; Col. William T. Clement, marine corps, formerly attached to the staff of the commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet; Commander Henry Eccles and Lieut. Comm. H. B. Jarrett, Coral sea heroes; Capt. Frank Wagner, survivor of the "Patrol Wing 10" unit, and Lieut. Noel Gaylor, flyer aboard the ill fated U. S. S. Lexington.

U. S. PILOTS ASK PLANE THAT WILL FLY ABOVE JAPS

Fighter Won't Climb as High as Zeros.

BY E. R. NODERER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA, Aug. 8 [Passed by military censor].—What the allied air force needs in the southwest Pacific is a high altitude fighter with sufficient fuel capacity to enable it to accompany big bombers on their forays into enemy territory.

This is the opinion of American pilots, who say the P39 and P40 planes in use here are of good quality and workmanship, but that it is often necessary to use them on jobs for which they were never designed.

The pilots say they get most of their trouble from Japanese Zeros, which "are not wonder planes, but we have a healthy respect for them."

The Zero is a flimsy kite which disintegrates under blasts from American fighters' .50 caliber guns, but which will climb faster and higher than allied fighters. The answer to the Zero is now said to be in production in America.

Armor Protects Yanks.

By way of contrast the American planes, pilots assert, have many features the Jap planes lack. The American pilot is well protected by armor and his ship is structurally stronger. The American built machine can absorb enough lead to down half a dozen Zeros and still get back to its base.

American plane designers are committed to a policy of protecting pilots, whereas the Zeros have no armor. Jap planes are made of good but very light duraluminum. However, these two contrasting theories of design result in the enemy plane being much lighter, which gives it a faster rate of climb and a higher ceiling.

The American planes are medium altitude fighters, performing best around 14,000 feet. The Japanese Zeros often escort bombers at 25,000 feet, and American flying fortresses have encountered them at 30,000 to 35,000 feet.

In reaching up to get at the Zeros the American planes are at a disadvantage. But they can't be beaten for army coöperation work, such as low altitude support of ground troops.

Strategy Hasn't Changed.

The lightness of the Zero makes it somewhat more maneuverable than the Airacobras [P-39s] or Kittyhawks [P-40s], but the superior strength of the American planes made it possible until recently for them to dive away from the Japanese.

The strategy of aerial combat hasn't changed since the last World war. The idea is still to get above your opponent and dive on him. With the equipment from America to date, this is difficult, and it is necessary for allied pilots to get the Japs to come down to do battle on their level. This, however, the Japs don't do when they are escorting high level bombers.

Numerous pilots expressed this thought: "We hope some day to have a plane from which we can look down and say, 'There they are,' instead of looking up and saying, 'Duck! Here they come.'"

Japs Not as Well Armed.

The Jap fighters are not as well armed as American planes, the pilots assert. The Zeros has two 20 millimeter cannons, one in each wing, and two 7.7 mm. machine guns. They can be fired separately or together. Some American planes have a 37 millimeter cannon and machine guns, some only machine guns, but allied gunners say our .50 caliber machine gun is the best weapon in the world. Many prefer it to the slower firing cannon.

American bombers are generally superior to Jap bombers. They are more heavily armed and can absorb much more punishment, but they are somewhat handicapped by the short range of the fighters, which are unable to protect them on long range missions.

Zeros, on the other hand, have a range of about 1,200 miles with belly tanks—provided they don't have to use up their fuel in high speed fighting. Bomber raids on northern Australian points are usually accompanied by swarms of fighters, whereas American bombers striking at such places as Rabaul, New Britain, have to go out on their own.

But the American heavy bombers, such as those which bombed Rabaul Saturday, are so well armed losses are almost negligible. One plane was reported lost in Friday's raid, but seven enemy defenders were shot down.

Japanese and American fighters are about on equal footing as far as speed is concerned, the pilots believe.

All in One Piece.

American fighter pilots have developed a special technique in meeting Zeros. They try to make one deadly pass at the Zeros and then get away to square off for another dive. If they miss they must dive or perish.

An American fighter pilot who had examined a captured Zero described it thus: "The wings and fuselage are in one piece, which means the Japs can't change the wings if they are damaged but must replace the whole job. It has an efficient landing gear which folds up in the fuselage. The whole ship is flush riveted, with only a few protuberances.

"It has a 14 cylinder radial engine similar to the Pratt and Whitney Wasp, probably of about 950 to 1,000 horse power, which is about 100 horse power less than United States fighters' power plants. The cockpits are roomy and comfortable, and it has two machine guns.

"There is no evidence of lack of materials or skimpiness. The metal construction is lighter than ours, but it's good duraluminum. Nothing is left out of the instrument panel, but there is nothing unnecessary. The plane has a good performance because it's of light weight and supercharged. It has no outstanding feature we can't match."

POLICEMAN DIES OF HEART ATTACK.

FOREIGNERS NOW FILL 20% OF INDUSTRIAL JOBS IN GERMANY

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 8 (AP).—So many Germans have been called for military service that the Nazis have found it necessary to fill 20 per cent of home front jobs with foreign labor, and the total soon may be increased to 25 per cent, the Basel National Zeitung said today in a dispatch from Berlin.

The newspaper said the Germans were facing a problem as the result of British and American superiority in man power. It estimated the United States had available 40,000,000 adult males and Britain 20,000,000, compared to 40,000,000 in Germany, Austria and the Sudetenland.

Germany, the dispatch said, is trying to find a way out by placing war contracts with factories in occupied and neutral countries as well as by bringing in a greater number of foreigners. Foreign workers now total 5,000,000.

F. D. R. WILL ISSUE NEW PLEA FOR U. S. WAR PRODUCTION

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP). — President Roosevelt and other leaders of the war effort will tell the nation tomorrow about the critical needs of war production. They will speak in connection with an army-navy production award program over the Columbia Broadcasting System from 1 to 1:30 p. m. Chicago war time.

The President's message will be read by Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information. Other speakers will include: Adm. William D. Leahy, making his first radio appearance since he became chief of staff to President Roosevelt; W. L. Batt, vice chairman of the War Production board; Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war; James V. Forrestal, undersecretary of the navy; Lieut. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, speaking from London; Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, speaking from "somewhere in the Pacific"; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organization.

Davis will discuss the army-navy production award, which is granted to industrial units for outstanding performance in war work.

LAUNCH 2 91-DAY DESTROYERS FOR NAVY IN ONE DAY

Charleston, S. C., Aug. 8 [Special].—Two destroyers were launched today at the Charleston navy yard, 91 days after the laying of their keels, a new record for speed. The previous record was 175 days, established six weeks ago when the destroyers Bell and Stevens slid down the ways.

The new ships are named for Ralph Izard, U. S. N., of Charleston, and Capt. Otway Burns of Queens Creek, N. C. The launchings brought the total in Charleston to six in six weeks.

BATTLE PLANNED AS A SURPRISE, CURTIN REVEALS

Details of Pacific Fight Told in Communique.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Aug 9—[Sunday]—(AP).—Prime Minister John Curtin declared today that the Washington communique disclosing new operations by allied land and air forces in the Solomon Islands represented "the consummation of a series of preparations on the part of the united nations, including Australia, which had been proceeding for some weeks."

"The state of war is such," Curtin declared, "that it is impossible to surprise the enemy and simultaneously indicate to the people at large the steps which are proceeding.

"In short, we cannot surprise the enemy unless we subject ourselves to surprise."

Curtin said that the commonwealth war council knew in advance of the operation, "which is definitely offensive in conception and reveals the determination of the commands in this theater to wage a fighting war at the maximum of their resources at such times and places as sound generalship would indicate."

Hopes for Success.

"I can only express the hope," Curtin added, "that plans so carefully prepared—and, I have no doubt, being so gallantly executed—will be successful."

A communique issued from Gen. MacArthur's headquarters today said:

"Our naval forces are participating in an attack on the southwest Solomons. Our air forces are coöperating."

The communique said there had been "a prolonged and harassing raid at night" on the airdrome and harbor of Lae, a strong Japanese base on New Guinea, and that the attack had been continued by daylight by two flights of medium heavy bombers which dropped one ton bombs.

"An antiaircraft position received a direct hit and other bombs landed on aircraft in the parking areas," the communique said.

Action at Kokoda.

A strong force of allied fighters "bombed and strafed enemy installations, starting fires and silencing machine gun nests" in the Buna-Kokoda area of New Guinea where the Japanese recently landed to threaten the allied base at Port Moresby.

Three other heavy raids were made on Salamaua, New Guinea, all bombs dropping in the target area, the communique said.

"A beached cargo ship received a direct hit and was left burning, antiaircraft positions were silenced, the airdrome runway hit and many fires started," the communique continued.

No mention was made of any allied losses.

Attack from Jungle.

A previous communique disclosed that on the New Guinea land front, where Japanese forces in the Buna-gona area are within 60 miles of the allied base of Port Moresby, an Australian force had struggled thru waist deep jungle mud to reach the north coast of New Guinea and score hits on a Japanese strong point with 38 out of 40 mortar shots. The Australians then made their escape by breaking thru the thick jungle growths on a 1,500 foot mountain as the Japanese called up seaplanes to machine gun them and brought a 6 inch gun to shell them.

[The Berlin radio quoted Japanese imperial headquarters as saying there were 300,000 allied trops now in Australia with 500 planes, plus 75,000 soldiers and 250 planes in New Zealand.]

47 MAN NATIVE 'ARMY' SWORE TO FIGHT FOR ATTU

But Brave Little Band Is Unheard From.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 8 (AP).—Don Pickard and his wife, Ginger, former boat operators between Dutch Harbor and Attu, are wondering what happened to their friend, C. Foster Jones, and his 47 man native "army" on Attu when the Japs invaded that Aleutian Islands outpost.

Pickard said Jones, island caretaker and operator of its radio station, drilled the men among the natives as a little military force during the Pickards' last visit to the island in April.

Jones had a rifle and a shotgun in his radio station. He told the Pickards he and his army were going to fight it out if the Japs landed.

"He showed me how he could ruin the whole radio so it would be useless to the Japs," Pickard said. "If they landed he was going to destroy the stores of aviation gasoline and diesel oil. He had a lot of courage, but I hope that, when he saw it was hopeless, he didn't fight. If he did, he's probably dead."

Only Whites on Island.

Mrs. Pickard hopes the Japanese landed somewhere else on the island and came to the village by surprise.

"If they came at night to the Jones' door they wouldn't know who it was and probably would let them in," she speculated hopefully.

Jones and his wife, Etta, the school teacher, were the only whites on the island. The Pickards could have evacuated the whole population from the island in April but had no orders to do so, they said. A navy vessel later tried to get in to pick up the populace but was held off by storms.

Evacuated, Says Message.

St. Paris, O., Aug. 8 (AP).—Old timers in this village figure that if there was a chance for Mr. and Mrs. C. Foster Jones to evacuate Attu before the Japanese invasion, "Chalkey" Jones made the most of it.

Letters arrived here monthly from them until May. Then relatives here heard that on June 13 an amateur radio operator in Atlantic City picked up a short-wave broadcast saying, "Mr. and Mrs. C. Foster Jones of Ohio and some natives have left Attu —whereabouts unknown."

Relatives express the belief Jones himself might have sent the message.

As a youth of 18, Jones left St. Paris to attend a Methodist school in Tacoma, Wash. Then he got caught in the gold rush fever and went to Alaska as a prospector. There he met his wife, a native of New Jersey, and later joined the government service.

THIEVES TAKE SPORTS EQUIPMENT.

ASK PARLIAMENT TO EXTEND LIFE ANOTHER YEAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 8.—When parliament reassembles, it will be asked to extend its own life for another year, it was learned tonight. This step follows Prime Minister Winston Churchill's decision that there should be no general election in wartime except in an extreme political crisis. It was reported that before the members of parliament left on their holiday this week, Churchill and the party leaders met to consider whether it would be advisable to ask for a fresh mandate from the electors, but they thought the difficulties too great.

REPORT MEXICO PLANS DRAFT TO TRAIN ITS YOUTH

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, Aug. 8 (AP). —The newspaper Excelsior quoted President Avila Camacho today as saying the government would inaugurate next week a program of compulsory training for Mexican youths 15 to 20 years old. The president was said to have advised a group of senators that the program provided for a one year training period in special schools, upon completion of which students would be subject to call for active duty.

Yanks in Australia Won't Be Sending Lingerie Home

MELBOURNE, Australia, Aug. 8 (AP).—American women who know soldiers serving "down under" will get less lingerie but more books as presents. The reason is that soldiers get no ration coupons for lingerie, of which they formerly bought great quantities to send home as gifts. Bookshops, however, are experiencing a rush for anything about Australia from kangaroos to race horses.

U.S. FLYERS BOMB ANOTHER JAP AIR BASE IN CHINA

Shoot Down 2 Planes; Hit Docks Near Canton.

CHUNGKING, China, Aug. 8 (AP).—American planes inflicted extensive damage on White Cloud airdrome, docks, and harbor buildings and destroyed several Japanese planes in a raid on Japanese held Canton this morning, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced. It was the second raid on airfields near Canton. The Tienho airdrome was bombed on Thursday.

The fighter escorted bombers were challenged by at least nine Japanese fighters, but only after they already had dropped their bombs, said the communique. Two enemy planes were reported shot down and others destroyed aground.

[The Japanese claimed five American bombers were driven away from the Canton airport and that two were shot down over Samshui, 30 miles to the west.]

Praise U. S. Flyers.

The Chinese paper Ta Kung Pao paid this tribute to the American flyers, known as "the sky dragons":

"They are sowing the seeds of hope in the people in occupied areas. They provided a stimulus for Chinese soldiers at the front and heightened the morale of our people behind the firing line.

"The American government and people can well recognize the fact that the United States army air forces in China represent the maximum gain for the smallest price."

Chinese Stop Japs.

The Chinese high command said its forces were continuing to besiege Linchwan [Fuchow] in their comeback campaign in Kiangsi province and were mopping up about Huwan, 12 miles to the southeast.

From Kwangfeng, a station on the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway near the Chekiang border, the Japanese launched a three column drive three days ago, the communique said, but these thrusts made no headway. Ineffective Japanese attacks in central Kiangsi also were reported.

Make Synthetic Rubber, Demand in Parliament

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Several members of parliament today presented a motion calling on the house of commons to give its fullest support to the production of synthetic rubber in Britain. They contend that American production is inadequate and that fairly large quantities should be made in this country.

JAPS KNOW ALL ABOUT PRIBILOFS, SAYS CHICAGOAN

Photos Include Work for Museum Here.

One Chicagoan who isn't surprised at the published reports that Japanese armed forces are encamped in the Pribilof islands is C. J. Albrecht, big game hunter and staff taxidermist at the Field museum.

Albrecht, an authority on the islands, says he ran into inquisitive Japs on his visits to the Pribilofs in 1913 and 1937. He had gone there to study the seal herds whose skins annually find their way into the coats of American women.

"The Japs certainly knew all about the Pribilofs," he says. "When I was there in 1937, a Jap training ship visited the islands and all the cadets came ashore armed with cameras. They made photographs even of my work in preparing museum specimens.

Children Run to Mothers.

The Pribilof island children ran crying to their mothers because they remembered that only a few years before a Jap poaching vessel was intercepted and one of the islanders shot three Japs.

"Then, just a short time before the bombing of Dutch Harbor the agent of the Pribilofs, a man named McMillan, visited me. When I asked him if the islanders were armed he said 'No, and they do not intend to resist if attacked.'"

Japs Use Fog.

At that time the Fouke Fur company of St. Louis, which every year processes the skins of some of the 2 million seals at the islands, had not decided whether to return there, Albrecht says.

The taxidermist relates that on his first trip to the Pribilofs in 1913 he discovered the Japs were poaching for seals, sailing in under cover of fog and saying they were lost whenever apprehended. He also saw a number of interned Jap vessels.

"The islands are hard to approach," he says. "Storms come up within 15 minutes. Ships have waited as much as 17 days before being able to land. Fog is constant in summer. I saw only one sunset in 54 days. The villages on St. Paul and St. George islands are all native with whites as agent, school teacher, bookkeeper, machinist, physician, and hospital attendant."

NEGROES OF CHICAGO PLEDGE TO WIN WAR; RALLY HONORS WRITER

Chicago's Negroes pledged their determination to win the war at a rousing patriotic rally in Washington park yesterday. Herman E. Moore, Negro United States District court judge in the Virgin Islands, told the crowd, "America is our country, the only one we have ever had, the one we are ready to fight and die for."

The rally was sponsored by The Chicago Defender and the south central division of the Office of Civilian Defense. The gathering was held on Bud Billiken day, a day named in honor of David Kallum, editor of the Defender's page for children. He uses the pen name of Bud Billiken. In past years the day has been one of celebration for children.

WAVES TO TRAIN AS NAVY MEN BUT GET NO SEA DUTY

They'll Miss Gold Braid Because of Expense.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8—The navy's new women's reserve corps—the Waves—will learn to drill, salute, wear the regular insignia of the service, including gold buttons and stripes, and they will receive the same detailed instructions in navy customs and specialized branches ordinarily given to boots and midshipmen.

They will not, however, have to learn to sling a hammock or swim, unless for recreation; nor will they be expected to acquire sealegs and undergo the rigors of mealtime out on the billowing deep.

No Sea Duty for Girls.

The reason: Congress agreed to have a co-ed navy to release men from desk duty for fighting service, but it was specified that none of the female members can be assigned outside the continental limits of the United States. Thus the women will be actual members of the navy, as distinguished from the auxiliary status of the army's Waacs, but they will have no reason to get closer to the sea than a Sunday afternoon picnic on the beach.

These and other details were disclosed today as the department prepared to assuage the curiosity of the nation's womenfolk with the first public showing of the Waves' uniforms scheduled to take place in a few days.

Dr. Mildred McAfee, 42 year old president of Wellesley college, who recently hung up her cap and gown for the duration and was sworn in as a lieutenant commander to head the "women appointed for volunteer emergency service," has revealed some of the things that are in store for the Waves. They will be the first women in the navy since some 10,000 yeomenettes were mustered out of service after the last war.

Wisconsin U. to Take Part.

Meanwhile the navy announced that enlisted personnel will be trained as radio operators at the University of Wisconsin and as yeomen at the University of Indiana.

The Waves will wear blue now and for winter and white next summer. The two piece navy blue suit will consist of a jacket with one breast pocket and a flared skirt with two pockets. There will be no gold braid, it was explained, because "that's expensive now." White shirts will be worn for dress.

Officers' rank and ratings of enlisted personnel will be shown by bands of "reserve blue," lighter in shade than the uniform cloth. The Wave insignia is a propeller intertwined with an anchor, to be worn on the lapel. Each member may choose her own type of black walking shoes and slightly higher heels will be permissible for evenings. Stockings will be lisle and may be dark blue or black.

Hats Are Modified Homburgs.

The hats have been described as a modified version of men's homburgs with a narrow rolled brim and high crown, adapted from seamen's headgear of the 18th and 19th centuries. A regulation pocketbook slung over the shoulder on a strap will complete the outfit. Underclothes and girdles will be left to the preference of the individual.

All members will receive clothing allowances for purchase of their uniforms. For officers $250 has been allotted, while $200 is regarded as sufficient for enlisted personnel.

Makeup will be permitted, with the amount left to individual taste, Lieut. Comm. McAfee has ruled. The Waves also will be permitted to smoke, altho not on the street, and drink when off duty if they like. Nothing has been said about dates, but presumably the usual navy customs will be followed, with officer Waves seeing only commissioned males and enlisted Waves restricting themselves to enlisted men. There is no ban against Waves marrying except during the actual period of training.

Commissioned grades will range from ensign to lieutenant commander and there will be openings in all the enlisted grades from apprentice seamen to chief petty officer. The pay and subsistence allowances will be the same as for the males. The pay scale ranges from $50 to $138 per month for noncommissioned grades and starts at $1,500 per year for ensigns in the commissioned ranks.

Officers in Technical Work.

The officer Waves will be given highly specialized tasks or technical work in such fields as communications, aviation, engineering and office administration where men now performing these duties are needed on the battle lines. Those with a knowledge of languages and a leaning toward cryptography will be employed for decoding messages and other functions of naval intelligence. Those with engineering training or mechanical skill probably will find their way into radio branches or the aviation service as maintenance supervisors or aiding in design work.

As many of the male ensigns who are to be relieved of shore duty have lately been promoted to higher ranks, it is probable that when the Waves take their places women ensigns will be replacing superior officers. But the Waves are to have the same opportunity as their predecessors to win promotion at desk jobs, according to the navy.

Enlistees to Win Ratings.

Enlisted Waves will be assigned to clerical and secretarial work and other routine office tasks. Altho filling jobs of less responsibility than those of officers, they will also be received into the technical fields where they can win such ratings as radioman, 1st or 2d class, or be assigned to aircraft maintenance work at shore stations and other mechanical work usually done by enlisted navy men.

Because they will not get aboard ship, it was explained, there will be no necessity for them to learn such ordinary functions of sailors as signaling with flags and tying knots or swimming and life saving.

A total of 1,000 women officers and 10,000 enlisted personnel are to be trained for the Waves at the outset of the program, according to the navy's plans. This number will be increased as the first groups are graduated from the training centers.

First School in October.

The first officers' school, to train 900, will open early in October at Smith college, Northampton, Mass. Applications for appointment as officer candidates at the first session are now being received at the various naval districts.

The applications for enlisted personnel will not be received for some time. They will be given their training at some midwestern women's college, yet to be selected, beginning about Nov. 1.

More than twice as many officer applicants as allowed under the district quotas will be summoned before the district selection boards for personal interviews, physical examinations, and mental and verbal aptitude tests. A number of these will be selected and sent to the navy department headquarters in the capital for final selection.

Those who are not selected may leave their papers on file for the next batch of officers or shift them to an enlisted application for noncommissioned rank.

Must Write for Applications.

Navy spokesmen emphasized that the candidates must file a written request by mail to their home naval districts for a preliminary application blank, stating their age and educational background. After this has been filled out and returned appointments will be made for appearances before the selection boards. The boards will be headed by the procurement director of the district and will include one woman member.

Unlike their brothers in the navy, there is no maximum size provided for the candidates, except that the high command, with a ready eye for appearances, has ruled that height and weight must be in "proportion." The size of regular navy officers is necessarily limited by the dimensions of living quarters aboard ship.

But the women, who will be assigned entirely to shore stations using normal sized rooms and sleeping in bunks or cots, must be at least 60 inches tall and cannot weigh less than 95 pounds. All candidates must be between the ages of 21 and 50 and they are barred if they have children under 18 years. They must be United States citizens and of "good repute" in their community.

Officers College Graduates.

Appointments as officers, it was explained, will be based entirely on administrative ability and experience or technical training and skill. The candidates must possess a college degree and have in addition two years of professional or business experience. The navy has a long list of the types of training and skills it needs to fill important desk jobs now being held by regular commissioned officers.

Especially desired are those who, while working toward a baccalaureate degree, have majored in, or taken as their second major, such subjects as accounting, aeronautical engineering, astronomy, business statistics, civil engineering, electrical engineering, electronics, mathematics, mechanical engineering, metallurgy, meteorology, modern foreign languages, physics, and radio engineering.

Also considered as desirable are those who majored in, or took as their second major, architecture, business administration, chemical engineering, chemistry, commerce, economics, English, finance, geography, geology, government and political science, history, industrial engineering, journalism, library science, minerology, psychology, and transportation.

Other Abilities Needed.

The "help wanted" sign has been hung out, too, for women who are otherwise qualified and who have had experience as supervisors of cable, telegraph, telephone, and radio commercial offices; maintenance women and operators of teletype, simplex, and multiplex transmitting machines; licensed radio operators, ultra high frequency engineers, lexicographers, amateur cryptanalysts, instructors of touch typing and typewriter maintenance, statisticians, instructors in use of file systems, demonstrators and operators of business machines such as sorting, punch card machines, etc.; junior executives, superintendents, supervisors, section leaders, personnel supervisors, etc., of banks, finance companies, brokerage offices, large retail establishments and printing establishments; bookkeepers and accountants, executives of circulation and linotype departments of newspapers, librarians.

Except for those with sufficient education and experience to assume navy posts after brief indoctrination, the officers' training period will last four months. About 300 of the first officer class at Smith, from 21 to 50 years old, will be in the experienced category, it was announced, and will be given probationary commissions upon entering the service. After six weeks of training they will be assigned to active duty with full commissions.

Others Trained Four Months.

Another group of 500, 21 to 30 years old, will be received into the service as apprentice seamen and after a month will be advanced to midshipmen. Upon completion of the full four months' course they will be commisisoned ensigns. The balance of the first group at Smith will receive instruction fitting them for posts as teachers at the enlisted school and to replace male officers on the officer school faculty.

Capt. Herbert W. Underwood, a veteran of 33 years in the navy and holder of numerous decorations, who commanded a destroyer on submarine patrol in the last war, has been named commandant of the officer school. Until the new women officers, designated as future instructors, have had their training, he will be assisted by a staff of about 45 male officers.

Only One Lieutenant Commander.

Lieut. Comm. McAfee will be the only one of her sex holding a rank that high, it was explained. Under her there will be 34 lieutenants and an indeterminate number of lieutenants junior grade and ensigns. The only ones holding commissions who will not be trained first at Smith will be the women members sitting on the selection boards, who are already being chosen, and five or six assistants to the Waves commander.

As regular members of the navy, the Waves will be subject to exactly the same customs and discipline imposed on the men. While they are not permitted to "exert authority" over the men, they will be accorded all the courtesies due officers, it was said, including the salute. They are not subject to the command of navy nurses because the nurses are an auxiliary group not actually in the navy as are the Waves. It is expected, however, that each will return the other's salute and exchange the usual courtesies in their various dealings, a navy spokesman said.

Another Performance

A neighborhood vaudeville show was given yesterday afternoon at 915 Margate terrace to benefit the Chicago Tribune Charities Ice Fund. Members of the cast were the neighborhood children, ranging in age from 6 to 12 years. Jacqueline Ross, 901 Margate terrace, produced and directed the show. The children will present a second performance tomorrow afternoon at the same address. The audience included parents, relatives, and friends of the actors. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE invites contributions to the fund. They should be sent to Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., Tribune Tower, Chicago. All contributions will be gratefully acknowledged in these columns.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—The war department said today that an unnamed member of congress had scotched a report that American soldiers in Northern Ireland were less well treated last Christmas than British troops.

"This report is typical of rumors fostered by axis sympathizers and spread by unthinking Americans," the department said.

The congressman reported a woman constituent asked why the Americans received only a single lead pencil and one pack of cigarets from their government, whereas the British received a pen and pencil set and three packs of smokes. The reply was this: The first American contingent did not arrive in Northern Ireland until late January.

PLANE-GROUND TEAMWORK IS MANEUVER AIM

Stress Precision Goal in Carolina Exercises.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Wadesboro, N. C., Aug. 8.—One of the main objectives of the maneuvers being held here in a sandy section of North Carolina is the development of machine precision in the teamwork between ground and air forces in battle.

Maj. Gen. E. J. Dawley, 6th army corps commander, who is in charge of the maneuvers, which reached the end of their second phase yesterday, has been stressing the necessity of coördination to all participating troops. The rôle of aviation in operations is being explained to the ground forces.

Utilize Dive Bombers.

Because it works directly with ground forces in continuous operations, the ground-air support command is unlike other elements of the air force, such as the bomber and interceptor commands. When support aviation units are assigned to a ground force, centralized control is established for closer coöperation. As need arises, the air support commander assigns attack units, usually dive bombers.

Combat aviation may come to the aid of ground forces before contact with the enemy or during actual battle. It may also undertake more distant missions such as preventing or delaying the entrance of enemy troops into conflict.

Some of the missions for which support aviation may be profitably employed include attack on defensive organizations and field fortifications in the path of supported ground forces, attack on enemy reserves, attack on enemy mechanized forces, attack on hostile aviation missions, attack on enemy aircraft on the ground, and reconnaissance bombardment.

Ground Commander Rules.

Whether to use support aviation for a particular ground operation rests with the commander of the ground forces, who must take into consideration such factors as the number of planes available in a state of readiness, the supply of proper type of ammunition and weather conditions and time limits.

One of the lessons of the maneuvers has been the importance of practice in developing coördination. This has been compared to teamwork on a winning football team, which is attained only after hard work and much practice. Training maneuvers are designed to turn out an efficient war team.

WIFE OF NAVY'S 'CHAMPION DAD' GIVES LAST MAN

Mrs. Laura Lukey, 7313 Stewart avenue, walked into the naval recruiting offices in the United States courthouse yesterday with her brother, Sam Houston, 40 years old, of Hammond, and said: "Well, here's the last of the available man power in my family."

Mrs. Lukey already has four sons, Jack, 26; Loren Jr., 23; Joseph, 21, and Herbert, 19, in the navy. Houston is Mrs. Lukey's last male relative with the exception of her husband, Loren Sr., who was named "Navy's Champion Father" by the State Street council during the navy's drive for 10,000 recruits last June.

BRITISH ROUND UP GANDHI AND AIDS TO FOIL REVOLT

Act After Congress Votes Passive Revolt.

Britain's own previous offers of postwar independence have been rejected by the Congress party and the other leading factions of India.

More than 250 of the 360 members of the Congress party's committee were present at the voting here yesterday in a canvas pavilion before about 8,000 perspiring onlookers. Only 13 voted against adoption of a resolution which Gandhi already has said would launch an independence drive dimming all others.

Under the resolution Gandhi is in full control of the campaign, but there was no indication of when he intends to start it.

Appeals to America.

In his address, he called on all Indians to "begin to feel that they are free men," asked all Indian papers to stop publication until independence was granted, and told teachers and students to be ready to cease work.

He urged Indian princes to "act as trustees for their people" and stop being autocrats. He already has said his campaign this time would include the princes' states, as well as the areas known as "British India."

Earlier yesterday, before the civil disobedience resolution was taken up, Gandhi announced he was appealing to the United States, in a letter "to American friends," to act "while there is yet time" to bring about independence and ally the Indians whole-heartedly with the allied cause.

He predicted a repetition of the disasters of Malaya, Singapore, and Burma "unless Britain trusts the people of India to use their liberty in favor of the allied cause."

He said the United States, having made common cause with Great Britain, "cannot, therefore, disown responsibility for anything that her representatives do in India."

This same theme appeared in an address by Pandit Jivan Lal, from a rural district near Allahabad.

"We are told," said Lal, "that American troops are here as our guests and we are asked to be nice to them. Certainly in reply to [Sir Stafford] Cripps' appeal to America we should like to be told on behalf of President Roosevelt and the American people what rôle these troops are going to play—our guests or our hangmen."

In a concluding speech, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, the No. 2 man of the nationalist movement, said the "Quit India" resolution was not a threat but an "offer of coöperation."

However, he warned that "behind it is the certainty that consequences will follow if certain events do not happen," adding:

"We are on the verge of a precipice and we are in deadly earnest about it. The very act of freeing India will make the allied cause a completely right cause. It is only negatively right just now because Germany is worse and Japan is worse.

"If Japan comes to this country, you and I will suffer—or die—not the people sitting in London, New York, or Washington.

Tells India's Subjection.

"They say we do not know what Japan is. We know what Japan is. We know what subjection is better than any people in the world. We have had 200 years of it. We prefer to throw ourselves into the fire and come out a new nation or be reduced to ashes."

The New Delhi government statement said that "acceptance of the resolution must mean the exposure of India to an axis attack from without.

"Internally, withdrawal of British rules invites civil war, the collapse of law and order, the outbreak of communal feuds, and the dislocation of economic life. . . ."

It accused the Congress leaders of having worked "in the interests of securing their own dominance and in pursuit of a totalitarian policy" and added that they "consistently impeded the efforts made to bring India to full nationhood."

"It is not too much to say that acceptance of the demand . . . must mean the betrayal of the allies, whether in or outside India, the betrayal in particular of Russia and China,"

NAVY CROSS AWARDED EIGHT HEROES OF THE MARBLEHEAD BOMBING

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Two officers and six petty officers received navy crosses today for courageous deeds following the Feb. 10 attack on the United States cruiser Marblehead in the Java sea. The Marblehead, severely bombed, reached an east coast port some weeks ago after a hazardous 11,000 mile voyage from the far east.

Lieut. Harvey M. Andersen.

The crosses were presented by Rear Adm. Edward J. Marquart, commandant of the third naval district, to the following:

Lieut. Comm. Martin J. Drury, 40, Jamestown, R. I.; Lieut. Harvey M. Andersen, 41, Chicago; Warrant Officer Herman E. Hook, 31, Long Beach Cal.; Hale T. McCulley, 35, chief shipfitter, St. Louis, Mo.; Martin Moran, 26, metalsmith, Manchester, N. H.; Dale L. Johnson, machinists' mate, Thief River Falls, Minn.; Lester J. Barre, 28, quartermaster, Orange, Tex., and Frederic H. Ritter, chief electrician's mate, Normal, Ia.

Rip Foe in Mediterranean, on N. African Front.

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 8 (AP).—The United States air forces of the middle east sank a 10,000 ton enemy transport and damaged other ships in attacks on two convoys in the Mediterranean in the last week, it was announced today, and in close coöperation with the RAF smashed harbor and repair shops behind the El Alamein front.

In one convoy attacked in daylight, two direct hits and numerous near misses were reported among three large axis transports under escort of eight destroyers.

Units of the same attack force of B24 Consolidated bombers pounded the axis installations and encampments at Tobruk in the evening of the same day, said the fourth weekly summary of operations issued from the headquarters of Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton.

RAF Hits Big Vessel.

In connection with a raid on Tobruk, presumably the one mentioned by Brereton's communique, the RAF reported additional details of operations carried out Thursday evening showed RAF heavy bombers scored a direct hit on a 10,000 ton enemy merchantman in the harbor. The American B24s dropped several tons of bombs and started one large fire in the docks.

Before the Tobruk attack, Brereton announced, two successful raids were made by American airmen on an axis motor repair depot and other targets at Matruh.

The RAF sank two axis ships and damaged others off Sidi Barrani, the British announced in a communique.

Down 13 Planes, Say Nazis.

BERLIN, Aug. 8 [from German broadcasts] — (AP). — German fighters shot down 13 British planes in air combats in North Africa yesterday, the German communique said today.

GIVE MAHOGANY TO WAR EFFORT, LAMB SUGGESTS

Stockpile Dwindling, Needs of Armed Forces Increasing, Industry Told

Manufacturers who have stocks of mahogany lumber on hand should offer their stockpiles to the war effort, said George Lamb, secretary of the Mahogany Association, who has just returned from Washington with the news that the nation's stockpile of mahogany is dwindling rapidly, and that the war need is increasing.

"During June the stocks of mahogany in the country virtually evaporated," he said, "and stocks are now very low. Some furniture manufacturers have only a month or so of the wood on hand ... though are all ...

LONE SEAMAN ON HATCH COVER IS SIGHTED, SAVED

Spotted by Plane After Sub Sinks Ship.

BULLETIN.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Aug. 9 [Sunday]—(AP).—Uruguay today sent Germany a protest over the sinking by a submarine of the Uruguayan freighter Maldonado, while anti-Nazi demonstrations in the capital led to three arrests. The protest was filed with the Swiss embassy for delivery to Berlin.

AN EAST COAST PORT, Aug. 8.—Spotted by a patrol plane, a seaman floating alone for two days on a hatch cover was rescued by his mates after their ship had been torpedoed and sunk, the navy said today.

The ship, a medium size United States vessel, was attacked by an enemy submarine in mid-July, several hundred miles off the Atlantic coast of South America. Thirty-nine members of the crew were rescued.

The sinking brought to 419 the Associated Press total of ships lost in the western Atlantic since Dec. 7. Since then 2,346 persons have lost their lives in the attacks, 1,630 are missing, and 12,858 have been reported rescued.

Survivors reaching here said C. D. McMaster, an oiler, was blown overboard by the explosion. When the plane sighted him it flew to nearby lifeboats, dropped a message giving directions and in two hours he was aboard one of the lifeboats.

The 39 survivors sailed six days thru squalls and heavy rainstorms until a united nations merchant vessel rescued them.

Reports U-Boat Sunk.

FORTALEZA, Brazil, Aug. 8 (AP).—The newspaper Correio do Ceara published a statement of a sailor of a Dutch ship today who said he had witnessed the destruction of a submarine while his vessel was sailing between Philadelphia and Cuba. The sailor, Antonia Anselmo, said the submarine appeared among vessels in a convoy. A destroyer, he asserted, scored a direct hit on the prow of the U-boat, blowing it to bits.

22 More Survivors Land.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Aug. 8 (AP).—Port authorities today said they had received word from a North American eastern seaport that 22 additional survivors of the torpedoed Uruguayan merchant ship Maldonado had been rescued from two lifeboats.

Thirteen survivors from one lifeboat were landed yesterday in Hamilton, Bermuda. A fourth boat, believed to contain 14 persons, still is missing.

The 5,263 ton vessel was sunk by a submarine which made a prisoner of the ship's captain, Mario Giambruno, brother of Cyro Giambruno, Uruguayan minister of education.

Boasts of 10 Days' Foray.

LONDON, Aug. 8 (AP).—A Berlin broadcast recorded by the Evening Standard here today said a German submarine commander, who claimed to have sunk 21,000 tons of shipping in 10 days in a "happy hunting ground" at the mouth of the St. Lawrence river, was helped in finding his hearings by lights on shore.

"And as we left to return to Germany, we watched a strong American coastal patrol and anti-submarine force carrying out trials and maneuvers with all their searchlights on full, turning night into day," the broadcast quoted the commander. "We watched and made notes on American anti-submarine tactics."

The commander said his operations stopped traffic in the river and that at one time "we stopped our engines only about three miles from the nearest bank. We could see on land the blazing headlamps of motor cars speeding along the coastal road. . . . From one big building, evidently some place of amusement, we could hear dance music."

Candidates for Irish Queen Title

Applause to Decide

Popular applause will decide the selection of the queen of the Irish Day celebration next Saturday at Harms park, 4207 North Western avenue. Candidates have been named by leading Irish societies. The celebration will be part of "Irish Day in Chicago." Bishop Bernard J. Sheil will be honorary chairman. The principal speaker will be Joseph E. Kerrigan of Lawrence, Mass., president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America. John J. Hurley will be the general chairman.

KAISER'S YARDS LEAD FIELD ON LIBERTY SHIPS

Build Most Vessels, Most Per Way.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—West coast shipyards operated by the Henry J. Kaiser interests set the pace on emergency cargo ship production up to Aug. 1, the maritime commission announced today.

The commission's report on Liberty ships showed Kaiser's Oregon Shipbuilding corporation yard at Portland, Ore., had built the most ships, the most ships per way, and a ship in the shortest average time.

The corporation had delivered 54 Liberty ships from 11 ways, an average of 4.909 ships per way with an average construction time of 108 days, the report said.

Another Kaiser Yard 2d.

Richmond shipyard No. 1 and 2, Richmond, Cal., also under Kaiser management, had an average production time of 113 days for second place.

Third place for average production time went to Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard, Inc., Baltimore, Md., with 139 days. Average production time for other shipyards was as follows:

California Shipbuilding corporation, Wilmington, Cal., 142 days; North Carolina Shipbuilding corporation, Wilmington, N. C., 170; South Portland Shipbuilding company and Todd-Bath yard, South Portland, Me., 208 days; Delta Shipbuilding corporation, New Orleans, La., 228 days; Alabama Shipbuilding and Drydock company, Mobile, Ala., 241 days, and Houston Shipbuilding corporation, Houston, Tex., 276 days.

West Coast Firm Ranks High.

The California Shipbuilding corporation ranked second in the number of ships produced per way—3.214.

Oregon Shipbuilding was credited with the fastest construction of a Liberty ship—46 days from keel laying to delivery. Bethlehem-Fairfield followed with 59 days. The best time for some of the other yards was as follows:

California Shipbuilding, 65 days; Richmond Shipyard No. 1 and 2, 67 days; North Carolina Shipbuilding, 72 days; South Portland Shipbuilding company and Todd-Bath company, 98 days; Alabama Shipbuilding and Drydock, 160 days; Delta Shipbuilding, 191 days, and Houston Shipbuilding company, 204 days.

One British Ship Sunk, 9 Hit in Channel Fight: Nazis

BERLIN, Aug. 8 [from German broadcasts]—(AP).—A series of motor boat and mine sweeper battles in the English channel Thursday night at such close range that hand grenades were used was reported today by the German high command. The Germans said one British boat was sunk, two were so heavily damaged they were considered lost, six others were damaged, and one was set on fire. No German losses were listed in the account of the running fights, precipitated when several British torpedo boat flotillas attacked a German convoy escorted by mine sweepers.

FRAUD CHARGED IN BIDS ON CRAMP SHIPYARD REPAIR

Complaints Cite Supply Firms and Contractor.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—The federal trade commission today announced that it had issued nine complaints charging collusion and fraudulent bidding on navy department contracts for materials used in rehabilitating the Cramp shipyards at Philadelphia.

The complaints are against sellers of electrical supplies, mill work, lumber, other building materials, and machinery. Most of the firms have offices in Philadelphia. Twenty days are allowed for response to allegations.

If the commission finds the charges substantiated, it may issue a "cease and desist" order against continuance of the practices. Violation of the order would take the case into federal court, with the possibility of a fine up to $5,000.

Central figure in the allegations is Charles F. Rohleder of Philadelphia, who is named in each complaint. The Cramp Shipbuilding company contracted with Rohleder to do the construction work on a cost plus fixed fee basis, with the stipulation that materials and services would be purchased thru competitive bids.

Others named respondents:

Westinghouse Electric Supply company, with headquarters in New York and a branch office in Philadelphia, and its agent, R. R. Dewees; alleged to have submitted sham, false, fictitious and fraudulent bids to prospective purchasers.

Grater-Bodey company, Norristown, Pa., and its president, S. W. Roberts; alleged to have prepared fictitious bids on the stationery of competing lumber firms.

Two "Fake" Bids Listed.

J. P. Rainey, Philadelphia, trading as J. P. Rainey and company; alleged to have submitted two fictitious bids higher than one of $29,280.12 for electrical wire and cable prepared as agent of Rohleder.

James A. Clancy, M. A. Webster, and Joseph Duffy, trading as J. R. Duffy Manufacturing company; alleged to have carried out a false appearance of competition in bids on metal partitions and doors.

Walter H. Cave, agent of the Philadelphia branch of the American Steel and Wire company of New Jersey and Cyclone Fence company; alleged to have obtained false and noncompetitive bids for wire and other steel products from A. F. Crawford, who acted for himself and as an agent of Paul W. Crawford.

P. J. McBride and George B. McClennen, Philadelphia, trading as Delta Equipment company; alleged to have obtained stationery of competitors for use in preparing false bids for machinery.

Letterheads Involved.

Russell Keely and F. Oliver Keely, Manayunk, Pa., trading as S. S. Keely & Sons; alleged to have delivered to S. W. Roberts letterheads for use in preparing false bids for lumber, with the result that Roberts' company received contracts as low bidder.

Frank L. O'Brien and Clarence J. O'Brien, trading as the O'Brien Machinery company; William J. Cattie, trading as Cattie Tool company, and W. B. Rapp, all of Philadelphia; alleged to have coöperated in the preparation and submission of fraudulent bids on machinery.

R. R. Dewees, agent for Westinghouse; alleged to have acted with the knowledge of Rohleder in obtaining stationery of Walker Brothers and the Adelphia Electric company from Anthony M. Callanan and Norman T. Leithold, officials of those companies.

Naval Funds Involved.

The commission said the bidding involved navy contracts. In 1940, as a part of its work in the national defense program, the navy department arranged for the Cramp Shipbuilding company to undertake the construction of naval vessels.

The navy agreed to arrange, the commission explained, for the advancement of funds necessary to rehabilitate the yard, with the understanding that the expenditure of all funds for the work would be under the general supervision and subject to the approval of the navy department.

U. S. WARSHIP, ESCORT VESSEL, 15 OTHER SHIPS SUNK, NAZIS CLAIM

BERLIN, Aug. 8 [from German broadcasts]—(AP).—The sinking of 17 allied ships, including a United States destroyer and another escort vessel, by submarines operating in the Atlantic was reported today by the German high command. [The period covered by the report was not stated, nor was it confirmed by any allied source.]

The other vessels were merchantmen, including a 10,000 ton steamer bound for Alexandria with tanks and planes, the communique said.

Seven of the merchantmen totaling 49,000 tons were reported sunk with an escort vessel in the North Atlantic in "a difficult attack." The rest of the ships, totaling 54,181 tons, were sunk in mid-Atlantic off American and West African coasts, it was said. Destruction of the destroyer was claimed in these operations.

SKILLED MECHANICS: A NEW OPPORTUNITY TO FIGHT with the tools you WORK with

U.S. ARMY
RECRUITING AND INDUCTION SERVICE

IF YOU can handle tools—if you have mechanical or technical experience—the U. S. Army needs you urgently and immediately.

We are fighting a mechanized war. The side with the best mechanics will win, and don't kid yourself that Hitler and his gang haven't got mechanical skill behind their war machines.

We've got the men to build planes, tanks, trucks and guns, and the men to fly and drive and fight them. It's going to take more than that. It's going to take your trained hands to keep them flying, rolling and firing.

Unless we win, no man's job will be worth a plugged nickel. We've got to win. We're going to win.

Think it over today. If you are between 18 and 45, talk it over tomorrow with the nearest Army Recruiting and Induction Station. Find out how to enlist in the branch of service where your skill will count most for your country.

You can now choose any of these 4 Army branches:

THE AIR FORCES need: Automobile mechanics • Radio operators and repairmen • Sheet metal workers • Welders • Service repairmen, etc.

THE SIGNAL CORPS needs: Radio operators and repairmen • Telephone and telegraph operators and installers • Cable splicers, etc.

YOUNG MEN OF 18 AND 19—You can now make your own choice of any combat branch of the Army for enlistment.

COMET ENERGY WILL LIGHT UP MUSIC FESTIVAL

Arrange Dazzling Display for Soldiers' Field.

Festival Tickets

Tickets for the 13th Chicago Music Festival, to be held next Saturday night in Soldiers' field, are on sale at 55 cents and $1.10 at THE TRIBUNE's public service offices in Tribune Tower and at 1 South Dearborn street. All seats are reserved. Mail orders should be sent to the Festival Ticket Manager, Tribune Tower. Checks should be made to Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

Celestial energy that streaked millions upon millions of miles thru the vaults of upper space to reach this earth will light up the great oval of Soldiers' field next Saturday night at the 13th Chicago Music Festival.

In effect, the dazzling white light will be supplied by the celebrated Biela comet, discovered in 1772, and by two meteorites that have plunged to earth from the limitless reaches of the universe.

The event harnessing this extraterrestial energy will be the spectacular closing number of the Festival Imperial Marimba orchestra, under direction of Clair Omar Musser. Internationally known as a conductor, composer, designer of musical instruments, and historian of the ancient marimba, Musser also has for many years been an active amateur astronomer. It was he who conceived this amazing festival climax.

Employed for First Time.

It will be the first time in history, astronomers believe, that the planetary power of the heavens will have been brought down to become a part of a manmade musical spectacle. But it is eminently fitting, they think. The poetic comment of Dr. Oliver J. Lee of Northwestern university was as follows:

There are no flaming monsters in the earth or heavens,
No process fine as thought or cataclysmic,
Or in mighty nature or the souls of men
Which music does not feel, portray, immortalize.

And just how is this history-making festival feat to be accomplished? In brief, the facts are these. Musser's hobby, paralleling his astronomical studies, is the collection of meteorites—the flaming fragments of planets and comets that collide with the earth. Some laymen know them as "shooting stars."

Fragment from Biela's Comet.

This is because friction with the earth's atmosphere as they plunge toward us like bombs at from 4 to 28 miles a second heats them to flaming incandescence. Musser's collection includes 88 rare specimens gathered from all parts of the world. Among his most famous items is a fragment from the explosion of Biela's comet in 1885, which fell near Cedros, Mexico.

For the festival event, Musser fused these three specimens' metallic elements—iron, iron oxide, silicon, nickel, copper, silver, phosphorus, hydrogen, carbon, magnesium oxide, and miscellaneous unidentified metals. By machining these were reduced to 160 small cubes.

Each of the cubes has been attached to an electric device which produces the same abrasive friction as the planetary metals encounter as they plunge to earth from outer space. The resulting manifestation is a shower of dazzling star dust that restores to the surfaces of the comet's fragments the same luminescent glare that marked their arrival on this globe.

One of these devices will be affixed to each of 160 massive marimbas that will be terraced 60 feet up in the north end of Soldiers' field in rows 75 feet long. The frictional discharges of star dust that will light up the marimba symphony orchestra and the vast field will be controled by a synchronous device which will function coördinately with Musser's baton. Thus, the flaring light will rise and die on the beat with the music.

A strange sidelight of the festival spectacle will be a competitive show at about the same time in the northeastern heavens. This will be a part of the annual fall of Perseid meteorites which reaches it height Tuesday and continues thru Saturday. They come from Tuttle's comet. A dozen or more may be counted in an hour.

The meteorites that will glare in Soldiers' field once were extraterrestial travelers with the Perseids.

The marimba presentation will be one of the most spectacular events in a night of great moments. It also will be one of the great musical moments. The mellow, resonant, and moving music of the 160 massive instruments is unforgettable.

Play "The Anvil Chorus."

Conducted by Musser, they will play Smetana's intricate and brilliant "Dance of the Comedians," Rosales' "Bolero," Saint-Saëns' "Concerto in G Sharp Minor," accompanied by the festival's winning pianist, and finally, "The Anvil Chorus," from Verdi's "Il Trovatore." It is the last number which will bring into play the luminescent meteorites—and that isn't all.

In addition to the individual star dust showers from each marimba, there will be a gigantic back setting of 10 of the largest anvils ever built, to be played by stalwarts wielding sledgehammers with 6 foot handles. The crash of the hammers will be accompanied by bursts of electric fire.

Words specially written by Musser to Verdi's music and titled, "On to Victory," will be sung by a male choir of 80 voices. The ring of the anvils and the stirring words will symbolize the nation's war effort.

East Moline, Ill., Aug. 8 [Special].—A novel adaptation of the match lighting ceremony familiar at THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's annual Chicago Music Festival will be tried at the fifth annual Mississippi Valley Music Festical at 7 p. m. tomorrow in Soule stadium here.

First, the audience of 5,000 will be asked to light matches on instructions from Philip Maxwell, THE TRIBUNE's festival director, who will be guest master of ceremonies.

Then he will ask only part of the audience to strike matches, spelling out in the darkness the words "Army" and "Navy."

The guest artist of the evening will be Alec Templeton star pianist of concert and radio.

Others from the Chicago festival staff on the program will be Carl Craven, community song leader, and Capt. Howard Stube, who will lead the massed bands.

AIR RADIO SCHOOL MEN WILL DINE IN FANCY SETTING

Civilians to Be Hired for Mess Work.

Students at the new Army Air Forces Technical school, now being set up in buildings formerly occupied by the Congress and Stevens hotels, not only will dine well in fancy settings. They are to be spared the unpopular assignment to "kitchen police."

Brig. Gen. Arnold N. Krogstad, commanding officer, announced he has been given authority to employ 1,317 civilians for mess work. As a result, students won't have to sidetrack their instruction for about a day a month to take over the job of potato peeling.

Civilians Start Tomorrow.

The Chicago school, the general said, will be the only army post, with the exception of West Point and Randolph field, in which civilians are employed in mess jobs. The civilian employés, the first of whom will go to work tomorrow, will be taken from the rolls of the civil service commission in the new post office building. No applications will be accepted at the hotels.

The mess positions to be filled and annual salaries follow: 8 kitchen foremen, $2,600; 37 assistant kitchen foremen, $2,300; 34 chief cooks, $2,000; 71 head cooks, $1,680; 82 cooks, $1,320; 85 mess attendants, $1,260, and 100 mess attendants, $1,020. All must pass rigid physical examinations. The students will wait tables themselves.

A number of civilian employés, including elevator boys, telephone operators, and maintenance men, already are working in the two buildings.

Eat in Boulevard Room.

More than 1,000 maintenance men and others preparing for opening of the school Sept. 7 eat their meals in the Stevens' colorful Boulevard room, where just a few weeks ago formally attired couples chatted and danced to swing bands.

The murals, vast mirrors, glittering chandeliers, and rich maroon drapes still are there. Further, each meal is accompanied by the classical organ melodies of Corp. Robert Shepfer of Defiance, O., a pianist who once played in Carnegie hall and now is assistant to the chaplain.

The food, too, is helping to give a more glamorous meaning to the word "mess." Col. Sheldon B. Edwards, general mess officer, has nothing to do with standard menus. Beans, in fact, are served just once a week. A sweet dessert is served each lunch and dinner, and soldiers may reach for as much as they like.

They'll Need Plenty of Food.

As the school moves into full swing, and if, for example, there are 18,000 men to be fed, Col. Edwards and his staff will have to provide 7,500 pounds of potatoes a day. They also will supply such a food layout as this: 5,200 pounds of beef, 100 cases of eggs, and 2,600 pounds of bacon a meal, and 1,280 pounds of butter, 3,800 loaves of bread, and 15,000 pints of milk a day.

'SMEAR TRIBUNE' ATTACK TO BRING SENATE DEBATE

Move to Be Assailed on Floor Tomorrow.

American victory off Midway Island. The navy's own communique stated that the Japanese forces came "far from surprising" the defenders of Midway. The Associated Press account of the victory said that the Japanese forces ran into an "American ambush." The word "ambush" was taken from an official naval communique on the battle. The correspondent of Knox's own newspaper, the Chicago Daily News, indicated that the navy had advance knowledge of the impending attack.

JURY TO ACT THIS WEEK

Attorney General Francis Biddle's grand jury investigation of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's publication on June 7 of Stanley Johnston's story of the battle of Midway probably will begin this week, possibly Wednesday, United States Attorney J. Albert Woll said yesterday.

Up to last night William D. Mitchell, former United States attorney general under President Hoover and now a New York lawyer, who was named by Biddle to conduct the inquiry, had not arrived in Chicago.

Woll said the investigation would be conducted by the regular July grand jury whose term expires Sept. 5 The jury is in recess until Wednesday.

He said the investigation would be limited to the Midway battle story, "but that if any evidence of other violations of law is presented, the grand jury will pursue the investigation to its conclusion."

He added that his statement meant other persons or newspapers as well as THE TRIBUNE.

NAME NEW CIVIL AIR PATROL HEAD; 2 JOIN SUB HUNT

Robert K. Belt, 39 years old, of Highland Park, a lawyer in civilian life, yesterday was appointed commander of the Illinois wing of the Civil Air patrol. He replaces James R. Graham, who headed the organization for two months before resigning to take a business post in New York. Confirmation of the appointment came from Maj. Earl L. Johnson, national director in Washington.

Meanwhile two north shore members of the CAP left yesterday for active duty on the submarine patrol over the Gulf of Mexico. They are Stewart Guess, desk sergeant of the Lake Forest police station and a civilian flyer for 15 years, and Frank Stone of Lake Forest.

NAVAL TRAINING CAMP IS NAMED FOR NEGRO HERO

The training camp for Negro sailors at the Great Lakes Naval Training station has been named Camp Robert Smalls, in honor of a colored naval hero of the civil war, it was announced yesterday in Washington, D. C.

Smalls was pressed into service as a pilot by the Confederates. On May 13, 1862, while piloting the Confederate transport Planter, he ran the vessel out of Charleston harbor, and turned her over to a Union squadron.

For this brave and dangerous service, he was appointed a pilot in the United States navy. After serving on the U. S. S. Keokuk, he was promoted to captain for gallant conduct, then placed in command of the Planter. He served with that ship until she was decommissioned in 1866.

MAYOR TO START CAMPAIGN FOR KEYS TOMORROW

The Chicago metropolitan area "Keys for Victory" drive will be opened at 10:45 a. m. tomorrow when Mayor Kelly tosses the key to the city into a victory barrel placed in the center of the city hall's main floor.

The drive's purpose is to collect useless keys and other non-ferrous metallic objects which may be used in the war effort. Skeets Gallagher, now appearing at the Blackstone theater in "Good Night, Ladies!" will be master of ceremonies.

Also taking part in the ceremony will be Silas H. Strawn, chairman of United China Relief; Wilbur J. Peak, president of the Junior Association of Commerce of Chicago, and Sergt. Maj. Edwin Fobes, a member of the "Flying Tigers" who recently returned to Chicago.

CALUMET CITY'S SATURDAY NIGHT QUIET; HEAT'S ON

Calumet City's great white way, along State street and Plummer avenue, last night experienced its quietest Saturday night in many a year. The reason was two-fold, the current grand jury investigation and the presence of 12 county highway policemen from the Homewood station under Acting Lieut. Alexander Maylath. Sheriff Thomas J. O'Brien and Chief James Fleming of the county police also visited the suburb.

There are 146 taverns in Calumet City, most of them on State street, and more per capita than in any other city in the nation. Most of them have floorshows. The stories of the night life as given to the grand jury by several witnesses were reported to have been lurid.

The county highway policemen formed six squads of two each. They patrolled the main streets on foot, inspected the taverns to see that there were no minors, gambling devices or indecent shows, and generally dimmed the usual Saturday night gayety. Tavern owners stood at the doors of their places to see that no minors entered.

Gambling Squad Raids Auto, Tavern Basement

Sergt. Thomas Lyons and a squad from Police Commissioner Allman's office made two gambling raids yesterday, arrested five men and seized a quantity of handbook equipment. Jacob Levine, 38 years old, 58 Washington street, Oak Park, was arrested when the squad found him allegedly taking bets in an automobile parked at 2815 North Harding avenue. The others were seized in a basement under a tavern at 1958 North avenue, where 88 patrons were chased out. Carl Schaeffer, 38 years old, was charged with keeping the resort and three assistants with being accomplices.

Melting Cannon Won't Aid War Effort, Expert Warns

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—Melting down the statues and ancient cannon in America's parks won't help the war effort, Edwin C. Barringer, president of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel, Inc., contended today. Barringer's statement, which did not mention President Roosevelt's suggestion that some statues and cannon be devoted to war production, said "statues are principally cast from nonferrous alloys, in many forms of which there is now actually a surplus."

Woman Collapses; Blame Overdose of Sedatives

Miss Tresa Dunham, 27 years old, a waitress, was taken to Henrotin hospital in a serious condition last night after she had collapsed in the lobby of the Berkshire hotel, 19 East Ohio street, from what police said was apparently an overdose of sedatives. She lives at the Planters hotel, 19 North Clark street, and had gone to the Berkshire to visit her sister, Mrs. Ray Renbaugh.

Britain Sets Clocks Back, Ends Double Time Saving

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 8.—British double summer time came to an end tonight when the clocks were retarded by one hour. Britain thus reverts to ordinary summer time, namely one hour ahead of Greenwich mean time, which will probably obtain thru the winter.

RUSH FORMATION OF SPECIAL U. S. COURTS IN BRITAIN

Hailed As Logical Move in Touchy Situation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—The office of the judge advocate general of the United States army today was speeding the establishment of military tribunals which are to have criminal jurisdiction over members of the American armed forces in the British Isles.

Transfer of this jurisdiction from British courts was accomplished this week by an act of parliament, passed over objections of some members that it was dictated from Washington and appeared to be the beginning of demands which might leave Britain as a mere appendage or dominion of her former colony.

In Washington experts on military and American and British law hailed the step as the logical development of unsatisfactory practices in the past and held that it was rooted in precedents established in the World war.

By Military Agreement.

Col. William Cattron Rigby, retired, recalled that when the United States entered the World war, arrangements for American courts to try members of the AEF in France and Britain were concluded by military convention. Commanders of the armies concerned agreed on the plan. Similar privileges were granted British colonials.

After the war the British attorney general held that such conventions did not have the power to make such agreements, holding that only parliament could grant such power, Col. Rigby said.

At the outset of the present war, the British concluded an agreement by military convention for the trial of British soldiers for criminal offenses in France, as the French never had questioned such procedure.

Special Law for Colonies.

However, Col. Rigby said, when British colonials began to move into England, where the ruling against conventions held, parliament passed a law granting Canadian, Australian, and New Zealand military courts jurisdiction over the dominion soldiers.

Parliament later went a step further and granted governments in exile the right to hold courts in London particularly on naval matters. Under this law the Dutch have established a court where Dutch procedure and Dutch law is employed, according to a member of the British bar.

This procedure was unsatisfactory to the American government, however, because under both these laws it was provided that any appeal rested in British courts, Col. Rigby said. The American government insisted that any appeals from American tribunals rest with American authorities. For this reason a separate law was passed embodying the American demands.

British Raise Legal Doubts.

Members of the British bar feel that many interesting legal questions may have to be settled before the system works smoothly. American legal experts do not share this view, however. They feel that questions raised by British attorneys already have been decided.

One of the questions raised was whether British or American law should be employed in criminal cases other than those mentioned in the articles of war.

Col. Rigby said British law will be employed, because it is the practice under military procedure to employ the law in force in the place where the crime is committed. He said this procedure is envisioned in the 96th article of war, which is known as the "catch all article."

Conduct and Discipline.

This article reads: "Tho not mentioned in these articles, all disorders and neglects to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, all conduct of a nature to bring discredit upon the military service, and all crimes or offenses not capital, of which persons subject to military law may be guilty, shall be taken cognizance of by a general or special or summary court martial, according to the nature and degree of the offense, and punished at the discretion of such court."

Under this interpretation, it was said, an American soldier may be punished for riding a bicycle without holding on to the handle bars, which is an offense against the law in Britain.

It was said that the law does not necessarily mean that military courts will hear all cases against American soldiers.

Up to American Officers.

It will be possible, if a soldier is arrested by a British policeman for some misdemeanor, for American authorities to let him face a civil court.

It long has been a practice of American forces, Col. Rigby said, to observe coördinate jurisdiction. If a military or civil court assumes original jurisdiction, such jurisdiction seldom has been contested by either the military or civilian authorities where the two systems have worked side by side.

In some cases American law is more severe than British law. Under the American articles of war, rape is punishable by death. In Britain it is punishable by imprisonment.

Contributions totaling $22,411 led by a gift of $11,399 from employés of the Chicago Surface lines, yesterday sent the USO war fund campaign within 7 per cent of its $1,749,432 goal, Holman D. Pettibone, general chairman, announced.

Approximately $125,000 still must be obtained, Pettibone said, of which $35,000 is pledged. "We anticipate closing books by Labor day with the Chicago district quota filled."

Nationally the campaign has collected more than 16 million dollars. The national summer goal is 20 million dollars, Pettibone said.

Burger Gets Life Term; Dasch, 30 Years.

the six saboteurs and the commutation of the sentences of the other two was no surprise to the capital today. It had been reported yesterday that this would be the fate of the Nazi agents, and increased activity about the jail this morning indicated the executions were but a matter of minutes.

The jail was closely guarded by helmeted troops. During the morning six chaplains and three doctors arrived, along with a number of officers. A guard told newspaper men that six stretchers had been placed in the prison morgue.

Priest Arrives.

An hour later a priest ran thru the rain to the jail entrance. He was identified as Father O'Connor, chaplain of Lorton reformatory.

Shortly before noon A. Magruder MacDonald, district coroner, entered the jail. It was apparent to reporters that the last hour of the condemned men had come.

The room in which the six saboteurs died is 18 feet long and 12 feet wide. The chair stands against a wall, with a glass panel between it and the witness seats. Five witnesses normally watch an execution.

At almost the very moment the White House announced the executions, two ambulances moved up to the jail. The bodies of the saboteurs were removed to Walter Reed hospital for postmortems.

None of the officials attending the executions would discuss any phase of the death of the six men.

MISSION OF TERROR FAILS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—The spy-saboteur case broke into the open in New York the night of June 27 after 10 days of rumors that Nazis had been landed secretly on the Florida coast.

This sort of thing had been alternately predicted and scoffed at since the United States entered the war. Disclosure that it had happened here stirred the public and aroused a clamor for action.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced the landings and arrests at a press conference. He gave no details of how the FBI broke the case and has not yet done so. That will wait, FBI officials said, until after the war. Nevertheless, there have been reports that the FBI got some inside help, and developments in the weeks following arrest of the men did nothing to refute such stories.

Four Land Near N. Y.

Four men came ashore from a German submarine anchored a few hundred yards off the beach at Amagansett, Long Island, about 125 miles east of New York City, in the early hours of June 13. They wore German military fatigue uniforms, which soon were exchanged for American made civilian clothes.

The men came ashore in a rubber boat, manned by two German sailors, and with them came an amazing store of equipment—explosives, incendiaries, fuses, detonators, timing devices, acids—and $90,800 for expenses and bribes. They were equipped for a two year campaign of sabotage and had a list of prime objectives, such as light metals plants, vital railroad areas, water supplies, bridges.

Immediately upon landing the group went to New York and met the contacts named for them by the German high command. The men had been trained for weeks in a sabotage school near Berlin. They knew precisely where to do the most damage to America's war production.

An almost identical landing occurred June 17 at Ponte Vedra Beach near Jacksonville, Fla. There were four men trained in sabotage and equipped with explosives and incendiaries, and well financed. Some of this group went to Chicago.

On July 2 President Roosevelt barred the civil courts to the eight men and ordered them tried by a military commission of seven generals. He named Attorney General Frances Biddle and the judge advocate general of the army, Maj. Gen. Myron C. Cramer, as prosecutors. To defend the prisoners he appointed Col. Cassius M. Dowell and Col. Kenneth C. Royall.

Just before the trial started on July 8, a special counsel, Col. Carl L. Ristine, was appointed for George John Dasch, leader of the Long Island team, who, with Ernest Peter Burger, a teammate, was most frequently mentioned in reports that one or two of the prisoners were aiding the government.

First Since Civil War.

Filing of formal charges, alleging violations of the law of war, the 81st and 82d articles of war, and conspiracy to commit those violations, took place a day after establishment of the commission, and five days later the trial began.

The interest in the trial was heightened by the fact that it was the first of its kind since the Civil war and involved the first actual landing of spies from an enemy warship.

The proceedings, which took place in an FBI assembly room in the Justice building, had been under way 32 hours before it was formally announced. It might never have been made known officially if Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, president of the trial panel, had had his way. To insure his plan for utmost secrecy, he swore to silence every participant in the proceeding.

OWI Tries to Publicize It.

However, the Office of War Information, a tremendous story at hand, sought to open the trial to the public, or at least to obtain a running account of the proceeding. McCoy declined to see representatives of Elmer Davis, OWI director, who thereupon went to Mr. Roosevelt.

The outcome was an agreement that McCoy issue after each session a statement on the progress of the trial. McCoy's statements were masterpieces of brevity. Information concerning anything but the hours of convening and adjourning seldom required more than two or three sentences.

The coast guard's story of its part in the case was announced July 15 thru the OWI. It told how Guardsman John C. Cullen, 21 years old, walking his 6 mile patrol on a Long Island beach, encountered three men, one ashore in civilian clothes and two, wearing bathing suits, standing knee deep in water.

At first Cullen was threatened, but later the strangers offered him a bribe which he pretended to accept as a means of escape. Cullen had no gun. He returned to the coast guard station. Soon a half dozen coast guardsmen were at the scene, distributed behind sand dunes "with orders to resist invasion."

They saw, the account said, "thru a rift in the fog, a long, thin object, about 70 feet long, about 150 feet off shore," and heard "the noise of powerful Diesel engines." The noise died away, and the coast guardsmen searched the beach.

To Supreme Court.

The real highlight of the trial occurred during a three day recess between conclusion of evidence and the final arguments. Defense counsel took to the Supreme Court of the United States—whose members were gathered from distant vacation retreats for an extraordinary session probably without parallel—their contention that the prisoners had been denied their civil rights and that President Roosevelt acted unlawfully in establishing the military commission. A motion for leave to file a petition for a writ of habeas corpus was entered, and, after two days of arguments by Biddle and Royal, was denied.

Only seven prisoners—Dasch was the abstainer—joined in the appeal to the Supreme court.

As the court announced its ruling at noon July 31, the seven generals were hearing final arguments in their guarded trial room half a mile away. The arguments were concluded Aug. 1, and on Aug. 2 the commission met privately to put its decision into final form.

Girl, 5, Freezes to Death Locked in Refrigerator

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—Barbara Ann Prater, 5 years old, froze to death in a refrigerator today after her sister Margaret, 3, slammed the door shut. Barbara and a cousin, Truesdale Padgett, 11, had crawled into the refrigerator to get cool.

HISTORY OF THE 8 NAZI SABOTEURS SKETCHED BY FBI

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—Based on information issued by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, here are sketches of the eight men tried by a military commission on charges of coming to the United States on Nazi submarines to sabotage war plants:

ERNEST PETER BURGER, 36, a native of Augsburg, Germany, who was sentenced to life imprisonment. He came to the United States in 1927 and was naturalized in 1933. He was employed as a machinist in Detroit and Milwaukee and was active in German organizations. After his return to Germany he was active as a group leader and propagandist for the Nazi party and was drafted into the German army.

GEORGE JOHN DASCH, 39, leader of the group of four which landed at Amagansett, Long Island, June 13, who was sentenced to 30 years in prison. Born at Spyr-on-the-Rhine, Germany, he served in the German army during the first Word war, arrived as a stowaway at Philadelphia in 1922, worked as a waiter in New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Sacramento, Cal., and returned to Germany in March, 1941.

Haupt One of Six to Die.

The other six, all of whom were put to death today, were:

HERBERT HANS HAUPT, 22, youngest of the eight and the only one for whom defense counsel claimed United States citizenship. Born in Germany, he was brought to this country at the age of 5 and became naturalized thru his father. He was educated in Chicago public schools, was active in the Reserve Officers Training corps, and went to Mexico last summer because, his counsel said, of "trouble with a girl." From Mexico he went to Japan on a German passport and then reached Germany aboard a blockade runner. Germany decorated him for his help.

RICHARD QUIRIN, 34, born in Berlin, came to the United States in 1927, and made declaration of intention to become a citizen at Schenectady, N. Y., in 1929, but did not complete the proceeding. He worked as a mechanic at Syracuse, N. Y., for several years, and then for nine years as an odd jobs painter. Returning to Germany at the expense of that government in 1939, he took up work as a toolmaker until he became a saboteur.

Worked in Hammond.

WERNER THIEL, 35, a native of Essen, Germany, came to the United States as a youth. He worked as a toolmaker in Detroit automobile plants and for a while in a hospital at Hammond, Ind. He was active in the German-American bund before returning to his native land by way of Japan after the war began.

HERMANN OTTO NEUBAUER, 32, a native of Germany, was employed as a sailor before coming to the United States in 1932. He worked in hotels at Hartford, Conn., and Chicago for four years, and married an American girl at Chicago. He returned to Germany to serve in the army in 1940.

EDWARD JOHN KERLING, 33, leader of the group of four which landed near Jacksonville, Fla., on June 17. Born at Weisbaden, Germany, he came to the United States in 1929, worked for an oil company, and later with his wife worked as a domestic. He made several visits to Germany, was active in the German-American bund, tried to sail home on a private yacht in 1939, finally reached Germany by way of Lisbon in 1940.

HEINRICH HARM HEINCK, 35, a native of Hamburg, Germany. He came to the United States in 1936 and was employed as an oiler and machinist helper. The German government paid his way home in 1939.

DOES WASHINGTON UNDERSTAND THE SENTIMENT OF THE PEOPLE OF ILLINOIS ON THIS ISSUE?

Last May, New England, with other Atlantic seaboard States, accepted gasoline rationing as a necessary sacrifice in the interests of our country's war effort.

With few exceptions, New England motorists now get 4 gallons of gasoline per week. The sale of fuel oil has been limited to essential uses; and those of us who can are now converting our heating plants to coal.

This sacrifice has improved New England's industrial situation NOW. But it has failed to enable us to build up the fuel oil reserves absolutely necessary to the full efficiency of our war industries, and to the health of our war workers NEXT WINTER.

We believe that if the people of Illinois—and of Indiana, Ohio and Michigan—knew the facts they would be willing to help the people of New England in this emergency.

These are the facts:

In a warning of the need for drastic action dated July 13, the Committee on Petroleum Economics of the Petroleum Industry War Council in Washington specifically stressed the imperative necessity for extending gasoline and fuel oil rationing to your area at once. The reserves thus accumulated could be sent by inland waterways to the East.

Supporting the Petroleum Industry War Council's recommendations are various OPC experts, and Walter P. Hedden, director of port development, Port of New York Authority and now with the ODT, who testified before a special House committee that: "a 20% reduction in the consumption in these four States and unrationed areas of District 1 would guarantee 200,000 barrels daily which available lake tankers could transport to the East."

But—Washington authorities say that this help you can give to New England and the East NOW is prevented by the fear of your political retaliation at the polls next November.

We don't believe it! We don't believe that the people of Illinois want their representatives in Congress or their servants in the Administration to follow such a narrow sectional policy in this grave war emergency. We don't believe that the politicians understand the spirit of all Americans to SHARE sacrifice and to stick together for victory.

We DO believe that the people of Illinois are quite willing to help New England people NOW rather than after November elections. And we believe, furthermore, that you are willing to go on record with your sentiments.

Won't you write your Congressman and your Senator TODAY and tell them that you are ready to share gasoline and fuel oil rationing at once with the people of New England and the East? Thank you.

Published in the interests of New England war workers and New England manufacturers engaged in vital war production work.

BIDDLE ASKS LAW TO PUNISH FUTURE SABOTEURS' AIDS

Trial of 8 Nazis Brings Loopholes to Light.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—Attorney General Francis Biddle said today that the trial of the eight Nazi saboteurs had demonstrated the inadequacy of laws for dealing with persons aiding such enemies and that he had directed preparation of legislation to close the loopholes.

Biddle said the legislation will aim at severe penalties for conspiracy to commit sabotage and for harboring or assisting saboteurs. In addition, he said, it might seek to establish legal machinery for speeding prosecution of such cases, with a provision that convictions could be appealed only upon direction of the Supreme court.

Specific Statute Lacking.

There now is no special provision of law covering conspiracy to commit sabotage, the attorney general said, and while wartime sabotage can be punished by 30 years in prison and a $10,000 fine, conspiracy to commit sabotage must be tried under a general statute carrying a penalty of two years in prison and $10,000 fine.

At present, he said, there is no special statute for punishing persons who harbor or conceal persons who have committed sabotage or persons who have guilty knowledge of such acts but fail to inform law enforcement officers.

Such offenses, Biddle said, must be tried as misprision of felony, which carried a maximum penalty of three years in prison and a $500 fine.

Accomplices Present Problem.

The weaknesses to which the attorney general referred presumably arose in connection with the prosecution of 14 persons accused of aiding the eight Nazis. These people, including the parents and an uncle of Herbert Haupt and the wife of Edward John Kerling, were held in custody for more than two weeks before charges were filed against them. The problem of how they should be charged occupied top officials at the justice department for a considerable period.

SEEKS TRAINED MEN FOR AUTO ORDNANCE UNIT

Recruits for a heavy automotive ordnance company are urgently needed, Maj. Gen. George Grunert, commanding the 6th service command, said yesterday.

Among those whose talents would be welcomed in the unit are auto and truck mechanics, electricians, machinists, welders, and repair men. Men now classed 1-A, but not yet called to service, are eligible to enlist. Applicants may be of any age between 18 and 45.

The company is to be recruited today, tomorrow, and Tuesday in the office of the Chicago Automotive Trade association, 100 East Ohio street, which is coöperating in the effort to find qualified men for this specialized service. Hours are 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. today and 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. the other days.

BRITISH RADIO TELLS EUROPE OF SABOTEURS' FATE

LONDON, Aug. 9 [Sunday]—(AP).—Beginning at 8 o'clock last night the British radio spread thru Europe the news that the United State had executed six Nazi saboteurs.

The broadcasts, made in several languages, emphasized particularly for the Germans the swift capture, trial, and death of the men before they could begin their sabotage campaign.

Up to an early hour today the German radio had refrained from any comment.

Father of Dean Ackerman Killed by Switch Engine

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 8 [Special].—Less than a week after he had visited here on a business trip, Carl W. Ackerman, dean of Columbia university school of journalism, returned to Los Angeles today for the body of his father, John F. Ackerman, 78 years old, who was killed Thursday by a switch engine. Services will be conducted in Richmond, Ind., the elder Ackerman's birthplace. Ackerman, who lived here, was on his way to visit a daughter, Rhea C. Ackerman, superintendent of the Los Angeles county juvenile hall, when the accident occurred.

SOLDIER SEIZED IN KIDNAP-RAPE; HUNT TWO PALS

Olympia, Wash., Aug. 8 (AP).—Prosecutor John S. Lynch Jr. of Thurston county said a Fort Lewis soldier was held and two other soldiers were being sought in connection with the kidnaping and rape early today of a 31 year old Chehalis widow.

The identity of the woman was not revealed. The prisoner's name was withheld.

Force Way Into Car.

Lynch said the woman was abducted and raped while motoring home. She said she stopped at an Olympia restaurant about 1:30 a. m., and that when she came out to enter her car, three soldiers also climbed in.

Near Tenino, about 15 miles south, the soldiers drove the car off the Pacific highway onto the prairie.

The prosecutor quoted her as saying most of her clothing was torn off and that each soldier raped her, then all three took her car and drove away. She made her way back to the highway where motorists on a camping trip took her home.

Hat Provides a Clew.

Officers who went to the scene found her broken glasses and a soldier's hat. Noting a name in it, they arrested a soldier at Fort Lewis.

Army authorities turned the soldier over to Thurston county officials for prosecution and were endeavoring to identify the other two suspects. The prosecutor said he is considering charges of first degree kidnaping and rape. The kidnap law in Washington carries the death penalty.

DEMAND SECRET U. S. DATA AT SPY TRIAL OF PASTOR

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 8 (AP).—Federal Judge J. Joseph Smith today took under advisement a defense motion in the trial of the Rev. Kurt E. B. Molzahn for arguments that would make available grand jury proceedings concerning Dr. Otto Willumeit of Chicago, guilty-pleading midwest bund leader indicted with Molzahn and three others on charges of conspiring to furnish the axis with American military information. Judge Smith said he will hear the arguments Monday.

Defense Attorney James W. Carpenter asked that documents from which Prosecutor Thomas J. Dodd Jr. read yesterday while cross-examining character witnesses for Molzahn be marked for identification.

The prosecutor, in answer to a request by Carpenter that this data be made available to him, protested that the material was incorporated in "confidential FBI reports."

Jail Ex-Rapist in Attack on Woman Church Worker

Michael Wojcik, 35 years old, who gave his address as 1656 Erie street, was held yesterday by Chicago avenue police for molesting Miss Nellie Delaney, 30, of 1152 North La Salle street, as she distributed religious literature Friday night at Delaware place and Dearborn street. Police said Wojcik admitted the charge and told them he had served 10 years in prison for rape. The name of a stranger who rescued Miss Delaney and bloodied Wojcik's nose had not been learned.

LIGHTS VISIBLE MANY MILES IN BLACK-OUT TEST

Reasons Are Told Why All Must Be Shut Off.

Induct OCD Workers

A mass induction of 8,400 auxiliary firemen, police, and air raid wardens by civilian defense officials will be held at 3 p. m. this afternoon in the bandshell at Grant park. Judge Otto Kerner of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals will administer the oath and Mayor Kelly, OCD coördinator for the metropolitan area, will address the workers.

After the ceremonies white enameled steel hats and identification insignia will be distributed to the workers. W-G-N will record the ceremony and rebroadcast it from 10:45 to 11 p.m. tonight.

Figures to show why it is important to black out an area completely during an air raid were released by the Office of Civilian Defense yesterday as 12 million people prepared for Wednesday night's black-out, the largest ever attempted in inland United States.

The black-out, set for 10 to 10:30 p. m., will cover the northern third of Illinois, the southern half of Michigan, northwestern Indiana, and the lake shore counties of Wisconsin.

Otto F. Jelinek, head of the Chicago area OCD's office of techniques, said the following lights can be seen from these distances: lighted match, ½ mile; lantern, 4 to 5 miles; lighted residential window with shade drawn, 12 miles, and a blast furnace glow, 50 miles.

Jelinek said his recommendations are based on six months of comprehensive black-out and camouflaged lighting experiments.

After the black-out period has ended, Jelinek warned, it is important that lights be turned on gradually over a period of 10 to 15 minutes. If all were turned on at once, a load of half a million kilowatts would be placed on Chicago power houses.

Use Newspapers as Curtain.

Jelinek's tests show seven or eight sheets of newspaper tacked over a window properly will provide an excellent black-out curtain. He urged all people in the area to have a "personal" practice black-out before Wednesday night to make sure preparations in their homes and offices are effective. Where it is necessary to go outside because of some emergency during the black-out period, the individual should wear white clothing or carry some white object, he said.

Police Commissioner James P. Allman issued orders to volunteer auxiliary police to report to their district police stations at 8:30 p. m. the night of the black-out. They should have notebooks, pencils, and pocket flashlights, he said.

Urged to Use Diplomacy.

The commissioner urged them to use diplomacy in cases where they find regulations violated. Where they fail to obtain coöperation from an individual, they should give full information on the violation to a member of the city police force. If not able to find a policeman nearby, they should report the matter to their district stations after the black-out.

Col. B. B. Freud, acting 6th region OCD director, said detailed plans for the black-out had been received by his office from state defense councils, which in turn had obtained them thru local councils.

Capt. William F. Waugh, chairman of the civilian protection division of the state defense council, estimated 75,000 members of the Illinois citizens defense corps will be at their posts Wednesday night.

PELLEY ASKS RETRIAL; CHARGES 'MISCONDUCT' IN SEDITION CASE

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 8 (AP).—William Dudley Pelley today filed a 39 page motion for a new trial, accusing government counsel of "misconduct in calling him a 'traitor,' 'a Benedict Arnold,' and 'an Aaron Burr'" in final arguments in his criminal sedition trial.

The motion asked a new trial on the basis of 63 points.

Pelley and two associates, Miss Agnes Marian Henderson and Lawrence A. Brown, were convicted Wednesday night.

The government charged they sought to interfere with the war effort and "promote the success of our enemies" in articles in Pelley's magazine "The Galilean" and other publications. The new trial motion applied also to Brown and Miss Henderson.

WOUNDED BY ACCIDENTAL SHOT.

Thomas Reed, 28 years old, a newspaper truck driver, was wounded yesterday by the accidental discharge of a gun that he was packing for a hunting trip.

SEIZE 33 ALIENS WITH MAPS AND TWO TELESCOPES

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The arrest of 33 enemy aliens, one a photoengraver who possessed navigation maps of New York harbor and Long Island sound waters, was announced today by the federal bureau of investigation.

Other contraband seized included two telescopes owned by a 23 year old German who took frequent bicycle trips up the Hudson river, according to the FBI.

Arrested and sent to Ellis Island for internment hearings were 25 Germans, six Italians, one Japanese, and one Hungarian.

TWO RAIDS IN CHICAGO.

Twenty-five German aliens were rounded up by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and city police in the last 48 hours, Albert H. Johnson, head of the Chicago office of the FBI, said yesterday. This brings to 139 the number of German nationals arrested since the outbreak of the war.

Twelve were seized yesterday and 13 on Friday, Johnson said. All have been turne dover to the immigration department to await hearing before the enemy alien hearing board.

In making the arrests yesterday, Johnson said his agents found several pairs of binoculars, two short wave receiving sets, several cameras, and large piles of Nazi propaganda.

Burma Ex-Premier U. Saw Still Alive, British Say

LONDON, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Burma office of the British government stated officially today that "there is no truth" in a report broadcast by the Rome radio that U. Saw, former premier of Burma, is dead.

HOW RACETRACK GOT VITAL STEEL STUMPS CAMDEN

Plant Had Charmed Path from the Beginning.

BY DON STARR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Camden, N. J., Aug. 8.—Camden county civic leaders and construction experts, who were unable to obtain government approval for construction of a shipyard or a school building, confessed failure today in efforts to learn how a $2,000,000 horse racing plant of steel, copper and other critical materials was thrown up here after the United States entered the war.

An investigation of the incredible chain of circumstances which permitted the Garden State Racing association to by-pass war restrictions was launched by the Association for the Prevention of a Race Track in Camden county. This unwieldly name was adopted by a group whose leaders included building contractors, architects, attorneys, members of a suburban board of education, clergymen, and the shipyard promoters, who had the support of no less a personage than James R. Cromwell, former minister to Canada by appointment of President Roosevelt.

Before WPB Twice.

The association twice carried its fight against the track to the War Production board and its chairman, Donald Nelson, but the members stood by and watched the plant go up while conflicting statements were issued by the WPB, while promoters kept a tight lipped silence and while political leaders looked the other way.

The committee did succeed in amassing evidence which included these points:

1. A letter sent to the shipyard backers by Nelson on March 20, 1942, stating that a labor shortage existed in the area.

2. A WPB statement dated April 16, 1942, informing the race track foes that "there is no shortage of labor in the area."

3. Use by contractors of an estimated 3,000 tons of steel, 10,000 feet of 6 inch and 8 inch cast iron pipe, and thousands of feet of structural fir timber now transported here by Pacific coast ships thru submarine infested waters.

Plenty of Copper Used.

4. Construction and erection of a $125,000 totalisator, a complicated electric betting machine requiring an untold amount of copper wire, switches, and similar materials.

5. Use of 3 large erection cranes, 3 steam shovels, 4 large bulldozers, and 20 5-ton dump trucks, while shipyards and other war plants in this Philadelphia area were seeking similar construction equipment and while war workers were unable to obtain gasoline and tires to reach their plants.

6. Free WPA labor to build and erect at the track, 9 outhouses of the most luxurious Chic Sale Type.

7. Addition of 6 buses to the line serving the track thru an emergency law intended to provide extra transportation for war workers.

The Garden State Racing association, whose president is Eugene Mori, a Vineland, N. J., auto dealer, obtained a license for the track on Nov. 6, 1941, just a month before the United States entered the war.

Officers Fellow Townsmen.

Mori listed the following officers of the association: Harry Richter, vice president; Solve Tuso, secretary and treasurer, and Edward Charlesworth, director. All are from Vineland, which has a population of less than 8,000. Mori said there were 60 stockholders in the 2 million dollar promotion.

President Mori was not just sure when the steel for the race track was purchased, but defended the wartime race track construction with the statement that "98 per cent was on hand by Feb. 1." This was several days after Nelson had issued WPB regulations Nos. 1 and 2, which delegated to WPB's director of industrial operations the power to requisition property of any person or firm if the property was needed for the war effort.

Work on the track was slow during the winter months, and on Feb. 5, the Camden County Architects' society directed a resolution to the WPB asking that work on the racing plant be stopped. On April 17, a WPB press release stated that an investigation had been completed and that there was no evidence that WPB priority regulations or orders had been violated. The compliance board asserted specifications for scarce materials had been revised downward after the outbreak of the war.

See Nelson for Hour.

The committee opposing the race track then obtained an audience with Nelson in Washington, conferring with him for almost an hour on May 15. Two days later, the record of that meeting was set forth in a radio address by the Rev. Carl McIntire, a Presbyterian minister from suburban Collingswood, who was present.

The Rev. Mr. McIntire declared that Nelson said he would have stopped construction of the racing plant three weeks before if he had had the power. Nelson added, according to the Rev. Mr. McIntire, that WPB attorneys had advised him that he lacked the authority.

"Mr. Nelson had on his desk the report which he said that his investigators had made, which declared that the race track had not violated priorities in any way. He said that the report showed that the track was 90 per cent completed. Thereupon Judge Leap [S. Rustling Leap, one of Camden county's leading attorneys] presented to him pictures showing that such was not the case."

Letter to Cromwell.

"Mr. Green," the Rev. Mr. McIntire continued, "then presented Mr. Nelson with a letter written by Mr. Nelson on March 20, 1942, to James H. Cromwell, in which Mr. Nelson had said: 'After careful review of the plan for a new merchant building shipyard in the Philadelphia-Camden area submitted by you and Mr. Green, I do not believe that a plan of this sort is feasible because of the labor shortage in that area.'

"He then laid before Mr. Nelson the mimeographed press release of April 16, 1942, issued in the name of the War Production board as to the investigation of the Camden county race track, which reads: 'The compliance branch's study revealed there is no shortage of labor in the area from which the carpenters and other mechanics employed on the project are drawn.'

"Mr. Nelson repudiated the press release of April 16. He said if he had known it, it would not have gone out."

Earl Lippincott, a prominent general contractor, told Nelson that hundreds of pounds of nails needed for war construction were going into the race track buildings, which included a grandstand seating 8,500, a clubhouse accommodating 15,000, and 18 stables with stalls for more than 1,000 horses.

Lippincott declared that defense houses in the area were getting sanitary equipment that was not as good as that used for the horse stables.

Furman Demaris, a member of the board of education in the borough of Haddonfield, explained that the board had sought permission to erect a school building with a minimum of equipment controled by priorities, but that the application had been denied at the time that the racing plant was being built.

Visit WPB Counsel.

Nelson arranged for the committee to discuss the situation with John Lord O'Brian, senior counsel for WPB, and Milton Katz, a Harvard professor on the WPB legal staff. Prof. Katz, according to the Rev. Mr. McIntire, admitted that Nelson had the power to stop the race track, but that to avoid discrimination work on all other amusement centers would also have to be halted, and that WPB had been unwilling to take that step. Katz admitted that Nelson could issue an order stopping work on all race tracks in the country.

O'Brian said the Camden track question had been discussed at a WPB meeting attended by Vice President Henry Wallace, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, Leon Henderson, director of the Office of Price administration, and Robert Patterson, under secretary of war. O'Brian, according to the Rev. Mr. McIntire, promised further investigation.

The WPB's decision was made known on May 23, in the form of a ruling giving contractors until June 6 to complete the construction work. The labor force at the track was increased from 400 to 700 and placed on a 24 hour basis. A few days later the contractors were given permission to finish the job.

Meanwhile, the Rev. Mr. McIntire had uncovered the WPA outhouse angle and had taken a series of photographs. These pictures showed WPA carpenters at work on the outhouses in the WPA work yard, which was easily identified by its proximity to a small cemetery. The Rev. Mr. McIntire charged that the outhouses were transported to the track on a truck hired by WPA and then put in place by WPA workmen.

On Aug. 4, the Washington headquarters of WPB answered these charges with a statement that the nine outbuildings were constructed as a part of a nation-wide health program.

"No special considerations were involved," said Malcolm J. Miller, acting deputy commissioner of WPA.

Miller said investigation showed that materials for the WPA construction had been furnished by the Garden State Racing association and the design, location and need for the structures had been certified by the United States Public Health Service and the New Jersey Department of Health.

Transportation Overcome.

The transportation obstacle to track patronage was overcome in the same easy manner. The bus lines first applied to the state utility commission for 18 extra buses. Under the law, applicants for extra buses must have consent of municipalities thru which the buses would operate. Camden refused to give consent, and the utility commission itself then advised the operators that a temporary permit could be obtained under a war emergency law which waived municipal consent "if the buses are needed to carry war workers."

The line got six extra buses. On July 31, the utility commission said the permits carried the restriction limiting their use exclusively to the transportation of employés to and from war plants.

"No other passengers shall be accepted," said the order, and the commission announced that it had inspectors in Camden to see that this prohibition on race track traffic was enforced.

Three days later the bus that carried a TRIBUNE reporter to the track was occupied largely by riders who alighted at the race track. None wore overalls.

Prominent engineers became interested in the manner in which the track contractors obtained materials while war plant construction was delayed.

Victor G. Iden, director of the American Institute of Steel Construction, who was emphatic in the announcement that none of the members of the institute was involved in any way with the track job, pursued his investigation as far as Washington, where he learned that WPB's compliance board had been unable to discover any violations.

Iden said that he was told that the steel had been salvaged from New York Worlds Fair buildings. He knew nothing of the report that the steel had come from demolition of New York's 6th avenue elevated structure.

Principals Won't Talk.

"None of the principals involved would talk," said Iden.

The incredible coincidence of the track's success extends to its application for a permit to hold a 49 day race meeting. Racing was legalized at a special state election approving a constitutional amendment in 1939, but it was not until last Nov. 6 that the first unconditional license was granted. The recipient was the Garden State Racing association. Louis A. Reilly, chairman of the state racing commission and a satellite of the all-powerful Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, said that the association was the first to meet the conditions laid down by the commission.

The day after the permit was granted, Reilly was ousted as state commissioner of banking and insurance by Gov. Charles Edison, Hague's arch foe in the state's Democratic party circles, but observers believe his ouster had no connection with track developments.

ARKANSAS JUDGE TO ASK PROBE OF PRIMARY VOTING

Jurors to Investigate in Hot Springs Area.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 8 [Special].—Federal Judge John E. Miller of the western district of Arkansas said today he will ask a federal grand jury investigation of reports of irregularities in Garland county in the July 28 primary election.

This announcement, made by Judge Miller while visiting at Searcy, his former home, aroused additional interest in Tuesday's run-off primary in which Attorney General Jack Holt, backed by high ranking state officials, is fighting for the Democratic nomination for United States senator against former Rep. John L. McClellan, who is supported by Sen. Hattie Caraway [D., Ark.] and other federal officials.

Holt led McClellan by 407 votes in the primary which Judge Miller says will be investigated. The judge said he will ask the jury to inquire into the situation in Garland county, where the political following of Leo P. McLaughlin, mayor of Hot Springs, gave 3,836 votes to Holt and 374 to McClellan. Two other candidates, Representatives Dave Terry and Claude Ellis, received 141 and 133 votes, respectively, in Garland county.

There was no indication that the refusal of voting rights to Negroes in the July 28 primary will be a matter of grand jury inquiry. The Arkansas Negro Democratic association, claiming a membership of 10,000, unsuccessfully sought voting rights for its members, but was turned down by election officials who said the state's party rules restrict membership to qualified white electors. The association has indicated it will not make another voting attempt Tuesday.

Altho only 169,000 of the state's 360,000 voters participated in the first primary, the run-off is expected to attract from 180,000 to 200,000 voters. J. J. Harrison, state director of the Office of Government Reports, broke a 10 year political alliance with Gov. Homer M. Adkins to support McClellan, and Representatives Ellis and Terry also have joined the McClellan camp.

AFL Chief Enters Campaign.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 8 (AP).—An indorsement of a candidate by a labor leader today enlivened a Nebraska primary campaign in which chief interest centers on the Democratic and Republican candidates seeking the United States senatorial seat now held by George W. Norris.

Norris, an independent, will not be a candidate in Tuesday's election. Altho he has experssed a desire to retire at the end of his present term, many believe he will be a candidate in the general election.

George Brewer, president of the American Federation of Labor in Nebraska, indorsed the candidacy of Foster May, Omaha radio announcer, who is seeking the Democratic senatorial nomination. E. P. Stultz, business agent for the Packinghouse Workers' Joint council in Omaha, declared the CIO is opposing Rep. Harry B. Coffee, also a candidate for the nomination, but would not join with Brewer in indorsing May.

Republicans seeking the senatorial nomination are Kenneth Wherry, state chairman and midwest director for the G. O. P., Hugh B. Ashmore, Palisade, and Voyle D. Rector, Omaha.

Almost $2,000,000 worth of war stamp corsages and boutonnieres have been sold in the nation since May 18, Harry A. Perlman, national chairman of the war stamp corsage committee, announced yesterday. Of this amount, Chicago, where the idea originated, contributed $500,000, one-quarter of the total. Perlman said manufacturers could not meet the demand and that special kits, with material enough to make 100 corsages, are being prepared for distribution to organizations in thousands of smaller communities in the nation.

WORKING FOR Victory

"I TRIPLED My Income!

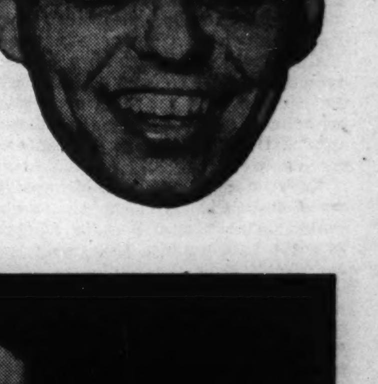
419 East 109th Street, Chicago



"ONE year ago I was making around $900 a year. Today I'm making almost four times that amount—$3,200 a year to be exact. Even if I do say it myself, that's pretty good dough for a fellow who's not yet 24.

"After leaving high school I went to work as a freight handler. That job didn't last very long and from there I went clerking in a wholesale fabrics house—that's the job on which I was making $75.00 a month.

"Nine hundred dollars a year wasn't much money for a fellow who had decided to get married, so the next step was to see about bettering my income.

"A want ad in the Tribune offering instruction in aircraft fabrication proved to be the turning point. I answered it and pretty soon I was enrolled as a student.

"Four days after I graduated from this aircraft fabrication school, I got a job as inspector in a war plant. Every day I inspect from eight to fourteen airplane wings—seeing that they comply exactly with blueprint specifications; that the riveting is perfect, and that there are no tears, cracks, die marks or other defects in the material.

"I get a big kick out of my work. It's the kind I always wanted to do, altho until I ran across that Tribune want ad I didn't seem to have a very clear idea on how to go about it. Naturally there's a tremendous thrill in doing work that you know is going to help your country lick its enemies. And, of course, there's no need to point out how much nicer it is to be making $3,200 a year than the $900 I was making not so long ago."

'I don't go much for luck, but if there are such things as lucky days, then the day I read that Tribune want ad telling about that course in aircraft construction was one of the luckiest days in my life."

YOUR BIG CHANCE!

Are you making the most of today's opportunities? Hundreds of workers can trace their present high wages and fine prospects to the training they received from trade schools which advertise in the Chicago Tribune want ad section.

EFFORT TO PURGE FISH IS BIG ISSUE IN N. Y. PRIMARY

Voters to Pick Delegates in Governor Race.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 8 [Special].—Voters of this state will go to the polls Tuesday in a state-wide primary in which national attention will be centered on the battle of Rep. Hamilton Fish [R., N. Y.] for Republican renomination in President Roosevelt's home district.

Sharing interest with the fight of Fish against would-be purgers is the struggle between United States Sen. James M. Mead [D., N. Y.] and State Attorney General John J. Bennett Jr. for delegates to the Democratic convention which will name a candidate for governor later this month.

The governorship fight has brought State Democratic Chairman James A. Farley, a supporter of Bennett, into opposition with President Roosevelt.

Roosevelt Backs Mead.

The latter has stated that if he were a voting delegate in the Democratic state convention he would cast his ballot for Mead. Both Mead and Bennett forces are claiming support of more than 508 potential delegates, the number required for nomination.

Altho Thomas E. Dewey, who was defeated by 64,000 votes by Gov. Lehman in 1938, has not announced himself a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, his supporters are claiming a majority of Republican convention delegates for his renomination.

The voters will pick nominees for 43 seats in congress and 201 in the state legislature. Pre-Pearl Harbor isolationism has been raised as an issue against four of the state's Democratic representatives in congress, Reps. William B. Barry, 2d district; Joseph L. Pfeifer, 3d district; James A. O'Leary, 11th district, and Martin J. Kennedy, 18th district.

Fish Victory Expected.

Despite opposition to Fish by both Dewey and Wendell Willkie, all indications point to a Fish victory in the 26th district, composed of Dutchess, Orange and Putnam counties. The Fish headquarters at Newburgh said today the representative would be renominated for his 12th congressional term with more votes than all of his three opponents.

The Fish campaign has become exceedingly bitter during the closing weeks, with all of the anti-Fish candidates assailing the representative's congressional record and assailing him as one of the nation's leading pre-Pearl Harbor isolationists.

The leading opponent of Fish is Augustus W. Bennet, Newburgh attorney, who has the backing of Dewey and Willkie. Also in the field are Emerson D. Fite, Vassar college professor of political science, and Edward J. Brown, 72 year old perennial candidate who also is entered in the Democratic primary.

Contrasting with the optimism in the Fish camp, his opponents were wary of predicting a primary victory. Bennet said he looks for a close race and believes he has made considerable political gains in the last few weeks, while Fite refused to make any prediction. Bowen was not reached for comment.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP).—Blonde, blue eyed Sharon Bell, 4 year old daughter of a Vancouver, B. C., policeman, completed a 2,500 mile plane and train trip tonight and was delivered into the hands of the surgeon who may save her life, threatened by a key imbedded in her larynx.

Dr. Chevalier Jackson, who has saved more than 2,000 persons with his invention, the bronchoscope, said the operation to remove the key probably would be performed tomorrow.

G. O. P. LEADERS SPUR DRIVE TO REGISTER VOTERS

Electors Urged to Sign Poll Lists Early.

BY PARKE BROWN.

The drive for the registration of voters under the new downstate permanent registration law begun by the Republican state committee under Chairman Ben L. Berve at a Springfield meeting last Tuesday, will get under full headway this week in accordance with plans made by the committee.

All of the party machinery of the 101 downstate counties will be working to persuade electors to place their names on the poll lists and avoid the rush certain to occur on the two precinct registration days on Saturday, Sept. 19 and Tuesday, Oct. 6, the latter date being the deadline before the congressional, state, and county election on Nov. 3.

Stress Election's Importance.

The impetus has been conveyed to workers and party members thruout the state by a series of emphatically worded letters sent out by State Committeeman George F. Perrine of Aurora, chairman of the subcommittee on permanent registration. The series includes letters to all members of the state committee, the 101 downstate county chairmen and the 4,060 precinct committeemen of the state outside Cook county.

While the three kinds of letters are similar in tone, they vary according to the party duties of each group addressed. All stress the importance of the election and the Republican vote downstate, where the party hopes to score a margin big enough to erase a Democratic machine lead in Chicago.

Perrine's letter to his associates on the state committee informs them that pamphlets of information are being printed for mailing to all precinct committeemen, all state employés and all other persons on the committee's state mailing list.

Barrett Cites Registration Law.

"All noncivil service employés," it proceeds, "will receive letters from their directors, directing them to cooperate with their precinct committeemen and their county chairmen in effecting this registration. We are informed that the attorney general [George F. Barrett] is also releasing a pamphlet which will discuss the law on permanent registration.

"The governor has indicated that he wishes the state committee to take the lead in working out permanent registration in the respective districts. Therefore we suggest that you immediately have a meeting with the county chairman of your [congressional] district and work out a scheme by which you will be able to obtain a maximum registration in each of your counties.

"We suggest in our letter to the precinct committeemen that unless they have 70 per cent of the people permanently registered in their precincts before Sept. 19 [the first day for general registration] it will be almost impossible for them to secure anywhere near a complete registration."

Gives Opinion on Statute.

In his pamphlet of information for the voters, Barrett is expected to embody the gist of a formal opinion on the new law which among other things will hold that the statute requires that all voters must register at the county clerk's office at the county seat. This would bar the use of deputies assigned to places outside the county seat.

In some counties deputies have opened branch registration offices in communities distant from the county seat, but if Barrett's opinion limits enrollment to the actual office of the county clerk it is probable that all persons already registered by deputies in special locations will have to reregister to comply with the law. An amendment providing for branch offices may be proposed to the general assembly when it meets next January.

State Chairman Berve will be in Springfield this week completing arrangements for the G. O. P. state convention to be held at the Elks' club there on Thursday, Aug. 20, with Sen. Wayland Brooks and Gov. Green as the headliners. He also announced the reappointment of William M. Devine as state director of service men's activities and of Alfred J. Borah as director of young Republican organization work.

Cook county Republicans will sound off for the fall campaign with the annual party picnic at Riverview park on Sept. 6 with Frank M. Kalteux as general chairman, and Henry Lindblad as assistant chairman, those two with Edward F. Moore, Max Landesman, George M. Fisher, Daniel A. Roberts, and Eugene A. Nusser constituting the committee in charge. All are ward committeemen.

Sen. Brooks is on duty in Washington, D. C., but his Democratic opponent, Congressman R. S. [Small Potatoes] McKeough continues to campaign here. He will be at the Logan county fair at Lincoln with his running mates tomorrow. They will visit Bloomington on Tuesday and then will move to southern Illinois and will have night meetings at Carmi on Wednesday, at Herrin on Thursday, and at Mounds on Friday.

FLOSSMOOR HAS PARTY TO RAISE AMBULANCE FUND

A colorful outdoor gathering was held in the Flossmoor village square last night to raise funds to convert a passenger sedan into an ambulance to be used by the village.

Nearly 700 attended. Many donated to the fund, and all contributed to it thru purchases of vegetables from victory gardens, flowers, bread baked on the spot, sandwiches and other items. Puppies and war bonds were raffled. Thirty soldiers and sailors participated in a flag ceremony.

The younger folk—and some of the older—danced on the street to music by the Thorntoneers from the Thornton Township High school, and Harvey Prater's square dance orchestra.

The sedan was donated by Mrs. Charles Strawbridge of Flossmoor. Organizations which sponsored the fund drive were the Flossmoor Red Cross working unit; the women's association of the Flossmoor Community church; the Ladies' Aid society of St. John's Episcopal church; the Catholic Women's club, and the Boy and Girl Scouts.

RUBBER AFTER THE WAR.

Not a little of the uncertainty and delay which surround everything connected with the development of a supply of synthetic rubber springs from the assumption, rather generally held, that the synthetic manufacture will be largely a war measure. It is assumed that when the Japanese are driven from the western Pacific rubber lands we shall return to the use of plantation rubber and the hundreds of millions of dollars invested in synthetic plants will have to be written off.

It is not at all certain that this forecast will be realized. It is not at all certain that, once we have developed an adequate supply of a substitute for plantation rubber, that commodity will ever be able to win back the American market. There have been numerous instances in which tropical products have been displaced by products of the laboratories. The planting of indigo was one of the principal activities on our southern seacoast before the revolution. Aniline dyes ruined the indigo planters. The Japanese camphor monopoly was destroyed by discoveries in the laboratories. In our own time we are witnessing a displacement of silk by rayon, nylon, and other synthetic fibers.

Sugar provides another example. The tropical isles of the West Indies were from some time in the 16th century until the end of the 18th among the richest prizes in the European dynastic wars of that period. It was during that time that the people of Europe became accustomed to sugar as a welcome, if expensive, article of diet. Before that sugar had been so rare that it was prescribed as a medicine and was used only by the very rich. The West Indies isles had the rich soil and the tropical climate in which sugar cane grew luxuriantly. They were known as the sugar islands.

When Napoleon set up the continental system and the British blockaded Europe against him European imports of sugar were cut off. Napoleon subsidized French scientists, who developed the making of sugar from sugar beets.

The beet sugar industry had precarious beginnings. It was not for many decades that it was firmly established in Europe, but eventually it drove cane sugar out of a large portion of its former market in continental Europe. It did not do so on merit alone. The governments of continental Europe, anxious to have a source of sugar that could not be cut off by any blockade, subsidized the beet sugar growers. The two sugars are identical chemically and physically and thus should compete wholly on a cost basis, but because of governmental policy and the interest of the domestic producers, cane sugar has yielded market after market to beet sugar, which has usually been the more expensive to produce.

It is unlikely that the American people, having once experienced the privations of the rubber shortage and the failure to anticipate it and deal with it adequately, will ever again tolerate our national dependence for rubber upon countries so far beyond the effective protection of our armed forces. Plantation rubber may be cheaper but the insurance of a continued supply, paid thru a tariff on natural rubber, may be purchased cheerfully by Americans. If so, Japan's conquests in the rubber regions will be worthless, even if she manages to keep them, because the rest of the world does not offer enough of a market for rubber in peacetime to make the operation of the Dutch and Malayan plantations very profitable.

It is also a question whether plantation rubber will, after this war, ever be as cheap to produce as it was before. Its cheapness depended upon the use of what was virtually slave labor. The native employés on the plantations were technically free men but dense population and scarcity of food in the rubber countries forced them to sell their labor for the price of mere existence. Even if Americans are not ashamed in the future to exploit such labor even indirectly, its exploitation may no longer be possible.

The natives of the rubber countries made little effort to assist their white masters in repulsing the Japanese and some of the natives welcomed the invaders. The white man's authority in those countries has been terminated and it is not altogether certain that he can ever pick up the reins again. It may well be that the Malayans and Javanese will prefer, after the war, to raise food crops where the rubber plantations once stood and that even if the British and Dutch administrators are restored they will be unable to force their subjects to grow crops for export. Foodstuffs would be less profitable but the people who grew them would keep them, which is more than they have ever been able to do with tea or rubber. In such an event, of course, tariff protection of synthetic rubber in the United States might eventually become unnecessary.

BOUNDARY DISPUTE.

With the map of the world changing every other day, it is curious to learn that there are still boundary disputes even in this country. They are not being rectified, as in other parts of the world, by armies, but by coöperative efforts by the states concerned. In the earlier history of our country there was such bitter animosity between states that Britons said we could never become a united nation.

One of these pronouncements came from Josiah Tucker, dean of Gloucester, who was one of the leading economic and political authorities of Britain. Just after the Revolutionary war he said:

"The mutual antipathies and clashing interests of the Americans, their difference of governments, habitudes, and manners indicate that they will have no center of union and no common interest. They never can be united into one compact empire under any species of government whatever."

George III. went so far as to say that the states would repent before long and beg to be taken back into the British empire.

Happily, these forecasts were not borne out, altho there was a great deal of difficulty over possession of the western lands. Adoption of the articles of confederation was held up for four years until Maryland prevailed in her demand that the seaboard states surrender their western lands to the central government. Even after this was settled, Connecticut threatened to go to war with Pennsylvania because the Pennsylvania militia drove Connecticut settlers out of the Wyoming valley, which Connecticut claimed.

We use more amicable methods these days in settling our boundary disputes. The Kentucky legislature, for instance, has agreed recently to settlement of a dispute with Indiana over a five mile strip of Kentucky land left on the Indiana side of the Ohio river near Evansville by a shift in the river channel, which occurred almost a century ago. The Evansville waterworks are to be left in Indiana, but Kentucky is to get the remainder of the disputed territory. Indiana's legislature is expected to approve the settlement next year, but congress must give final approval to the interstate pact.

It is strange indeed, however, that after 150 years as a nation we still have disagreements over territory. Kentucky has been a state since 1792 and Indiana since 1816, but here they are finding where one leaves off and the other begins. About the only other boundary dispute left is between Kansas and Missouri, caused by a shift years ago in the Missouri river channel which left 2,000 acres of Doniphan county, Kansas, farm land on the Missouri side of the river. It is expected that this dispute will soon be resolved.

The territorial disputes are of little matter. There are no embattled Kansas farmers out with pitchforks yelling the equivalent of "54-40 or fight" at Missourians. Everybody recognizes that wherever the boundary falls the land is part of the United States, and that the states are really united. The matter is mentioned merely for the edification of the ghosts of Dean Tucker and George III., wherever they happen to be roaming at the moment.

WHY AMERICA SLEPT.

Forrest Davis and Ernest K. Lindley, the Washington correspondents who have been favored by the confidences of the White House and the state department, believe that the surprise of Dec. 7 can be largely attributed to America's incapacity to comprehend abstract evil. Concerning the Japanese attack without warning, they say, "The standards of our civilization simply do not allow of that kind of behavior." Their idea is that because we would not act as the Japs acted, we felt the Japs could not act that way, either.

These views are set forth in the last of two articles on "How War Came," published in the Ladies' Home Journal, a curious medium for conveying semiofficial government pronouncements on world affairs.

Altho no one but a Nazi or a Jap would defend the morality of the sneak attack, the authors themselves offer little explanation of why our political and military leaders should have been caught so completely off guard. These men also may have been afflicted with incapacity to comprehend abstract evil, but it seems highly unlikely that they should have been.

The officers who compose the army and navy high command and the members of the state department are all professionals, trained not to deal with things as they might ideally be but with facts and things as they are.

The President and the state department had the example of Japan's past actions to serve as a guide. The officials could remember back to 1904, when Japan pulled another attack without warning. They could tell from the Japanese attack on Manchuria in 1931 and from the invasion of China in 1937 that Japan was not deterred by moral scruples. And, on top of all this, they were dealing with two shifty emissaries in Nomura and Kurusu who told them two weeks before Dec. 7 that they "could not answer for the conduct of their government" if Japan's views were not accommodated.

In August President Roosevelt had given himself until the middle of November to prepare for war with Japan. On Nov. 21, after the expiration of that time limit, Secretary of State Hull, according to Davis and Lindley, advised the President and the members of the "war" cabinet that "the issue was no longer diplomatic," advising them, too, to take care that the Japanese did not "stampede the hell out of our scattered forces" in the Pacific. On Nov. 26, after he had submitted the American counterproposals to the Japanese ambassadors, the authors say that "Mr. Hull had a feeling that he had reached the end of a mission. The defense period had come to its end and, Mr. Hull thought, war would not be far behind."

Thus the political and diplomatic leaders had no other idea than that war would be upon them at once. With that the fact, it was of little importance what the means would be. A constant state of alertness should have been prescribed in ordinary prudence.

The military and naval leaders, no more than the political and diplomatic leaders, had reason to be babes in the woods. But the Japanese troop concentrations in Indo-China, making feints toward Siam, diverted all minds from the possibility of attack elsewhere. Davis and Lindley say that part of the fault lay with military and naval intelligence—or the weighing and use of such reports as were received by the ranking officers in both services.

The lack of coördination among responsible commanders and the failure to give weight to the soldier's report of the approach of unidentified planes have been amply recited in the Roberts report.

In the Philippines, Davis and Lindley say, 60 per cent of our air power, including flying fortresses lined up for a raid on Formosa, was destroyed on the ground in the first Japanese air raid over Manila. Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, is said by the authors to have told Secretary Hull earlier that if he could fend off hostilities until Dec. 10, the Philippines would be in shape to make an attempt at invasion not only costly but hazardous. But the number of flying fortresses at Clark field on Nov. 15 is set at only 35, with others on the way, plus some old medium bombers, a number of PBY naval patrol ships, and a group of recent pursuits, while trained troops, even after reinforcements, consisted only of 14,000 Americans and 10,000 Philippine scouts, as against 150,000 Japanese in nearby Formosa.

The facts outlined by the authors on the basis of information that they received from the White House and the state department indicate that the failures of Dec. 7 and later cannot be assigned wholly or even in large part to ingrained attitudes about what is ethical and what is not in the conduct of a nation. The failures were professional failures by men who had all the background knowledge, all the current information, and every opportunity and means of evaluating them properly, and yet could not read the writing on the wall. The miscalculations were all by men who had no excuse for miscalculating.

LEADERSHIP IN STRATEGY

An atmosphere of unreality surrounds lay arguments concerning whether or not a second front should be opened. For if the question merely concerned the desirability of a second front, as so much of that discussion assumes, the answer would be simple and easy. A second front to keep Russia in the war as an effective fighting force was never more desirable, never, in fact, more desperately necessary, than it is at this moment. This need is so great that high risks and heavy losses would be warranted in order to establish it.

All this should be beyond dispute. The real question is whether the attempt to establish such a second front at this time could hope to meet with even a reasonable chance of success, or whether it would be foredoomed to disastrous failure. And this is a question that only the military authorities are in a position to answer. They could not even make public the basis on which the British and American publics could decide the soundness of their answer without revealing information of crucial value to the enemy.

There are some leading military questions, however, that can be both safely and helpfully debated in public. One of these, certainly, is what changes in organization are necessary to hasten the opening of a second front or to increase its prospects of success if opened.

Both Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt, it becomes increasingly clear, have tried to plan and direct too much of the strategy of the war themselves. This is a grave mistake for several reasons. It is not merely that Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt are primarily civilian leaders rather than professional war strategists. What is more serious, their war strategy is only a part time job, and in the nature of things cannot be anything else. If anything ought to be glaringly obvious, it is that the planning and execution of the major strategy of the war must, to be effective, be a full time job. Whoever is primarily responsible for major strategy must bring a constantly fresh and vigorous mind to the problem. It is dangerous even for him to be buried too much in the routine of executing the strategy, lest his general planning lose its edge and perspective. Least of all can he afford to make snap strategic decisions on this point or that when he is tired, harassed, distracted by routine duties and a hundred other decisions.

Yet this is precisely the position of the British prime minister and the American President. Consider the average day of the President, with its endless round of conferences, visitors, study, signing of documents. Consider the hundreds of decisions he is called upon to make—on price policy, wage policy, tax policy, farm policy, rubber, shipping, steel, pipe lines, and the reports and problems of scores of government agencies. How can the President possibly have the time and the freshness of mind to make the numerous, complicated, and grave decisions that are necessary on the war's strategy?

Yet as the war organization is at present set up he is the man who must make these decisions. Gen. Marshall cannot give orders to Adm. King nor Adm. King to Gen. Marshall. When they disagree on strategy they must submit their disagreement to the President to be settled; perhaps even if they agree they must get the President's detailed acceptance. This forces the President to make decisions on questions on which he cannot possibly have the time properly to inform himself.

The Adm. Leahy appointment, under the conditions announced, does not change this situation. What is needed is not another "adviser," another man to do "leg work" and "index" work, but a commander with the power of making all but the most crucial decisions on his own responsibility. On major decisions he must necessarily consult the President, who must retain ultimate power and responsibility; but the President should accept the advice of his chosen joint chief of staff on all points unless he has the strongest reasons for dissenting.

As a result of our present system, in Britain and America, we should expect, instead of a bold, foresighted, comprehensive master plan of strategy, an ill prepared, haphazard, fragmentary, improvised strategy. And there is some reason to believe that this is precisely the kind of strategy that the united nations have had. Granted the formidable problem and difficulties that we face, as the result of factors not within the control of Mr. Churchill or Mr. Roosevelt, the united nations have failed thus far to provide an example of the kind of daring, unorthodox strategy that resulted in the conquest of Crete. Partly thru lack of early enough planning and preparation, we are losing the battle of the Atlantic. The announced loss of more than 400 ships in the Atlantic since January is closely connected with the chances of opening a second front now and with the prospect for the success of such a front if opened.

The problems of establishing such a front successfully are immense. They are unlikely to be solved satisfactorily until Britain and America get full time strategists directed by a unified command, first within each nation and then for the united nations as a unit.

NEVER AGAIN.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

In his book, "The Impact of War," published before Pearl Harbor, Prof. Pendleton Herring of Harvard university warned it was thru more good luck than good sense that America's traditional policy of military unpreparedness had not resulted in defeat. All too soon and tragically have events of the last seven months fulfilled his prophecy that the time is not far off when that policy might lead to disaster.

The pacifistic theory that the way to stay out of war is not to prepare for it is now thoroly discredited. Had England and the United States been prepared for this war as Germany was, it is probable the war never would have started. Had the United States the reserve army, the air force, and the navy last December which it expects to have before this war is over, Japan certainly would not have attacked us. Who is there who will say now that a year of universal, peacetime military training would have been detrimental to the American way of life—or would have worked an undue hardship on those thousands of American young men who lost either their lives or their liberty at Bataan and Corregidor?

The study which the war department is now making preparatory to the introduction in congress of a permanent universal service bill, requiring a period of military training for every American youth henceforth, is not a war measure. Passage of such legislation would be the most practical step toward permanent peace ever taken by this nation. For we know by experience that if there is to be any peace those nations who desire peace must be prepared to overwhelm those nations who would destroy it.

In the past, unpreparedness has been an expensive luxury. To try it again would be an inexcusable crime against posterity.

VACATION CARE OF THE HANDS AND FEET.

THE reason we have more eruptions on the feet in the summer is explained by the fact that we walk about barefooted or in "sneakers." As a rule, we house our pedal extremities sensibly. Then suddenly—with a week or more in the open — we throw discretion to the wind and expect the parts to remain perfectly well. Our skin specialists tell us that their offices are crowded subsequent to every vacation season.

What are some of the common blemishes which may attack the hands or feet? What appears at first to be nettle rash, with slight itching, may develop into a myriad of small vesicles [blisters], extending from the finger nails to the wrists. Without waiting to determine the "woodsy" culprit we may proceed promptly with treatment. Thoro scrubbing with soap and water comes first. After drying, nothing gives more comfort than calamine lotion. A few days of repeated applications will usually banish the lesions.

Of course, we must not forget ringworm, which is so likely to be acquired at public beaches and in locker rooms. If a chlorine tub is not available subsequent to a dip, a good scrub after reaching home is in order. The spread of the disorder, particularly among school children, is indicated by the fact that routine examinations may show infection among 50 per cent of those who use public pools. The disease is not severe and a casual inspection may not disclose the fungus. During the summer months, however, the malady may become more acute. After softening of the cuticle between the toes watery blisters may appear which usually dry within a few days. Then comes peeling and the possible manifestation of smaller lesions in the vicinity. Nine times out of 10 this means ringworm.

The tendency to ingrowing toenails will be aggravated by more hiking and greater activity. In consequence, the edges of the horny covering may be pressed deeper and deeper into the soft tissues. The remedy is to provide well fitting footgear and keep the toenails trimmed straight across at right angles to the long axis of the structure. Open end shoes tend to aggravate the condition inasmuch as the great toe bears the brunt of the pressure.

Finally corns and calluses may render walking uncomfortable. All such affairs go back to uneven weight bearing. A callus is nothing more than nature's attempt to erect a firm barrier against undue strain. But distress will certainly arise because these protectors may in themselves function much like a pebble in the shoe. First of all, the job is to remove them and then distribute the force more evenly.

Those who are troubled with pain in the extremities will do well to soak the feet in hot water for 20 minutes before bedtime. Not only will more blood be poured into the area but dead surface cells will be softened, rendering removal easy. After the bath and thoro drying, gentle massage may be employed in which the toes are bent downward forcibly and kept in that position for a few minutes. This maneuver may be repeated over and over with real benefit. It will strengthen the arches and increase the power of muscles and tendons.

BEATING SENSATION IN THE THROAT.

Mrs. N. L. writes: I weigh 210 pounds and am 5 feet 6 inches in height. My blood pressure is very high. A beating sensation in my throat is most annoying. What would you suggest?

REPLY.

First, reduce your weight. Lose 40 pounds gradually—not more than 1 pound a week. The sensation you experience is from your heart which is working too hard. We have a leaflet on the management of high blood pressure which may be obtained by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

SCAR ON FACE.

M. J. writes: Will a skin graft be successful on a facial scar that is of 14 years standing?

REPLY.

Yes. Grafts will grow if the circulation is adequate. It is assumed that you are in skilled hands. The original scar, of course, will be removed.

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Space for letters is obviously limited. Incoming mail far exceeds it. If a letter is not printed, attribute it to lack of room. Address letters to Voice of the People, The Tribune.

VOLUNTEER SOCIAL WORKER.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—We note an appeal from the Council of Social Agencies for volunteer workers in social service. It is to be hoped that when we do volunteer for this service that we will be spared the smug, patronizing manner of the professional worker toward us. From them we hear the oft repeated warning that we must not expect to secure any rating for the work that we do and that we need never hope for a paying job, so fearful are they that some person outside their select group should ever be competitive with them. Many of us who have tried to help out in the past have been so deeply offended at this manner that we have become discouraged in our efforts to help unfortunate ones given to our care. After all, it is hard to be enthusiastic when the professionals are constantly reminding the volunteers that they have not and may never have the ability to perform even the meanest sort of helpful work, which is the kind ordinarily given the volunteer to do. Experience on at least three occasions makes one wary of again volunteering.

As we are now in a great emergency, may it be possible to get a promise from the agencies that they accept the service of volunteers in the spirit in which it is offered, and understand that one is not attempting to invade the sacred precincts of professional social service. If this can be done, we may try it again.

ONLY A VOLUNTEER.

SWIMMING PERIODS.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—My daughter is a freshman at Sullivan High school. Last semester she had swimming [compulsory] once a week. I bought the best diving cap I could find, but she always got her hair wet, as did the other girls. If the swim period is early in the day it is all right, but if swimming comes just before the time to go home these girls have to go out without getting their hair dry. I feel that this is particularly dangerous in the winter. My daughter walks one and one-half miles home. It has been rumored that on account of war activities there will be two swimming periods a week and right here I wish to make my protest. Once a week is enough for swimming—and the time allowed afterwards for taking a shower, dressing and drying the hair, should be more than 12 or 14 minutes. Many girls, who do not care to take swimming, get their physicians to make out statements asking that the girl be excused from swimming because of ear trouble, or sinus, or throat trouble.

BATH HOUSES.

Chicago, July 29.—The taxpayers have apparently spent considerable money, lately, on various improvements along the lake front. How much extra would it have cost to construct a bathing beach [or two] which would provide bathers with such reasonable facilities as dressing rooms and clothes lockers? Other cities provide the people with such comforts. In Detroit, for instance, there is a bathing beach where for 15 cents each bather receives a bathing suit, a towel, a clothes locker, a key, the use of a dressing room and the privilege of checking his valuables. The income should make the service more than self-supporting.

Permitting bathers of both sexes and all ages to undress in the open and leave their clothes on the ground has, to my knowledge, become obsolete in more uncivilized communities than Chicago. If it has become revived as an "up to date fashion," then my name is

SPRINGFIELD VS. GARAND.

Ishpeming, Mich., Aug. 3, 1942—X. Y. Z.'s criticism in your Sunday edition is based on misinformation. The old Springfield rifle is today one of the best military rifles in use.

The Garand rifle functions semi-automatic.

Both rifles use the Springfield barrel and fire the same ammunition. Their accuracy is the same.

The semiautomatic rifle is one of the gadgets that Hitler did not adopt for his infantry units. Special troops are armed with a small, compact automatic weapon that uses somewhat lighter ammunition than the regular infantry rifle.

There are two schools of training relative to individual rifle fire, one theorizes thusly, "Only the shot that hits is the shot that counts." This requires intensive training and is the basis of the remarkable shooting power of our marine corps, the best shooting outfit in the world.

The other theory is based on securing hits thru delivering a volume of fire. This plan does not require long periods of intensive training.

The tradition of our American riflemen in war is based on the accuracy of the fire of the individual soldier. The new rifle encourages rapid fire and leads to a waste of ammunition.

The writer has fired about all the military rifles in use and his choice is for the old Springfield. However, the Garand is a sweet shooting rifle.

POLITICIANS' PLAQUES.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—As a war resource, why not melt up and put the numerous plates of brass and other metals now gracing the hallways of public buildings or affixed to bridges or other improvements, bearing the names of public officials who happened to hold office when the taxpayers' money was used to erect the structures?

WAR SERVICE FOR THE HANDICAPPED.

Chicago, July 30.—We, the physically handicapped, have had to compete for a livelihood with the perfect specimens of manhood, altho most firms automatically disqualify us without giving us as much as a competitive opportunity. Yet many of us have been doing our jobs in a manner displaying far superior mentality and greater adaptability and precision than that of the perfect specimens, and doing it without taking as many hours off on sick leave.

Since there is such a demand for man power that our government finds it advisable to establish the WAAC to replace men released for combat duties it would seem only logical that we should be given an equal opportunity to join a similar organization. There must be thousands of us who have proven that we are doing a job well in our present places of employment. Many of us already have sons or brothers in the armed forces and we are more than anxious to have a chance to don a uniform with them. Given an opportunity, we will prove that we can aid the war effort to a far greater degree without all the pampering consideration necessarily given women. Many of us are accustomed to very severe hardships and privations that we have endured without whimpering. If there is any branch of the services where we may apply we would like to know it. If not, why not?

J. E. H.

BUT NOT JITTERBUGGING.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—In this time of tremendous events there are two possible ways of relaxing superior to others. These are dancing, especially waltzing, and music. Waltzing relieves the tension of the high speed, swift life we are now leading, whether we want to or not. A life in which charming, gracious music is possible is one of the aims of our present fight, for the spirit of real music has fled the Nazilands.

While we cannot work too fast now, our minds can be overextended. Music and dancing can relax that pressure.

Test Your Horse Sense

By Dr. George W. Crane

Select the answers which you consider best. The last problem counts five points. Then look for the correct answers on page 9, part 2.

1. Without using pencil and paper, tell me which of the fractions below is the equivalent of the decimal .875.
   4/5 2/3 7/8 3/4.
2. The term acoustics is applied to which of these?
   Light Sound Electricity Color.
3. A man who swallowed a politician's statements "hook, line, and sinker" would properly be described as Irascible Gullible Infallible Immutable.
4. Which one of these monetary terms was employed in the Bible?
   Farthing Peso Ruble Guilder.
5. Considering the source, which one of these is inappropriate in this general grouping? Applejack Cider Whisky Wine.

[b] Cinderella	[w] Needle and thread
[c] Little Red Hen	[x] Jinni
[d] William Tell	[y] Glass slipper
[e] Ali Baba	[z] Apple

Score yourself as follows: 0-2, poor; 3-6, average; 7-8, superior; 9-10, very superior. [Note—The last question counts five points.]

DOWER INTEREST.

Chicago, July 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. If a husband, residing in Indiana, has property in that state, does his wife acquire any dower interest in it assuming the property was already in his name at time of marriage?

2. Would the fact that this couple were legally married in another state affect the wife's dower rights in Indiana property held by the husband before their marriage and [3] in any property in any other state held by her husband before their marriage?

H. C.

1. Common law dower has been abolished in Indiana, but a deed by husband alone passes title to his lands subject to the wife's right to one-third thereof in fee at his death.

2. No.

3. Depends on the law of that state.

PAST DUE BILL.

Chicago, July 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I have been notified by a collecting company of a past due grocery bill.

1. This bill is easily 14 years old and to the amount of $130. Of these 14 years my husband and I and family were on the United Charities and Relief Commission 10 to 10½ years.

2. This man claims he can collect all over $20 of my husband's salary regardless of dependents of which there are seven.

3. My friends tell me this bill cannot be collected after seven years. I'd like very much to have your advice.

4. He says he has a note. We never did sign any and if he should have a forged signature of my husband [5] what can I do? I never did see the note he claims to have. We never signed any. He told me this over the phone [the collecting company]. My husband has only been working a year—hardly making enough to live on in these times.

M. R.

1. In absence of written contract the limitation period would be five years but on a written contract 10 years. A part payment or new promise would extend the period.

2. This would be true if he succeeds in obtaining a judgment, but see 1.

3. He is mistaken. See 1.

4. Ask him to exhibit it. The limitation period on a note would be 10 years from the maturity date

5. Present this defense if he brings suit on the note.

UNPAID TAXES.

Ottawa, Ill., July 21.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. I am holding a $2,000 mortgage on two vacant lots. The man that owns the lots has not paid the taxes for 10 years. Cook county is foreclosing vacant lots.

2. Will the county foreclose on these?

3. What will happen with my mortgage?

4. Could the county foreclose on these lots with the mortgage?

Y. J.

1. Since the tax liens come ahead of your mortgage, the effect of this accumulation is to cut down your margin of security. It probably would be advisable for you to act instead of permitting the margin slowly to become smaller.

AUTO UNION ASKS SUPREME BOARD ON WAR ECONOMY

Urges Committee to Raise Steel Production.

In a stinging attack upon governmental muddling of America's war effort, Walter P. Reuther, newly elected vice president of the United Automobile Workers' union [CIO], called yesterday upon delegates to the union's seventh annual convention in Hotel Sherman to demand that burocracy be ended so that democracy might be saved.

"The United States can lose this war, and is losing this war," Reuther shouted, "and it will continue its losing fight until the disconnected and scatter-brained attempt to control the war effort in Washington is replaced with an over-all board with power to conduct war production efficiently."

Reuther's address preceded unanimous adoption by the delegates of two resolutions censuring the government's conduct of the war effort on the home front and urging remedial action.

Attack Dollar-a-Year Men.

One resolution charged that most government agencies in control of organizing and directing the war economy are staffed with dollar-a-year men who "despite expressions of patriotism cannot free themselves from the narrow horrorisms and the restricting influence of the competitive habits of normal business thinking."

The resolution, which evoked applause from the 1,640 delegates, stated further that the present government practice of dividing responsibility for allocation of materials, machines, and manpower among separate agencies induces lack of coördination, and produces confusion, waste, and delay.

The delegates resolved to call upon President Roosevelt to create a supreme economic council in the organization and direction of the war economy, the council to be composed of outstanding representatives of management, labor, and government, and to take over the job of running the war on the noncombatant front.

Demand More Steel.

The second resolution attributed steel shortages in various industries to the failure of the army and navy and the WPB to plan and allocate proper distribution of essential materials and demanded that a committee of experts in the steel industry, both labor and management, be formed to plan and increase steel production. Such a committee, the resolution declared, could increase the annual steel output by 10,000,000 tons.

Reuther cited as an example of the government's "nonsensical" conduct of the war effort the policy followed in ordering 70,000,000 pairs of pants by the army.

Orders for 60,000,000 pairs went to the southern textile industry, Reuther said, while 10,000,000 were to be made in New York state, where 90 per cent of available workers were to be found.

As a result, he said, southern industry was obliged to build new plants, utilizing steel which was needed for armament production, and draft workers from the agricultural fields while qualified workers in New York walked the streets.

Countless instances of this same folly may be seen in the heavy industries, Reuther continued. One plant, manufacturing a single item to be used in the final assembly of a piece of armament may have tens of thousands of tons of steel in its reserve pile; another plant, making a piece equally essential, may be shut down for lack of steel, he said.

The WPB, he said, has degenerated into merely a supply agency. The American public, he charged, is being lulled into a false security by "chocolate covered" publicity from plant operators who "think we can win the war with press releases and ballyhoo."

Reuther told the delegates that any move to apply corrective measures must stem from the workers themselves; that management, because of its fear of losing contracts, will not enter the lists against its chief customer.

Oppose Ceiling on Wages.

The delegates approved a resolution demanding the elimination of wage differences for men and women in industry. Another resolution asked the government to refrain from all forms of wage freezing.

Earlier in the day, R. J. Thomas, president of the union, appealed to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins to avert a strike in a Los Angeles war production plant. Thomas telegraphed a request that action be taken immediately to bring about a conclusion of contract negotiations which have been in progress since last October at the plant of the Aluminum Corporation of America.

'YOUTH' LEADER GETS WEATHER POST IN ARMY

Friend of President's Wife Advanced.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—Joseph P. Lash, 32 year old youth organization leader and friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, is seeing the war thru a weather observer's telescope at Bolling field, Virginia, it was learned today.

According to army officers, this means he has not had to suffer the usual rigors undergone by ordinary buck privates. They said only men with "very special" training or background are not required to take the basic army training.

Denied Commission.

Reportedly backed by Mrs. Roosevelt, Lash applied for a commission in the navy early this year. He was rejected, however, after members of congress protested. On April 28 he was inducted into the army at Fort Dix as a private, and received three weeks of basic training and had to learn to handle a gun.

In 1939 Lash was questioned by the Dies committee investigating un-American activities and at that time denied he was a Communist.

A recent war department release on weather observers stated that this assignment is one of the "toughest" in the army to get. A knowledge of mathematics and physics is usually required, it was said.

Studied Philosophy.

Records show that Lash received a B. A. from the City College of New York and a master's degree from Columbia university. An army spokesman said it is understood that most of Lash's university subjects were in literature and philosophy.

An announcement from Bolling field said Pvt. Lash's assignment was "on the basis of educational background and aptitude." It was also stated that Lash "likes his work" and is regarded by his commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Norman Peterson, to be one of the best observers on the post.

STORM SKIRTS 30,000 HEARING OUTDOOR OPERA

Gladys Swarthout in Good Voice in 'Carmen.'

"CARMEN."

Opera in four acts. Music by Georges Bizet. Libretto by Meilhac and Halevy, after a novel by Merimee. Presented by the Chicago Opera company in Soldiers' field, Saturday evening, Aug. 8, 1942.

THE CAST.

Carmen	Gladys Swarthout
Micaela	Licia Albanese
Don Jose	Jan Kiepura
Escamillo	John Charles Thomas
Frasquita	Jane Johnston
Mercedes	Margery Mayer
Morales	Wilfred Engelman
Zuniga	Mark Love
Dancairo	Wilfred Engelman
Remendado	Michael Signorelli
Ballet Master and Premier Danseur	Walter Camryn
Premiere Danseuse	Ruth Pryor
Conductor	Carlo Peroni
Stage director	Philip Fein

BY CECIL SMITH.

Fortune Gallo, general director of the Chicago Opera company, demonstrated the appropriateness of his first name last night, for fortune smiled upon the opera company's first outdoor production, as rain and lightning skirted the Soldiers' field performance of "Carmen." When the end of the second act came Gallo and his staff breathed deep sighs of relief, for they were then relieved of the necessity of redeeming the customers' rain checks with another performance tonight.

Exceeds Lily Pons' Crowd.

If rain had descended upon the outdoor throng it would have been a catastrophe of some magnitude. In happy contrast to the recent Lily Pons concert, a throng of 30,000 filled all the seats in the area set aside for the opera, and a continuous line of standers formed a semicircle in front of the wall at the foot of the bleachers.

Altho the price scale last night was only half as high as that for winter opera in the Civic Opera house, Mr. Gallo was wise enough not to economize in choosing his cast. Gladys Swarthout, whose characterization of the gypsy heroine is the most consistently and tastefully conceived of any on the present operatic stage, sang with musicianly beauty of tone and style and, to my way of thinking, created a more legitimate and believable Carmen than all the women who work hard to make the character tempestuous and sexy.

In the famous quarrel scene in the third act Jan Kiepura [Don Jose] so energetically entered into the spirit of his rôle that Miss Swarthout was stunned for several seconds. That occurred when he threw her to the ground. She recovered between acts.

"Mr. Kiepura is very realistic," she said. "He became a little excited and didn't mean to handle me so hard."

Like all his associates in the cast, Jan Kiepura was in superb voice, and delivered the Flower song with great bravura. Visually he is good when seen from a great distance, and the customers on the high ramparts of the stadium were fortunate to be relieved of an opportunity to study his mannered acting. John Charles Thomas projected the Toreador song magnificently. Licia Albanese sang the lyric music of Micaela with exquisitely flowing liquid tone.

Performance Has Animation.

The small parts were handled expertly, especially by Mark Love and Wilfred Engelman. Under Carlo Peroni's baton the performance moved with animation and held together with a fusion not often achieved out of doors.

The opera was well lighted and presentably, tho hardly richly, staged. Because of a tense desire to beat the rain to the finish line, the scenery was not changed between the first and second acts, but the customers took the lack of realism in good part.

HOLD INSPECTORS AT NAVY YARD ON BRIBERY CHARGE

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Two civilian inspectors of construction at the Brooklyn navy yard were arrested on bribery charges today in the second visit to the yards this week by agents of the federal bureau of investigation.

P. E. Foxworth, assistant FBI director, said one of those taken into custody, Albert L. Rodkin, 38 years old, an inspector at the yard, had admitted accepting fees from contractors for "favors." The other man held was Harry G. Sechtman, 30, employed at the yard since last May 19.

Samuel Sheber, 34, an inspector, had been arrested Wednesday and accused of asking a $250 fee from a contractor's employé.

Foxworth said Rodkin was arrested in 1923 on a charge of impersonating a secret service agent, and was sentenced to an 18 month term.

WOMAN, RESCUER BURNED.

Mrs. Jeanette Bierwalter, 45 years old, was severely burned yesterday when cleaning fluid she was using in her home at 1010 West 51st street burst into flames. Mrs. Lillian Carnits, 44, who lives downstairs at the same address, was seriously burned when she went to the rescue.

FINAL AUDIENCE NODS APPROVAL OF FASHION VOTE

An enthusiastic audience of more than 600 persons applauded the 30 winners of the American Fashions competition yesterday afternoon at the third and final presentation of The Chicago Tribune Fashion show in W-G-N's studio theater.

The contest was sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE as part of a nationwide search for beautiful, yet practical, clothes to be worn by American women in wartime. Merchants, manufacturers, and buyers attended a preview of the show Friday afternoon. The official fashion showing was Friday evening.

Especially popular with yesterday's audience was the beige afternoon dress, for which the grand prize of $3,000 was awarded to J. [Terry] Wilson of New York City.

Gold Clip at Throat.

The gown was of beige crêpe with insets of beige satin beneath flounces of crêpe from hips to hem. A gold clip was worn at the throat of the gown, and heavy gold link bracelets hung on the mannequin's wrists below the long, snug sleeves. Topping the winning design was a tiny calotte of crêpe with a large puff of blue fox, matching the stole the mannequin carried. Brown pumps and long beige gloves complemented the gown.

Immediately after yesterday's show, Betty Hayden, who modeled the prize winning gown, telegraphed her congratulations to Wilson in New York City, where he is confined by illness. He said yesterday that his illness had depleted his funds and that the cash prize is a timely windfall.

"First, I'll pay my debts, then I'll buy war bonds with the rest," he declared.

Fur Fools Regulations.

The second prize of $2,000 went to Harold Madsen of Brigham, Utah, for his entry of a smart beige wool suit trimmed with mink. The fur trimming, permitted by the War Production board, gave the suit an appearance of luxury despite regulations restricting the excessive use of cloth in apparel.

Honey haired Maurine Zollman, who modeled the suit, wore a beige pillbox hat trimmed with mink tails. Accessories included brown gloves, bag, and pumps. Her gold loop earrings, as well as jewelry worn by the other mannequins, were displayed thru the courtesy of the American Gem society.

Murmurs Indicate Approvals.

Murmurs of approval sped thru the audience as June Cox passed down the studio runway attired in the beige crêpe dinner dress for which its designer, Donald Frist of Clinton, Ind., was awarded the contest's third prize of $1,000. The low neckline and cut-out shoulders were framed by a fresco of crêpe and chiffon. The pencil slim skirt touched the floor. With the gown Miss Cox carried a sable scarf and wore ruby and diamond earrings and a gold bracelet.

India Moffett, women's editor of THE TRIBUNE, who with Marvin Mueller served as commentator, said that Frist is now a worker in a war industry. For several years he has alternated undertaking and dress designing. He has been a major award winner in all three of the American Fashions contests.

San Rafael, Cal., Aug. 8 (AP).—A two-motored army bomber crashed and sank in San Pablo bay today, evidently killing its crew of three air force officers and an enlisted man.

Hamilton field said the missing flyers were: First Lieut. Robert E. Holland, of Benton, Ky., pilot; First Lieut. Meinrad J. Endres Jr. of Muenster, Tex., co-pilot; Second Lieut. Richard R. Longnecker, of Houston, Tex., nagivator, and Roy M. Frette, Badger, Ia., radioman.

Two Killed in Crash.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—The navy today announced the death of Ensign Paul Knox and Aviation Chief Machinist Mate Jesse Lockwood in the crash of their navy training plane in a woods three miles south of Alexandria, Va. Both were from Philadelphia. The announcement did not state the cause of the crash, which occurred this morning.

SWEDISH RELIEF SHIP CHARTERED FOR RED CROSS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—The Red Cross announced today it had chartered the Swedish motor ship Kanangoora to carry relief supplies to war prisoners held by Japan.

The 7,000 ton ship, owned by the General Steamship company, is at San Francisco preparing to load the supplies, but Chairman Norman H. Davis said sailing woud be held up until the Japanese government pledged safe conduct for the ship.

The relief supplies, Davis said, would be not only for American civilian and military prisoners but for all united nation prisoners in Hongkong, the Philippine Islands, Shanghai, and in prison camps in Japan.

While the Japanese espionage film had been doing badly, business had been good for "The Invaders" and audiences have applauded heartily.

LATIN AMERICAN CATHOLICS TO AID IN U. S. SEMINAR

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—The national Catholic welfare conference announced today that 15 Latin American social action leaders, including two bishops and the rectors of two Catholic universities in Colombia, have accepted invitations to participate in the inter-American seminar on social studies beginning here Aug. 24.

One week of the seminar will be held in Washington, one session at the University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind.; three sessions in Chicago; one each in Detroit, Mich., and Buffalo, N. Y., and three in New York City.

SECT MEMBER MOTHER GUILTY IN SALUTE CASE

Faces Jail if Children Fail to Honor Flag.

Judge Russell W. Smith in the La Porte county Superior court in Michigan City yesterday found Mrs. Hiram S. Blake, member of the Jehovah's Witnesses, guilty of contributing to the delinquency of her two daughters who were expelled from public school March 5 for refusing to salute the United States flag.

Mrs. Blake received a suspended sentence of 30 days in the La Porte county jail on the provision she instruct her daughters, Lila, 10 years old, and Joan, 12, to salute the flag and that they comply when the fall school term begins Sept. 8.

Silent on Verdict.

Mrs. Blake, a Michigan City resident, accompanied by her daughters and surrounded by members of the Jehovah's Witnesses, listened to the verdict in silence and stalked out without comment. Her counsel at the trial July 29, Victor Switzer, was not present.

At the trial, Deputy Prosecutor Robert T. Wilson charged Mrs. Blake told her daughters, who attended the Park public school prior to their expulsion, not to salute the flag. Most of the testimony during the trial, which the deputy prosecutor termed a test case, hinged on the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom.

Denies Salute Banned.

Mrs. Blake testified July 29 she had never instructed her children to salute the flag nor had she told them not to. "I taught them the Bible; the rest is up to them," she said.

On the stand her daughters said their interpretation of the Bible led them to believe saluting "was obeisance to a false image."

Judge Smith said he based his decision on one handed down by the United States Supreme court June 3, 1940, in Minersville School District vs. Gobitis, a similar case.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 8 (AP).—Two hundred military police were called into the Japanese assembly center at Santa Anita Tuesday to quell a disturbance, the wartime civilian control administration disclosed today.

The WCCA said an evacué suspected by his followers of being an informer, was badly beaten by a crowd of Japanese. He was rescued and taken to a hospital.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

J. V. writes: "I am just over 18 and registered in the last draft, and I've already tried to enlist in the regular services as well as in all of the 'reserve' training programs, but I've been turned down everywhere because of my eyes and being underweight. I am in my second year at a university majoring in chemistry. I can't get a job because they tell me I am likely to be drafted, and so I can't earn money to keep going to school. Isn't there some way I can keep going? I hate to quit school if I can't fight."

ANSWER: Monthly loans by the government are to be made available this fall to students who are registered in accelerated programs in degree granting universities and colleges. Students who are in need of funds and whose technical or professional education can be completed within two years, and who are majoring in engineering, physics, chemistry, medicine [including veterinary], dentistry, and pharmacy will be eligible for the loans if they continue to maintain satisfactory standards of scholarship. Loans will be made in amounts not exceeding tuition and fees plus $25 a month, and not exceeding a total of $500 during any 12 month period. The loans will bear 2½ per cent interest, and will be canceled if the borrower is drafted physically disabled, or dies. The student should apply thru the dean or faculty advisor of the school.

N. J. writes: "I am 68 years old, and my son, on whom I depended for my living, was inducted in April, 1942. I have been informed that I will not be allowed to keep any chickens, hogs, cows, etc., or that any land may be under cultivation whatsoever, if I am to receive allotments from my son. Must the farm lay completely idle for duration of the allotments?"

ANSWER: The regulations governing the administration of the allotment and allowance act already have been amended several times. As the administration of the act proceeds, it will be subject to more and more interpretations. The latest amendment making allotments to class A dependents states that if the service man is not [wife, child, stepchild, divorced wife, etc.] the service man must allot to a parent or parents if it can be established that the parent or parents were in fact dependent upon him for support one year prior to his induction.

J. J. S. asks: "Is there any branch of service in which a trainman could put his experience to use?"

ANSWER: Write to Office, Chief of Engineers, New War Department Building, Washington, D. C. Clerical help is not sought or needed. If you are now in service and are not assigned to this type of work, write to this office giving your name in full, serial number, current military assignment, name of railroad in which you were employed, and your experience.

A. W. P. asks: "If a civil service employé enlists or is inducted, are his ratings and job guaranteed by the government?"

ANSWER: Yes, for the duration and six months thereafter.

DO YULE MAILING EARLY—IF IT'S FOR BOYS OVERSEAS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—More than four months in advance, the war department advised the public today to do its Christmas mailing early to soldiers overseas.

Postal officials urged that holiday packages, cards, and letters be mailed in October, explaining that anything sent after Nov. 1 "very likely" would fail to reach the soldier before Christmas.

No package may weigh more than 11 pounds, or measure more than 18 inches in length or 42 inches in length and girth combined. No more than one package a week may be mailed by one person. Food or clothing should not be sent, the army said.

Figures Cited as Sabath Asks Bigger Flow.

Records of the level of Lake Michiman for the last 21 years were cited by engineers of the Chicago Sanitary district yesterday in support of their contention that water diversion does not affect the rise or fall of the lake.

The evidence was produced following the announcement Thursday in Washington, D. C., by Rep. Adolph J. Sabath [D., Ill.] that hearings may be held next month by the house rivers and harbors committee on his bill to authorize diversion of 5,000 cubic feet of water a second from Lake Michigan by the sanitary district.

The diversion at present is limited to 1,500 cubic feet per second by order of the United States Supreme court. Greater diversion is being sought to decrease pollution of the waters of the Calumet river and thus lessen the danger of disease to residents in communities near the river. Sabath also contends the increased flow into the river would provide navigation depths for small boats from the Great Lakes into the Mississippi river.

Several states other than Illinois that border on the Great Lakes have opposed increased diversion with the argument that the lake level would be lowered and navigation on the lakes hampered.

James M. Mercer, engineer for the sanitary district, said a 21 year record failed to establish any relationship between the amount of water diverted and the level of Lake Michigan.

Figures Dispute Charge.

In some years when the amount of diversionwas increased, Mercer found, the lake level actually rose, contrary to the theories of opponents of the increased flow. In some other years when the flow into the river was reduced, the lake level also dropped, the study showed.

For example, in 1927 the diversion of water averaged 6,990 cubic feet per second, and the level of Lake Michigan for the year averaged one foot below Chicago city datum, the commonly used base for measurement. In 1928, when the flow from the lake was increased to an average of 8,445 cubic feet per second, the lake level average rose more than one foot.

In 1930, diversion was reduced an average of 1,110 feet from the 1929 flow, but the level dropped 1.3 feet.

The following table shows the annual average water diversion in cubic feet per second and the average level of Lake Michigan from 1921 thru 1941.

1922	7,436	+0.02
1923	7,103	—0.56
1924	8,165	—0.90
1925	6,903	—1.78
1926	6,885	—1.84
1927	6,990	—1.00
1928	8,445	+0.02
1929	7,770	+1.60
1930	6,660	+0.30
1931	6,500	—1.10
1932	6,450	—1.60
1933	6,270	—1.85
1934	6,433	—2.10
1935	6,484	—1.84
1936	4,862	—1.71
1937	4,989	—1.82
1938	4,999	—0.97
1939	1,499	—0.44
1940	1,497	—0.75
1941	1,496	—0.95

Mercer said the level of Lake Michigan shows a broad cylical trend of ups and downs over a period of years and the trend has no apparent relationship to water diversion by the sanitary district.

Dog Who Saved Master from Bull to Get Medal

Herman, a German shepherd dog, who last spring saved his 83 year old master, J. H. Frank, a farmer living near Red Oak, by driving off an attacking bull, will receive a medal awarded by the Illinois Humane society. The medal reads "To Herman for Heroism." The dog drove off the bull, then stood guard over Frank until he was able to crawl to safety.

Married in East

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daniel Frey Jr.

Ensign Charles Daniel Frey Jr., son of Charles D. Frey, head of the advertising company by that name at 333 North Michigan avenue, was married to Sue Kingsley Carl of Chestnut Hill, Mass., in a ceremony performed in Boston yesterday. Young Frey was graduated from the United States training ship Prairie State in New York last Wednesday. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Carl of Chestnut Hill. The youth's parents live at 1435 North State parkway. They attended the ceremony.

CLERKS' UNION STILL HOPES TO FIND TREASURER

Members of local 1248 of the Retail Clerks' International Protective association have not given up hope of finding Michael Savachka, their missing secretary-treasurer, Assistant State's Attorney William Crawford said yesterday. The union members wanted an accounting from the former union boss, Max Caldwell, a Capone gangster, but were unable to get it after Savachka disappeared, Crawford explained, because his books vanished with him.

Caldwell, who last winter bought a Miami, Fla. home from his boss, Frank [The Enforcer] Nitti, successor to Al Capone as gang leader here, has since been ousted from the union, Crawford said. It was known that he collected $900,000 from the members during his rulership, but when he was ousted there was only $62 in the treasury, the prosecutor recalled.

OUT OF A FRYING PAN, INTO GUNS; FAT GOES TO WAR

More than 2,500 pounds of glycerin to make high explosives was extracted from the 26,000 pounds of fats collected in Illinois last week, Robert Tieken and George M. Eisenberg, co-chairmen of the salvage committee, Illinois council of defense, reported yesterday.

The amount of fat, collected by rendering companies from butcher shops, showed a gain of 10,000 pounds over the amount collected during the first week of the drive. The drive is now in its fifth week.

The collection goal for Illinois is 50,000 pounds a week, Tieken said. A ceiling price of 4 cents a pound for light fats has been set by OPA.

LEE TRIUMPHS AGAINST STARR; YIELDS FIVE HITS

Warneke Victim in Overtime Game.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 8.—Bill Lee won his 11th victory of the season this afternoon when the Cubs supported him ably in a 3 to 0 conquest of the Cincinnati Reds in the second game of a double header. Lon Warneke and a hit starved Chicago cast lost the first game, 2 to 1, in 12 innings.

Warneke had three chances to accomplish the third out in the ninth inning for a 1 to 0 victory. But with two out in that ninth, the Reds tied the score with three singles in a row, then won in the 12th on a double and a single. The Cubs, in the meantime, had failed to get a runner on base after opening the seventh with an infield single.

Scheffing Batting Hero.

Lee yielded only five singles in the second game, the fifth after two were out in the ninth. Lee's main aid in an eight hit attack on Ray Starr was his battery mate, Bob Scheffing, who scored the first run on a single by Lou Stringer after opening the third inning with a single. Then Bob singled with the bases full in the next inning to drive in two superfluous runs.

Warneke, in the first game, had held the Reds to four scattered singles up to the ninth inning misfortune. With one out in the 12th Eddie Joost doubled and Frankie Kelleher banged a pinch single to send Joost home after Catcher Al Lakeman had been purposely passed. This became the 12th loss in 16 games the Cubs had played on their wearisome road trip. Lee's victory, therefore, was the fifth in 17 Cub tries since they left home.

Their Second Run of Week.

The run which the Cubs scored for their almost-victory in the opener was their second National league counter of the week. It was produced off Paul Derringer in the fifth inning on Clyde McCullough's double and a single by Stringer.

At the start of the seventh, Bob Sturgeon dribbled a single past Derringer and advanced on McCullough's sacrifice. Thereafter the Cubs were 100 per cent helpless offensively against Derringer thru the eighth and against Joe Beggs in the 9th, 10th, 11th, and 12th innings.

After Max Marshall and Gee Walker had been retired at the start of the ninth Frank McCormick caromed a single off Stan Hack's glove. Eric Tipton singled to right. Bert Haas ran the count to two balls and two strikes, then singled to right, scoring McCormick with the tying run. Then came the end in the 12th.

Cubs Miss a Big Chance.

The only threat the Cubs developed in the first game besides their one run onslaught in the fifth inning, came in the opening inning. Hack singled to left and stopped at third on Lou Novikoff's double to right, the Russian's only hit in nine times at bat during the afternoon. Then Jim Foxx fouled to Joost, Nicholson was given an intentional pass to load the bases and Gilbert fouled to Haas.

Scheffing did his first functioning on offense in the third inning of the second game. Bob opened the inning with a single, stole second as Lee struck out, and scored on Stringer's single to center.

In the fourth inning, the bases were loaded on singles by Foxx and Nicholson and a pass to Gilbert. Sturgeon forced Foxx at the plate on a tap to Frey, but Scheffing came thru with another single, scoring Nicholson and Gilbert. Lee grounded into a double play.

Stringer opened the fifth with a single, but thereafter it was three up and three down for the Chicagoans.

PAULINE BETZ UPSET VICTIM IN RYE FINALS

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—Louise Brough, 17 year old California girl, upset Pauline Betz of Los Angeles, second ranking player in the nation, for the eastern grass courts tennis title today. Miss Brough won in straight sets, 6-3, 7-5.

Seymour Greenberg of Chicago advanced to the final in the men's singles division with a 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 triumph over George Richards of Los Angeles, in an all left handed duel. Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Cal., gained the final from the upper bracket yesterday.

The doubles championships in both divisions also will be decided tomorrow. Schroeder and Sidney B. Wood of Southampton, N. Y., defeated George Ball of El Paso, Tex., and Richard Odman of Seattle, Wash., 6-3, 6-3, 6-4, in one semi-final match today. Charles Mattman of New York and William Talbert of Cincinnati, outlasted Alejo Russell of Argentina and Francisco Segura of Ecuador, 6-4, 8-6, 18-20, 7-5, in the other.

Mrs. Al Sabath's Alsab, making his first attempt to get back into the struggle for the 3 year old championship, ran fourth to Norman Church's Defense in the six furlong $2,500 Hinsdale handicap yesterday at Washington Park. Half an hour later, A. C. Ernst's Aletern, one of the colts which may oppose Alsab in the American Derby on Aug. 29, unleashed a mighty stretch drive to beat a band of older performers in the $7,500 Sheridan handicap at a mile and an eighth.

Tho beaten after going to the post as the 9 to 5 favorite, Alsab's showing was no particular surprise to any one. His opposition consisted of some mighty good sprinters which were known to be in very sharp condition. It was a foregone conclusion that Alsab would be outrun in the early stages and the question was whether his finishing power would tell in so short a race. It didn't. The leaders kept right on going.

Favorite 3½ Lengths Behind.

Defense, which had been engaged in a head and head duel with Sales Talk thru a large portion of the dash, shook off this rival in the last sixteenth and beat him by a length and a quarter. Woof Woof was in third place, a length and a half farther back—and he had three-quarters of a length on Alsab.

Thus Alsab was beaten a total of three and a half lengths in 1:11, the fastest six furlongs of the meeting to date. It was four fifths of a second slower than the track record. In view of the fact that this was his first start since recovering from a firing operation for a splint, Alsab's performance was by no means discreditable. He had been idle since running second to Shut Out in the Belmont stakes early in June.

Alsab's immediate major objective is the American Derby, and in the course of his preparation for this race he will be stretched out over steadily increasing distances until he's up to going a mile and a quarter again.

Alsab, Shut Out Due to Meet.

With victories in the Preakness and the Withers as a start, Alsab will try to go on and catch Shut Out, Mrs. Payne Whitney's colt which now has the major share of the 3 year old honors, with the Kentucky Derby, Belmont stakes, Classic, Yankee handicap, and Blue Grass stakes to his credit. The two are scheduled to meet in the American Derby.

Jockey Freddie Smith sent Defense to the front immediately after the break. Alsab got away well enough and clung to fourth position during the dash for the far turn. On the swing around the bend, the battle for the lead resolved itself into a head and head duel between Defense and Sales Talk. Meanwhile Alsab was dropping back to last place.

In the straightaway, Basil James called on him and Alsab responded with a brief rally. But it soon became apparent that he wasn't going to catch the leaders. Defense shook off Sales Talk in the last sixteenth and went on to win.

Aletern Wins Sheridan.

Aletern's run thru the stretch earned him a margin of a length and a half over Louis B. Mayer's Thumbs Up in the Sheridan handicap. Jamerica was third, half a length farther back.

Aletern and Thumbs Up, the only 3 year olds in the race, were followed home by a band of veteran handicap performers. Take Wing, the 5 to 2 favorite because of his victories in the Stars and Stripes at Arlington and the Flossmoor at Washington Park, finished last in the field of 11. Best Seller, second choice at 3 to 1 by virtue of his success in the Equipoise mile and the Skokie handicap, could get no better than eighth.

Thumbs Up was the 7 to 2 third choice and Aletern ranked fourth in the betting at somewhat less than 13 to 1. His payoff was $27.40, $10.20, and $6.60.

Aletern had been running in good company at Arlington Park, his best performance having been in finishing third to With Regards, beaten by a length and a quarter, in the Victory handicap on closing day.

WASHINGTON PARK'S first week of racing resulted in a heavier mutuel handle than for a corresponding period at Arlington Park's highly successful meeting. Yesterday's handle of $788,438 brought the week's total up to $3,158,672. Arlington handled $2,813,558 its first week.

Hoerst, Phils' Southpaw, Commissioned an Ensign

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP).—Frank Hoerst, the Phils' 24 year old southpaw pitcher, was notified by the navy department today that he will be commissioned an ensign in the naval reserve. Hoerst, a graduate of La Salle college, will be sworn in Tuesday and will report Sept. 10 for active duty. He was married last January.

Patty Retains National Junior Tennis Crown

BY C. H. BEUKEMA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Culver, Ind., Aug. 8.—Budge Patty of Los Angeles kept his national junior tennis championship today. He beat Tom Falkenburg of Hollywood, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, and did it in the same way he'd won eight of nine sets in his four matches previous to today, by scoring accurate placements, forcing his opponent into frequent errors and generally keeping on top of the play thruout.

Today's result was simply a repetition of previous Patty-Falkenburg matches. But it had the added importance of putting Patty's name for a second time on the big silver bowl first won in 1914 by Harold A. Throckmorton.

Patty and Bob Win Doubles.

Patty and Tom's younger brother, Bob Falkenburg, then went on to win the junior doubles, beating Art MacDonald and Tom, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, in finals that followed completion of semi-finals on Culver Military academy's courts.

The semi-finals, halted yesterday by weather, saw Patty and Bob Falkenburg defeat Jim Brink of Seattle and Fred Kovaleski of Hamtramck, Mich., 7-5, 3-6, 6-3, and Tom Falkenburg and MacDonald whip John Brock of Los Angeles and Ted Norpoth, Houston, Tex., 6-4, 6-1—again setting up a brother against brother and Californian against Californian final.

Titles Back to California.

The doubles championship thus moved back to California, whence Chicago's Jimmy Evert and Bob Smidl took it a year ago, traveling along with the singles title that has remained there so long. And after Patty, the Falkenburgs, and MacDonand had set up an all-California singles semi-final it didn't seem amiss that the same four should be in the doubles final. That quartet are chums at home, and they're pals here—to such an extent, in fact, that last night Tom Falkenburg had to call off a

MATHISEN 1 UP ON CHICK EVANS IN CITY FINAL

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Harold Mathisen of Woodridge was 1 up on Chick Evans of Edgewater last night at the end of the first 18 holes of their 36 hole match for the 38th city amateur golf championship at Jackson park. They will resume the battle with the second 18 holes this morning, teeing off at 10:15 o'clock.

The foregoing paragraph may seem perfunctory and purely informative, but it is intended to convey simply the status of one of the finest bouts in our town's oldest established golf event. Harold Mathisen is not just a guy named Harold. He happens to be about the best public links player Chicago ever has seen. This pleasantly deliberate young man of 33, who swings golf clubs when he isn't testing steel on a night shift in a South Chicago plant, has been a member of the Chicago National Public links foursome four times. That would be enough of a recommendation, but Harold also happens to have won this same city amateur title on three other occasions, 1934, 1935, and 1937, after a runner-up thrust in 1933.

And this Evans who is still giving Mathisen a ball game all the way? O, he's just Charles J. Evans Jr., who en route to a national open and two national amateur crowns [they lost track of all the Westerns Chick won] came out to this same Jackson park course as a beknickered youth of 17 in 1907, and won the first of three city amateur crowns. The smiling 52 year old Edgewater veteran has been enjoying this week almost as much as he has the work he has done the last four years in making the national intercollegiate the best amateur event in the game.

Yesterday afternoon Chick showed his relish for the homecoming appearance by rallying from a three hole deficit at the ninth to pull up within a one hole arrearage at intermission, and made a goodly try for a match

DOUBLE WORKOUTS BEGIN TODAY; ZUPPKE ORDERS GATES LOCKED

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Four teams of college All-Star football men went thru their first formal practice yesterday afternoon in Dyche stadium to start a 20 day period leading to the battle with the Chicago Bears in Soldiers' field Aug. 28. The boys reported in uniform at 3 o'clock and for three hours Head Coach Bob Zuppke and his assistants kept them diligently at their lessons.

Zuppke selected from his briefcase six plays that he considered fundamental in the attack he will teach, and he stressed the timing of the plays as essential not only to their execution but to later formations which will be based on them.

Opening drill was preceded by a morning of informality after a visit to the Northwestern university equipment room in the lower reaches of the stadium. By lunchtime 40 players were on hand and the number increased steadily thruout the afternoon and evening.

Aids Are Well Known, Too.

Zuppke was assisted at opening practice by Lon Stiner, coach of the Oregon State Rose bowl champions; Homer Norton, whose Texas Aggies retained their Southwest conference title last fall, and by Lynn Waldorf and Burt Ingwersen, head coach and line coach, respectively, of Northwestern. Frank Leahy of Notre Dame, the other assistant All-Star coach, completed his work at a coaching school in Lubbock, Tex., yesterday, and will report as soon as possible at Northwestern.

The ninth annual game between the All-Stars and the champions of the National Football league already is assured first place in the sport world by the donation it will make to Army Emergency Relief and Navy Relief. Normal profits from the game are expected to exceed $40,000. The special fund for army relief this morning totals $108,000 so that the All-Star game, sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, will turn over to the service charities approximately $160,000. This sum will be the largest contribution from any single sports event.

Pros Lead in Series.

The All-Stars, by virtue of three consecutive defeats at the hands of professional champions, trail in the eight game series, 4 to 2. Tie games were played with the Chicago Bears in 1934 and the Detroit Lions in 1936. Zuppke and his staff are determined that the college men shall win Aug. 28. To this end, Zuppke yesterday ordered that all practices will be secret.

Other All-Star squads have held "secret" practices, but frequently friends of players and coaches have been granted admission. Yesterday's edict was all embracing. Newspaper photographers had to show credentials and so did reporters. All others were barred.

The order for secret practice is most logical, for Zuppke's plans permit no infractions of the rule if he wishes to surprise the Bears with his strategy. His plays will involve formations that might be ineffective if information leaked out to the pros in their Delafield, Wis., camp. Zuppke, the old master, is determined that George Halas, his former pupil, shall not whip his collegians.

Practice Blocking and Tackling.

The All-Stars will hold two drills today, marking the beginning of a week during which double practices will be routine.

Near the conclusion of yesterday's work on attack the All-Stars were given 20 minutes of blocking and tackling. The heavy canvas dummies were set up in the sand pit at the south end of the inclosed field and the players took off in the hardest first day's work we have seen in nine campaigns. Zuppke was not concerned with the individual technique.

"Hit the dummy as you were taught in college," he told the men. "That proved effective for you last year and I want you to continue to block that way."

The head coach gave no other instructions yesterday, but he will address the squad when all members have reported to explain the rules under which the All-Star camp will operate.

Lach Injures Shoulder.

Steve Lach, Duke university half back, is the first casualty of the All-Star camp. In yesterday's passing and running drills, Lach stumbled and fell while going at top speed. He landed on his right shoulder and preliminary examination by Trainer Carl Erickson indicated that there might be a bone separation. Lach's arm was placed in a sling and he was sent to the team physician to have it X-rayed.

Nine of the players who were chosen to start the game against the Bears in the National poll participated in the opening drill. The only men missing were Jack Graf, Ohio State university full back, who was en route to camp by automobile and arrived later in the day, and Mal Kutner, University of Texas end, who also is on the way.

Other members of the All-Stars starting team are Bernie Crimmins, Notre Dame guard; Dick Erdlitz, Northwestern university quarter back who received the highest indi-

'VICTORY BALL' TO GO TO BUYER OF MOST BONDS

BY ARCH WARD.

How would you like to get the ball that will be used in the game between the College All-Americans and Chicago Bears in Chicago's ninth annual All-Star game in Soldiers' field the night of Aug. 28?

Well, it's yours for a price, and the amount is up to you.

The "Victory Football" will go to the person who purchases the greatest amount of war bonds between tomorrow, when the competition opens, and noon of Aug. 27, the day before the game. They must be bought at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn or in Tribune Tower.

Tomorrow, for example, Mr. Blank may own the ball, because of his $100 war bond purchase. The next day J. J. Phan may take possession by shelling out $150. The high man or woman at noon Aug. 27 will be declared the winner and the ball will be presented to him or her the day after the game.

This may be the last All-Star game until after the united nations win the war. The "Victory Football", made specially for the Chicago contest of white leather with black stripes, will become more valuable as a souvenior thru the years. Some of the young men whose brilliance during their collegiate or professional careers earned them a place in the All-Star game will be playing football for the last time. Many of them already are in the service of their country. Others soon will be.

Campaign for Army Relief Fund Has Reached $108,000.

The All-Star game already stands as sport's greatest contribution to the war effort. The special campaign for Army Emergency Relief has reached $108,000. The sale of tickets at established prices has broken all records for the event. The total donations to Navy Relief and Army Emergency Relief will approximate $160,000. No other sporting contest in the nation has come close to that figure.

The war bond drive with the "Victory Football" as an added incentive for immediate purchase will be further evidence that a sport's event can be used successfully in the prosecution of a war.

They're Getting Ready—Are You?

Yes sir, the All-Americans are practicing at Northwestern university . . . the Chicago Bears are hard at work in Delafield, Wis. . . . They won't need a ticket to get into Soldiers' field the night of Aug. 28, because they have work to do as rivals in the ninth annual College All-Star football game. . . . It will be your pleasure and if you haven't your ticket, time is fleeting. . . . Over the counter NOW at these places and this price:

5th Defeat by Major Club; Grimes Stars.

Cleveland's Indians yesterday joined the growing list of major league clubs which have whipped the Great Lakes Naval training station baseball team. The American Leaguers visited the station and left with a 5 to 3 victory, accomplished in the presence of 8,000 recruits.

It was the 12th defeat of the season for the Bluejackets, their fifth against major league competition. They now have lost to the Cubs, Philadelphia Athletics, New York Giants, and Detroit Tigers in addition to the Indians. Seaman Johnny Rigney hopes to dispose of the jinx when the St. Louis Cardinals come aboard tomorrow afternoon.

The big hero of the afternoon was Oscar Grimes, utility infielder for the Indians, who played third base in the absence of Ken Keltner, the ailing slugger who remained in Chicago because of a back ailment. He was at the plate five times, scored four runs, hitting a double, single, and getting three walks.

Russ Meers, formerly of the Milwaukee Brewers, started for the Bluejackets, but was replaced by Fred Shaffer in the sixth. Meers yielded seven hits and four walks in five innings. Charles [Red] Embree, who spent the 1941 season with Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was Cleveland's winning pitcher, working six innings.

Macks Waste 13 Hits; Lose to Yankees, 8-4

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—After losing their last two games on the road, the Yankees came home today and made themselves right at home with a three home run attack that trounced the Philadelphia Athletics, 8 to 4.

Connie Mack threw his ace, Phil Marchildon, at the Yanks—and the bombers proceeded to trump him in a hurry. Charley Keller clouted his 17th homer of the year with two aboard in the first inning; Bill Dickey whacked his first with one on in the third, and Buddy Hassett belted his fourth with one on in the sixth.

BROWNS, 6; TIGERS, 4.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 8 (AP).—Defending fourth place, the St. Louis Browns defeated Detroit today, 6 to 4, for their second straight victory over the slumping Tigers, who now have lost five in a row.

BOY, 15, PITCHES NO HIT VICTORY AT SOUTH BEND

NAVY PIER RUNNER HITS THE DUST

CAMP GRANT NINE RALLIES TO BEAT NAVY PIER, 3 TO 1

Camp Grant batters terminated a pitcher's battle between Howie Martin, young soldier right hander, and Willard Van Hoose of Navy Pier yesterday in Wrigley field by scoring three runs in the last two innings to torpedo the navy, 3 to 1, for the second straight time.

Martin, in the army one week, yielded only six hits and one run to navy batters and struck out eight. Van Hoose yielded seven hits and struck out nine.

The Warriors drew first blood in the eighth. Capt. Joe Skurski opened with a single and went to second on Wrona's sacrifice bunt. Bobby Nadler, third baseman, slashed a single down the third base line to score Skurski and took second himself on the throw-in. Nadler took third on a wild pitch and scored on Poriask's dribbler to the first baseman.

Camp Grant made its third run in the ninth, when Turk Skurski scored from second on a single by Johnny Young.

Sports in Service
NEWS FROM ARMY AND NAVY POSTS

BY FRANK MASTRO.

Great Lakes.

THE station baseball team, managed by Lieut. Mickey Cochrane, will meet the St. Louis Cardinals on Constitution field tomorrow. . . . The squad lost hard games with the Detroit Tigers and Philadelphia Athletics recently, but believes its luck will change against the Cardinals, eighth major league team the sailor players have been asked to face this season. . . . Later in the month the St. Louis Browns and Cincinnati Reds will afford the opposition at this station. . . . Winner of the Officers' Softball league championship is expected to be determined Friday when the Ensigns and the Districts meet in a playoff game. . . . The rival delegations created this situation by each scoring its ninth triumph in ten starts on Tuesday, the Ensigns conquering Dental-Medical, 12 to 3, and the Districts defeating Supplies, 6 to 3. . . . The lone setback suffered by these teams was administered by the other.

Rudy Mucha, former member of the Cleveland Rams football eleven, pitched the Athletic office softball representatives to a 19 to 1 conquest of District disbursing in a Ship's company circuit game. . . . The giant lineman held District Disbursing to three hits, in addition to hitting a double and single in two official times at bat. . . . Liberty is a magic word to men in Service school. . . . While competing with 39 others in a swimming test recently, Sailor Bill Flavin swam 236½ feet under water to win a 12 hour liberty prize reward. . . . Martin McTigue of the Service school's swimming team and a native of Chicago, won a 35 yard free style event in a meet between the sailors and Waukegan YMCA. . . . Coxswain Joe Boyle, who won a place on the College All-Star football squad which opposes the Chicago Bears on Soldiers' field Aug. 28, last week was visited at this establishment by Maurice [Skip] Palrang, head football coach at Creighton university. . . . Boyle once played end for Creighton under Palrang.

Camp Grant.

THE camp baseball squad will be divided into two teams today, one group meeting the Galesburg, Ill., semipros on Keep 'Em Flying field and the other traveling to Glen Ellyn for a game with the Glen Ellyn Reds. . . . Prior to the defeat inflicted by the White Sox last Monday, the soldier players had scored 33 victories as against 11 losses for a .750 percentage. The latest recruit to join this camp is Pvt. Joseph Privaldsky, who jumped center for the Baylor university basketball teams from 1939 to 1942, winning letters all four years.

Chanute Field.

A SCOTT field officers' softball team brought along its hitting clothes last Monday, blasting out 27 hits to smother a Chanute offiers' delegation, 18 to 3 in nine innings on one of the post's diamonds. . . . Col. Wolcott Hayes, Scott field commandant, starter on the mount for the visitors. . . . Lieut. Bob Edwards, one of Chanute's pitchers, distinguished himself by slamming out a home run, but this achievement was overshadowed by the feat of Lieut. Col. Al Wilson, who got six safe blows in as many times at bat. . . . Cliff Coones and Lester Montibeller, both of Detroit, each pitched a no hit game in intersquadron softball competition within a period of three days. . . . First Lieut. Ernest Brehaut, once a star athlete at Tufts college, has succeeded First Lieut. Glenn McEniry as manager of the Planesmen baseball team. . . . Lieut. McEniry was relieved because of new duties which will prevent him from traveling with the squad. . . . Jack Haskin, former McKendree college athlete, who had been a member of the civilian physical training instructors' staff, has been commissioned a second lieutenant.

Fort Sheridan.

CORP. ROBERT JOHMANN, an old high school classmate of Bernie Crimmins, former football guard at Notre Dame, has succeeded Corp. Sab Rufo as director of the golf driving range at this post. . . . As his first official act, Corp. Johmann said he would continue the weekly driving contest featured by the appearance of a prominent professional, a plan originated by his predecessor, who has moved to another camp. . . . Bob Stupple, Skokie Country club pro, will appear in an exhibition in connection with Tuesday's contests on the range. . . . Pvt. James R. Brown of Chicago and Pvt. John Branta of Downers Grove each scored 17 points in last week's event to finish in a tie for top laurels. . . . Roland [Tiny] Schell, Norwalk, Wis., pitcher, who weighs 275 pounds, added to his prestige by winning the horseshoe pitching championship of his company.

The Ohms went into first place in the Tower interpost softball circuit by beating the previously unbeaten Medicos, 6 to 5. . . . Bob Rybicki, who hails from Detroit, won the game by smashing out a double with the bases filled and two out in the last inning.

Navy Pier.

COMPETITION in a new winter pier bowling league will open tomorrow night in the Arena with 10 companies of sailors represented. . . . A new marine league at this station also has been formed, comprised of eight companies of leathernecks. . . . The Arena All-Stars recently dealt a beating to a pier team, 2,674 to 2,647. . . . It was only the third setback suffered by the men in uniform in eight matches. . . . Officers and men numbering 150 attended the bowling banquet at the Medinah club. . . . Prizes were awarded to members of the Mail Clerks, representing Company Y, which won the 12 week circuit championship, and to Leo Bujak of Company 13, who recorded the highest single game score, 234, and the highest three game total mark, 621. . . . Bujak's team finished third in the standing.

The pier golf color bearers have challenged Fort Sheridan to a rematch following the soldier players, 9 to 6 conquest of them. . . . Low man for the pier was John Buck of Company 3, who shot a 75, but Sergt. Herb Miller of the fort had the best score of the day, a nifty 72.

Section D of Company 24 has won the sectional volleyball title at this reservation by defeating section H of Company 7 in straight games, 15-5 and 15-12. . . . A new athletic site, to be known as Murphy field in honor of Lieut. [J. G.] John Murphy, assistant to Lieut. Jim McMillen, pier athletic officer, was obtained recently with the acquisition of a plot of ground adjacent to the North Pier terminal, directly west of the station.

Maricich Leads by 14 Pins in Special Bowling Match

Eli Maricich took a 14 pin lead over Norman Nelson in a special 12 game bowling match last night at Goldammers' 20th Century Recreation by rolling 1,144 in the first block of six games. Nelson's total was 1,130. The second block of six games will be rolled Tuesday evening at 9 o'clock on the Dearborn-Jackson Recreation alleys.

Salvo Yields Three Hits to Leaders.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 8 (AP).—In a disorderly game in which Pitchers Manny Salvo and Whit Wyatt threw what looked suspiciously like old fashioned "bean balls" time after time, the Braves nipped the Dodgers, 2 to 0, today to chalk up their second win in a row over the league leaders and give Salvo his sixth victory while Wyatt suffered his fourth defeat.

All hands, including the 5,484 customers, felt they were sitting on a powder keg most of the afternoon—and on several occasions the fuse was all lit and ready to go. As a matter of fact, the umpires twice had to break up promising free-for-alls between the two clubs just as players were charging at each other.

Only two batsmen were hit but there were any number of "near misses." Wyatt brushed Salvo's uniform with one of his slants in the seventh inning. In the eighth there was no doubt when one of Salvo's shots plunked against Wyatt. The Dodger pitcher was so peeved about it, he hurled his bat out toward the mound, but his aim wasn't as good as it usually is and the stick slid right out to shortstop.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates and the St. Louis Cardinals battled 16 innings today to a 5 to 5 tie which will be played off Monday, an open date for both clubs. The Pirates had five pitchers in the lineup and the Cardinals four before darkness halted the contest. The game was stopped 11 minutes because of weather in the sixth inning.

Terry Moore's pinch double with two out scored Frank Crespi from first to tie the game in the eighth and neither club scored after that. Score:

NEGRO ALL-STARS PLAY WINKLERS 2 GAMES TODAY

Henry Milton, former star outfielder of the Kansas City Monarchs, will lead the Negro All-Stars in a double header this afternoon against the Winkler Motors semi-pro nine in Rockola stadium, 4200 North Central avenue.

The colored team boasts one of the strongest lineups in the league. It includes Ed Young and Zell Miles, formerly with the American Giants, and pitchers O. C. McCarthy, Titus Ward, and Willie Bridgeman. McCarthy and Bridgeman will work this afternoon's games.

B'NAI B'RITH HAS SEMI-FINALS ON PROGRAM TODAY

A second attempt will be made by the survivors in the B'nai B'rith lodge division softball league to play their semi-final schedule this morning in Grant park near 7th street, Chairman Sol Michaels announced yesterday.

The first game at 10 o'clock will bring together the defending champion, Garfield park, which finished third in this season's race, and the second place Cardoza lodge team. On a nearby diamond Kraus, holder of first place, will play Ramah, fourth place club.

Executive Director Abe Glick announced that Weber park, 3000 North Ashland avenue, has been selected for the championship games in the youth organization tournament, and the lodge finals. The games will be played next Sunday afternoon.

Walkers to Vie for AAU Title in Humboldt Park

The 20-kilometer walking championship of the National AAU will be decided in Humboldt park Sunday, Aug. 23, officials of the Polish Roman Catholic Union youth department announced yesterday. Entries are being accepted by John T. Czech, 984 Milwaukee avenue, and will close Aug. 19. An entry fee of $1 is required of all walkers except members of the armed forces.

LYONS, DIETRICH OPPOSE INDIANS FOR SOX TODAY

South Siders Seek 7th Straight Victory.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The 41 year old Ted Lyons will rise from his rocking chair this afternoon for his weekly fling on the mound, this being one of the features of a busy several hours the White Sox, possessors of a six game winning streak, and Indians will put in while disposing of a double header in Comiskey park.

Uncle Ted, who is slightly off his customary schedule, having toiled as late as last Tuesday when he whipped the Tigers, will try to steer a course which will bring him to his 10th victory of the year, his seventh straight and the 255th since he slipped into a Sox uniform in 1923.

Dietrich to Hurl Other Game.

In the other game Bill Dietrich will pitch for the Sox. The Cleveland assignments are indefinite, Manager Lou Boudreau being in possession of numerous fellows who have had sufficient rest. He may wind up naming Jim Bagby and Al Smith.

Unless the weather man interferes as he did last Sunday, Bob Kennedy, the Sox 21 year old third baseman will break into the navy around 1 o'clock by way of the Comiskey park home plate. He will be inducted into the aviation branch in a pregame ceremony which will be attended by various naval officers.

Win Only Three of Eleven.

So far this season the Sox can't point proudly to what they have accomplished against the Indians. Jim Dykes' entry has whipped them only three times in 11 attempts. And when they finish, for the time being, with the Indians in a night game tomorrow they'll have to take on another tough customer. That will be the Browns, whose park the Sox will visit Tuesday night and Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. The Browns have beaten the Sox in eight out of 12 games this season.

Passeau and Bithorn Face Reds Today

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 8.—Hi Bithorn and Claude Passeau are scheduled to pitch for the Cubs in the trip ending double header here tomorrow. Chicagoans expect to look at the skilful casting of Bucky Walters and Elmer Riddle.

The revised lineup the Cubs employed in support of Lon Warneke today was dictated by a Chicago sportswriter as the climax of a second guessing fiesta in a local candy and soda store last night. Before he became embroiled in the discourse with the scrivener, Manager Jim Wilson had planned to keep Jimmy Foxx and Bill Nicholson on the bench for further resting of their muscles.

In response to a deluge of fire Wilson stories which have busted loose in the last few days, General Manager Jim Gallagher, here in quest of a headache cure, merely said, "Wilson's contract runs till midnight Dec. 1, 1942."

PROBABLE MAJOR LEAGUE PITCHERS IN GAMES TODAY

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Probable pitchers in the major leagues tomorrow with won-lost records:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Philadelphia at New York—Fowler [3-8] and L. Harris [10-9] vs. Bonham [12-4] and Ruffing [10-5].

HARMONS TO PLAY TWO.

The Frankie Harmons will play a double header today at Humboldt park, meeting the Hermosa Park Monarchs at 12:30, and the Railroad Retirement Board in the second game. Topel and Phillips will pitch for the Harmons.

Lakeside and South Shore Lawn Bowlers Meet Today

A trebles match between the Lakeside club and the South Shore Country club will feature today's lawn bowling activities at Jackson park. The match will start at 10 a. m. At Columbus park the West Side club will play off its Vice President's prize competition, and the Chicago Lawn Bowling club of Washington park will engage in preliminary rounds of its club rink tournament.

Despite the great and growing demand for Marlin Blades in the army and navy and the current Government ceiling on output, you will still be able to buy Marlin Blades. If you find Marlin Blades less plentiful than before, you can make yours last longer and continue to enjoy their quality and economy by following these suggestions:

1. Wash face with soap and water and lather or rub in a good shaving cream for two to three minutes to soften beard.
2. Rinse blade and holder in hot water before and during shaving.
3. After shaving, wash blade well and dry carefully. Avoid touching or turning the fine edge.

Many men find they can get more good Marlin shaves by stropping their Marlin Blades on the palm of the hand or on the inside of a smooth glass tumbler

CRAIG WOOD IS 13 UNDER PAR TO WIN CANADIAN OPEN

Mike Turnesa Second, 4 Strokes Behind Leader.

TORONTO, Ontario, Aug. 8 (AP).—Craig Wood, United States Open champion, won the Canadian Open golf title today by shooting a par 72 in the final round for a 72 hole score of 275, 13 strokes under par.

Wood, who started the day tied for the lead with Ralph Guldahl of Santa Fe, Cal., at 135, shot a four below par 68 in the morning round but concentrated entirely on safe shots during the afternoon. The new champion fired a 66 over the Mississauga club course in the first round Thursday and then came back with a 69 on Friday.

Mike Turnesa Second.

The Mamaroneck, N. Y., pro, finished four strokes in front of Mike Turnesa, White Plains, N. Y., who came from far behind today with a spectacular 65. That total equaled the competitive course record Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., established Thursday, but it wasn't enough to wipe out the disadvantage of his first two rounds when he totaled 144. He shot a 70 for his 279 aggregate in the afternoon trip over the layout.

Clayton Heafner of Durham, N. C., came in with a hot 69 in the fourth time over the course for a 281 and third place while Hogan, the first day's leader, faded badly and wound up with 282 for fourth.

Stranahan Top Amateur.

Gordon Brydson, home course professional, was the best of the Canadian contingent with 289, 10 strokes better than Nick Wisnock of Burlington, Ont., who was the best of the dominion's amateurs.

Wood, who reigns as the United States Open king for the war's duration, may retain the Canadian title for a similar length of time. The meet is the only one of the dominion's golf events not dropped and may be abandoned before another season.

Upset Marks Opening Day at Horse Show

Hunters who have won numerous firsts in the ring during the last several years repeated yesterday at the opening session of the first annual Oak Brook Horse show in Hinsdale. Morning and afternoon competition calling for the running of 22 classes are on today's program. Proceeds will be turned over to the United Service Organizations.

Paul Jr. Scores Upset.

Prominent among the winners in the timber topping events were C. G. Speidel's Laddie, Sally Miller's Spymaster, Mary Ann Luke's Ilderton, and Escalator, owned and ridden by Horace Hardy III. A surprise came in the lightweight hunter class when Patsy Salek's Paul Jr. defeated Frameup, with Mrs. Louis Swift Jr., riding.

The winners in both the hunter and gaited classes will be up for stake championships this afternoon. Considered as the horses to beat in the saddle events on the basis of yesterday's performances are Susan Skahen's Fancy Frills among three-gaited horses, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Montgomery's Princess Le Rue; H. Leslie Atlass' High Tide, and Commander and Mrs. Hinton G. Clabaugh's Jules Chaudron among the fancy stepping five-gaited animals.

Even Mules in This One.

A feature of today's program will be the utility driving class, in which horses, ponies, and mules will be eligible to compete. Results:

JUNIOR TOUCH AND OUT—Won by Ilderton, Mary Ann Luke; Hi-De-Ho, O. J. Sauwin, second; Anonymous, Frank Maher, third.

FIVE GAITED MARES—Won by Princess Le Rue, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Montgomery; Lovely Night, Mrs. Ruth Bowman, second; Petite Miss, Margaret Emmert, third.

FIVE GAITED GELDINGS OR STALLIONS—Won by Jules Chaudron, Commander and Mrs. Hinton G. Clabaugh; High Tide, H. Leslie Atlass, second; King of Hearts, Martindale farm, third.

MIDDLE AND HEAVYWEIGHT HUNTERS—Won by Laddie, C. G. Speidel; Reconstruction, Mr. and Mrs. John A. McGuire, second; Sylvan Music, John McC. Price Jr., third.

EVERT, HAINLINE MEET TODAY IN IOWA NET FINAL

Hainline was pressed in disposing of Sterling Lord of Burlington, Ia., 6-3, 6-2, 4-6, 9-7, while Evert eliminated Harris Coggeshall of Des Moines, former state title holder, with a 7-5, 8-6, 9-7 triumph in the other semifinal round duel.

In the women's singles division, Doris Popple of Des Moines defeated Joanne Dunn, also of Des Moines, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4, to win the title.

HIS MASTERPIECE

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The 42d annual amateur tournament of the Women's Western Golf association, one of the few organizations in the game to continue regular active competition this year, will open tomorrow morning at the Sunset Ridge Country club, west of Winnetka. Like its open predecessor, won by Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., at Elmhurst in June, the WWGA Amateur will enlist a field of national calibre. A field of 180 will compete in the six day battle, total proceeds of which will be donated to the army and navy relief fund.

Tomorrow's qualifying round of 18 holes not only will determine the tournament medalist and the 32 match play qualifiers in the championship flight, but also will settle possession of the Marion Miley trophy. This award, named by the association for the late Kentucky star who held several Western crowns, will be presented to the player who has the lowest 36-hole aggregate for the qualifying rounds in both tournaments, the Open at Elmhurst and the Amateur at Sunset Ridge.

Subsidiary Flights.

Players who don't make the match play grade in the championship bracket will be paired in subsidiary flights, and consolation competition for first round losers in all flights will begin Wednesday. The Tuesday and Wednesday match play rounds in the main event will be held in the morning, while Thursday's quarter-finals and Friday's semifinals are scheduled for afternoon play. Saturday's championship match will be held over 36 holes.

Mrs. F. A. Bunte of Evanston, president of the WWGA, reported several days ago that 76 players from 15 states were registered in the advance entries. These included Virginia Ingram of the home club, new Illinois state champion; Jeanne Cline of Bloomington, Illinois medalist; Eleanor Dudley, of Ridge, co-medalist in the 1941 amateur at Exmoor; Betty Brown of Texarkana, Ark., and Shirley Ann Johnston, former western junior champion, also from Sunset Ridge.

Mrs. Mann Expected.

Other anticipated entries include Mrs. Russell Mann of Omaha, who won last year's championship in the 36 hole final against Mary Agnes Wall of Menominee, Mich., by a score of 4 and 3; Phyllis Otto of Atlantic, Ia., runnerup to Miss Jameson in the Open at Elmhurst; Marjorie Row of Detroit; Georgia Tainter of Fargo, N. D., semi-finalists in last year's tournament, and Miss Wall.

JACK DILLON, THE RING 'BEARCAT,' REPORTED DEAD

Chattahoochee, Fla., Aug. 8 (AP).—A man who died in the state hospital here yesterday tentatively was identified today as Jack Dillon, the former light heavyweight boxing champion of the world. Dillon's correct name was Ernest Cutler Price. The hospital records show his birthplace as Frankfort, Ind., and his age as 50.

The Jack Dillon who won the championship by virtue of a victory over Jack O'Brien of Philadelphia was known as "the Hoosier Bearcat" and was recognized as champion from 1912 until he lost the crown to Battling Levinsky in Boston Oct. 24, 1916.

He was managed for a time by Sam Murbarger, now secretary of the Indiana athletic commission, and later by Steve Harter, an Indianapolis sportsman. He retired from the ring in 1923.

The man identified as Price was brought to the hospital in April of this year by George Pitts, a Miami attorney.

BUDGE PATTY KEEPS JUNIOR TENNIS CROWN

bet he'd made. The bet? That Patty would keep his singles title.

Patty did his singles job confidently. And Tom was the same old Tom, to hear his mother, Mickey [Mrs. Eugene L.] Falkenburg tell of it. When he concentrated on his game, his placements were excellent, shooting sharply into the corners, and he had Patty on the run. But the tall, slightly stoop shouldered blond didn't concentrate enough—except in the second set when he was down, 4-0, then stormed thru Budge for six straight games.

Loses Nine Straight Games.

That rally came after Tom had lost nine straight games. He opened powerfully, ran the count to 2-1 in the opening set, then fell apart. Patty got his volleying to working after Tom had run up a 40-love lead in the fourth game, nearly to break service, worked the score to deuce, then started clicking with every shot. He forced Falkenburg into many baseline errors and simply overwhelmed him to win the set. He took the first four games of the second set, too, then Tom rallied and put the match back on a championship footing.

Patty repeated in the third set by winning the four opening games, only to have Tom take the next three. Here Patty regained his form and took the eighth game on a passing shot. Falkenburg handed him set point with a double fault. Falkenburg took a 3-1 lead in the fourth set, Patty won the next three, they split the next two, and a baseline error by Tom gave Patty match point. A double fault by Falkenburg was involved in the scoring of that final game. Patty passed him with a shot for another point and the opening as well as match point was scored on baseline errors made by Falkenburg.

Falkenburg relied on powerful serves thruout to score aces, but got thru thus only three times. Patty made one service ace. He also played around with frequent drop shots, but scored on only 7 out of 19.

squaring birdie on the 18th. He finished with a medal card of 38—35—73, the last nine being one under par, against Mathisen's 36—37—73.

Concludes Strangest Week.

This morning's 18 holes will mark the conclusion of the strangest week in the records of this grandpappy of all local fairway productions. Mathisen and Evans, along with Sergt. Frank McNamara, the policeman-medalist from Evergreen, and Pvt. [new] James Basko of Lincolnshire, had reached the semi-finals Thursday night in routine fashion. There was nothing untoward about their progress thru Friday morning's 18.

Mathisen came out of the Friday morning round with a 6 up advantage over Sergt. McNamara while Evans was one to the good against Lawyer [Then] Basko. They teed out into the gloom of the afternoon and ultimately were detained by a cloudburst which seemed to have chosen Jackson park as its particular target. It finally was agreed to cancel all afternoon scores and revert the scoring state of the two matches to the 18th hole recesses of both.

Basko Presents Problem.

Then arose the problem of what to do about Mr. Basko, who was sworn in to the army two weeks come tomorrow and had been given a 12 day leave before he officially reported to his south side draft board for the trip to Fort Sheridan. The reporting hour was 7 a. m. yesterday, leaving Evans without a finishing opponent for the résumé of the match. Basko made no personal effort for an extension of leave, but friends who called Fort Sheridan Friday night failed to contact the proper authorities. So Jim reported at No. 11 at 7 o'clock yesterday morning and Evans advanced by default into yesterday afternoon's first 18 holes for the title match.

Mathisen on the other hand, had to work 11 more semi-final holes in the morning in order to eliminate McNamara, 8 and 7, and thereby enter his fifth final match at the old park.

Par—Out	444	443	434—34
Mathisen—Out	454	443	534—38
Evans—Out	534	554	444—38

Mathisen leads 3 up.

Par—In	444	355	434—36—70
Mathisen—In	454	364	434—37—73
Evans—In	444	354	434—35—73

Mathisen leads 1 up.

MELTON'S THRU FOR YEAR; FACES ARM OPERATION

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 8 [Special].—The New York Giants learned that Pitcher Cliff Melton is thru for the season. The southpaw, who had been counted on by Manager Mel Ott to help boost the Giants back into first division of the National league, will soon undergo an operation for the removal of a floating cartilage deposit lodged in the hinge of his left elbow. Cliff, who is here with the club, said the operation will be performed in Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore. Melton, 29 years old, has won 11 and lost only five this season.

Christoforidis Is Favored to Defeat Bolden

BY FRANK MASTRO.

Nate Bolden is ready for his 10 round bout against Anton Christoforidis, former world light heavyweight champion, in Marigold outdoor arena tomorrow. The former intercity Golden Gloves middelweight winner concluded drills in Trafton's gymnasium yesterday by doing seven rounds of loosening up exercises. After taking a shower the Chicagoan weighed 166 pounds, one more than he expects to carry against Chris, the most important opponent he has been asked to face in a five year campaign.

Bolden sparred a total of 55 rounds in three weeks for the impending encounter, the program being the longest and most serious of his career. Tho Chris is favored to score his sixth victory in a row at the expense of his 25 year old rival, Nate is confident of registering an upset.

A Native of Greece.

Christoforidis, who is a native of Greece but now lives in Geneva, O., a town about 55 miles outside of Cleveland, also did only floor work yesterday. He will follow the same routine in his drill today. Trainer Phil Solomon said Anton was down to 167 pounds, the poundage he carried when beating Mose Brown in Pittsburgh last July 27.

Joe Maxin, Cleveland 180 pounder, ended boxing workouts yesterday by going three rounds with Al Globe. Maxin, who conquered Lou Brooks and Curtis Sheppard last month, is paired with Altus Allen, 1939 international Golden Gloves heavyweight champion, in a 10 round secondary feature tomorrow. Allen did light training yesterday. He will finish up today with a few miles of roadwork.

Six round preliminary matches will bring together Dan Merritt, former Chicagoland Golden Gloves heavyweight title holder, and Al Jordan, Golden Gloves graduate from Kansas City, Mo.; Mickey Hayes, Milwaukee heavyweight, and Vince Calzaretto, Palos Park, and Horace Gresham, Cleveland middleweight, and Jonnny Johnson, south side.

The Hy-Clays of St. Louis, Mo., defeated the Garden City Maids, 5 to 1, last night in Shewbridge field for their second victory of their four game softball series. Marge Nicholls pitched the Rheingold girls to a 9 to 1 triumph over the Chryslers of Detroit, Mich., in Rand stadium in another girls' game.

The Dieselettes-Parichy and the Rockola-Match corporation games were postponed because of the weather. Tonight's schedule:

Hy-Clays vs. Garden City in Shewbridge field; Rheingold vs. Chryslers in Rand stadium; Dieselettes vs. Parichy Bloomer girls in Parichy stadium, and Rockola Music Maids vs. Match corporation in Rockola stadium.

THE LOCKER ROOM

Round of the week
Harold Mathisen's 35-33-68 in semi-final match of city amateur against Frank McNamara.

Shot of the week
Chick Evans' recovery from sand at 11th hole of final match in city amateur.

THE Locker Room today respectfully requests attention to its Inquiring Golfer as a cross-section of opinions from the men who are attempting to carry on the game during the war. . . . These opinions come from those in the important backstage end of golf, men often overlooked by everyday players and galleries. . . . Medinah was chosen as the scene of the quiz because it reflects the conditions and needs of scores of clubs thruout the country. . . . Stacy W. Osgood made the 13th hole at Flossmoor, 110 yards, in 1 with a No. 9 iron. . . . He was playing with three guests—Lester A. White, Irving Stenn, and Dr. Elmer Goldthorp. . . . Mr. Osgood's pleasure probably was no more than a match for Tom Cochran of the club, who recently broke 90 for the first time. . . . One of the happiest unrecorded incidents of the season to date occurred last Thursday morning, when Jack Duers of Park Ridge dropped by to pick up his pal Ed Sawyer Jr. . . . Ed also was Jack's opponent of the day in the finals of the Chicago District Golf association's junior closed tournament. . . . the badinage that ensued between the two friends included their ideas as to where they would place the Alden B. Swift trophy to be awarded to the winner. . . . Ed had a place picked out on the Sawyer mantel, but Jack said that the clan Duers was building a new room for it. . . . It's on the Sawyer mantel now, of course, but the Locker Room salutes the fact that two pals like Ed and Jack can put on a match that is a testimonial to the real goal of the game.

Two Important One Day Tourneys on Tomorrow's Golf Schedule.

To go on with the week's doings, tomorrow will see two of the most important one-day tourneys of the 1942 season. . . . They are the annual Illinois Pro-Seniors meet at Edgewater and the Chicago District Golf association's annual caddy tournament at Northmoor. . . . The CDGA will hold a vital board meeting at 4 p. m. Tuesday in room 102 of the La Salle hotel. . . . Wednesday brings the largest invitational events of the year — Medinah's Camel Trail and Westmoreland's Tam o' Shanter gathering. . . . Thursday will mark the final series of the West District Golf league at Westward-Ho, an occasion for a special tribute to Fred Leitzow, the grandpappy of interclub golf in these parts. . . . On Friday, the CDGA will conduct its annual state southpaw championship at Evanston. . . . This will be at 36 holes of medal play unless weather conditions intervene. . . . Then play will be at 27 holes. . . . The entry fee is $3 and entries close on Wednesday. . . . . Friday and Saturday will witness one of the surviving two-day invitations of the district—the annual Glen Oak Roundup.

John O'Malley, the tall and handsome president of the Chicago Patrolmen's club, today is issuing his last call to all officers who would patrol the fairway beat in the club's third annual tournament, to be played Thursday at the Gleneagles Country club, 123d street and Bell road.

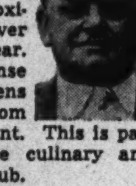
The Inquiring Golfer

THE QUESTION.

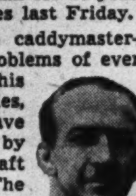
What have you found the most difficult phase of your job during the war year? [Asked at the Medinah Country club.]

THE ANSWERS.



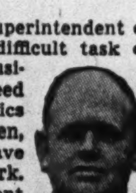
Otto Guenther, club manager—The hardest part of managing a country club during wartime is in the matter of help. We at Medinah already have had an approximate employé turnover of 70 per cent this year. The draft and defense work have called dozens of key men away from us in every department. This is particularly true in the culinary and waiters' end of the club.

Tommy Armour, club professional—The ball situation, of course, has made the professional a bit of a plutocrat, in that he now governs the dispensation of them, rather than waiting on the players' purchase. Seriously, however, we have lost five boys who worked on our driving range, two to the army and three to the navy, and Wilford Chase, who has been my shop club man for 10 years, went into Great Lakes last Friday.



Jack Hansen, club caddymaster—One of the major problems of every club in the game this year is that of caddies, the ranks of which have been cut into no end by enlistments, the draft and defense jobs. The key men, that is, the older boys upon whom we all depended to educate newcomers, are gone, and it has been a real job to teach the younger and inexperienced boys who have taken their places.

Wally Womeldorf, assistant club manager and locker room supervisor—Many private club members today are engaged in all-out manufacturing jobs, and it requires considerable diplomacy on the part of all club employés to enable them to enjoy the brief chances for relaxation they have. Another item is locker room supplies, formerly easy to get, but now at a premium because of priorities.



Andy Heim, club superintendent of grounds—The most difficult task of my end of the club business has been the need for replacing mechanics and maintenance men, so many of whom have gone into defense work. We have had to content ourselves with a skeleton force as a result. In addition, rationing has made the acquisition of many essential chemicals used in greenkeeping hard.

. . . Included in the picture is Frank Stranahan, the Inverness amateur who was paired with Nelson that day and who ultimately won the amateur prize in the Open with a par score of 288, only eight strokes away from the count with which Nelson and Heafner were tied. . . . N. E. Swanson says that golf begins at 50.

CHANGE of the name of the Great Lakes amateur tournament conducted by the CDGA to the Chicago National amateur tournament for the five-day battle opening at Knollwood a week from tomorrow is a welcome one to the Locker Room, for all that it could well have been called the Chicago National last summer. . . . Barring two entries, the 1941 tourney was a match in playing caliber for the USGA tournament which followed it at Omaha. . . . And the missing entries were eliminated early at Omaha. . . . The L. R. feels that the work done by local organizations such as the CDGA, the Western Golf association, and the Women's Western Golf association in recent years deserves national billing. . . . Indications are that all of the stars of last year's Great Lakes meet will return.

Wisconsin PGA President Has Busy Time Ahead.

Matt Jans, president of the Wisconsin PGA, has a busy time of it coming up. . . . He's chairman of the William Erickson Day at Wilmette Thursday, and will be the host on Aug. 24 at the Racine Country club, where the annual rivalry between the Illinois and Wisconsin PGA sections headed, respectively, by Alex Cunningham of North Shore and Matt, will be held. The Builders' Tee club, most standup competitive organization in the game in our town, looks for a goodly field Tuesday in its club qualifying round, 16th or its 25 regular weekly events. . . . The Locker Room bows to one of the nicest and most interesting ladies' events of the year—the 26th annual Hoot Mon tournament conducted by the ladies of the Oak Park Country club on Tuesday. Advance reservations indicate a field of 150 players. The second annual suburban amateur tournament opens Aug. 29 at the Suburban Country club, Green Bay road, route 131, Waukegan.

Frank T. Cullen, sports and pastimes chairman of Butterfield, advises that the 22d anniversary tournament of Founder's day at the club, honoring John J. Code, will be held next Saturday. All classes in low net will swing for the Msgr. Code trophy. . . . Other prizes will be in the form of defense bonds, donated by ten Butterfield members, including A. T. Bermingham, W. H. Bromann, James C. Daley, J. S. Eagen, John J. Flanagan, Frank P. Lavin, John J. O'Connor, and Joseph B. Victor. Jimmy Seidcheck reports that it will look like Navy day at Tam o' Shanter this afternoon, along about 3 o'clock. . . . At that hour, President George S. May has agreed to turn the course over to 30 sailors from the office of naval officer procurement. All the gobs will play in uniform.

If Ed Sawyer Sr. of Park Ridge isn't among those present at the state southpaw tournament, it won't be the fault of Mrs. S. and Ed. Jr., recent winner of the CDGA junior title. . . . They both went to work on Pa as soon as young Ed had finished winning. . . . In another section of the Locker Room there was a mention of a busy week in prospect. . . . We neglected to mention the annual Cook County men's tourney, opening tomorrow at Columbus park, where Hank Foley is the host pro, and continuing thru next Saturday. . . . Match play will begin at 8 a. m. Tuesday. . . . Bob Dougherty, Harrison's Tech's football coach, is defending champ.

BEARS PUT THRU FIRST DRILLS AT TRAINING CAMP

Delafield, Wis., Welcomes Pro Champions.

BY EDWARD PRELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Delafield, Wis., Aug. 8.—The little village of Delafield got out the welcome mat today for its most famous annual visitors, the Chicago Bears. The Bears have been coming up here for so long that even the oldest settler has lost count of the years.

As in 1941, the Bears were weighted down with double responsibilities—the College All-Star game of Aug. 28 and the defense of their National Football league title. As in 1941, they rule favorites to make it a winning parlay, even tho the war has taken away some of their top flight men. It was said of the Bears last year that they had three first class teams included in their roster of 33. This year they'll have a chance to prove it.

The Bears hustled into buses and cars at Wrigley field at 10 o'clock this morning after their departure had been slowed up by the demands of a small army of autograph seekers. After arrival shortly before 1 o'clock, the pro champions were assigned rooms in Smythe hall on the campus of St. John's Military academy, visited the dining hall, and then sprinted out to the practice field. Dressed in shorts they went thru light drills.

Siegal Brings Brother.

Charley O'Rourke, the little quarter back from Boston college, was most noted of the 15 rookies who made up the departing contingent from Chicago. In this group were four of the 20 graduating collegians, the champions selected in the draft last December. John Siegal, the veteran crashing end, brought along his kid brother, Joe, for a tryout. Joe, like John, played at Columbia. The four drafted players were Johnny Petty of Purdue, Francis Maznicki of Boston college, Bill Geyer of Colgate, all backs, and Stuart Clarkson, center from Texas Arts and Industries. Other rookies were:

Leonard Aiken, Frank Morris, Clint Wager, Bill Hempel, Charles Drulis, Vito Ananis, Arnold Winters, and Washington Serini.

No Visitors Allowed.

Emphasizing that no visitors would be allowed, the Bears ordered the well weathered white canvas fence thrown around the field. Guards will be posted at the entrance to enforce the rule during the Bears' 19 day stay in this delightful Wisconsin resort country.

This was the first visit to the Bears' camp of Hugh Gallarneau, half back, who last year was a member of the College All-Stars. For the first time in several seasons, Hugh is separated from his Stanford and Bear teammate, Norman Standlee, who is in the army.

The Bears' camp is ideally situated for full time concentration on football, which is one of the credos of the champions. It is off to itself and there are no distractions for the strong young men. It is strictly a football workshop, morning, afternoon, and night.

Two Workouts a Day.

Morning workouts of two hours' duration will start at 9:30 a. m. After lunch, the players have a couple of hours to rest up for the 3 o'clock practice session, which ends just in time for them to shower and dress for dinner. In the evening they congregate in one of St. John's class rooms for mental preparation.

The Bears were introduced to a new trainer this morning, Joe Doller, who was recommended by Andy Lotshaw, Cubs' trainer who will take over his duties with the Bears when the baseball season ends. Doller replaces Homer Cole, who is in the navy.

SALT CREEK AND WOODLAND POLO TEAMS VIE TODAY

The Salt Creek and Woodland polo teams will be out to eliminate each other from the Tri-State Invitational tournament this afternoon at River road and Devon avenue. The starting time is 3:30 o'clock. The winner will oppose Park Ridge, victor over Joy Farm of Milwaukee two weeks ago.

All of today's poloists hail from the Chicago area except Elmer Kirsch, who is a star of the Joy Farm team. Harley J. McAllister will referee the game. The lineups:

SALT CREEK.		WOODLAND.
Maslek	No. 1	Bond
Drije	No. 2	Kirsch
McAlpine	No. 3	Adrian
Fordon	Back	Schmidt

Alternates—Salt Creek, Freud; Woodland, Lencione. Referee—McAllister. Duration—6 chukkers, 7½ minutes each.

BIKE RIDERS SEEK TITLES TODAY IN SHERMAN PARK

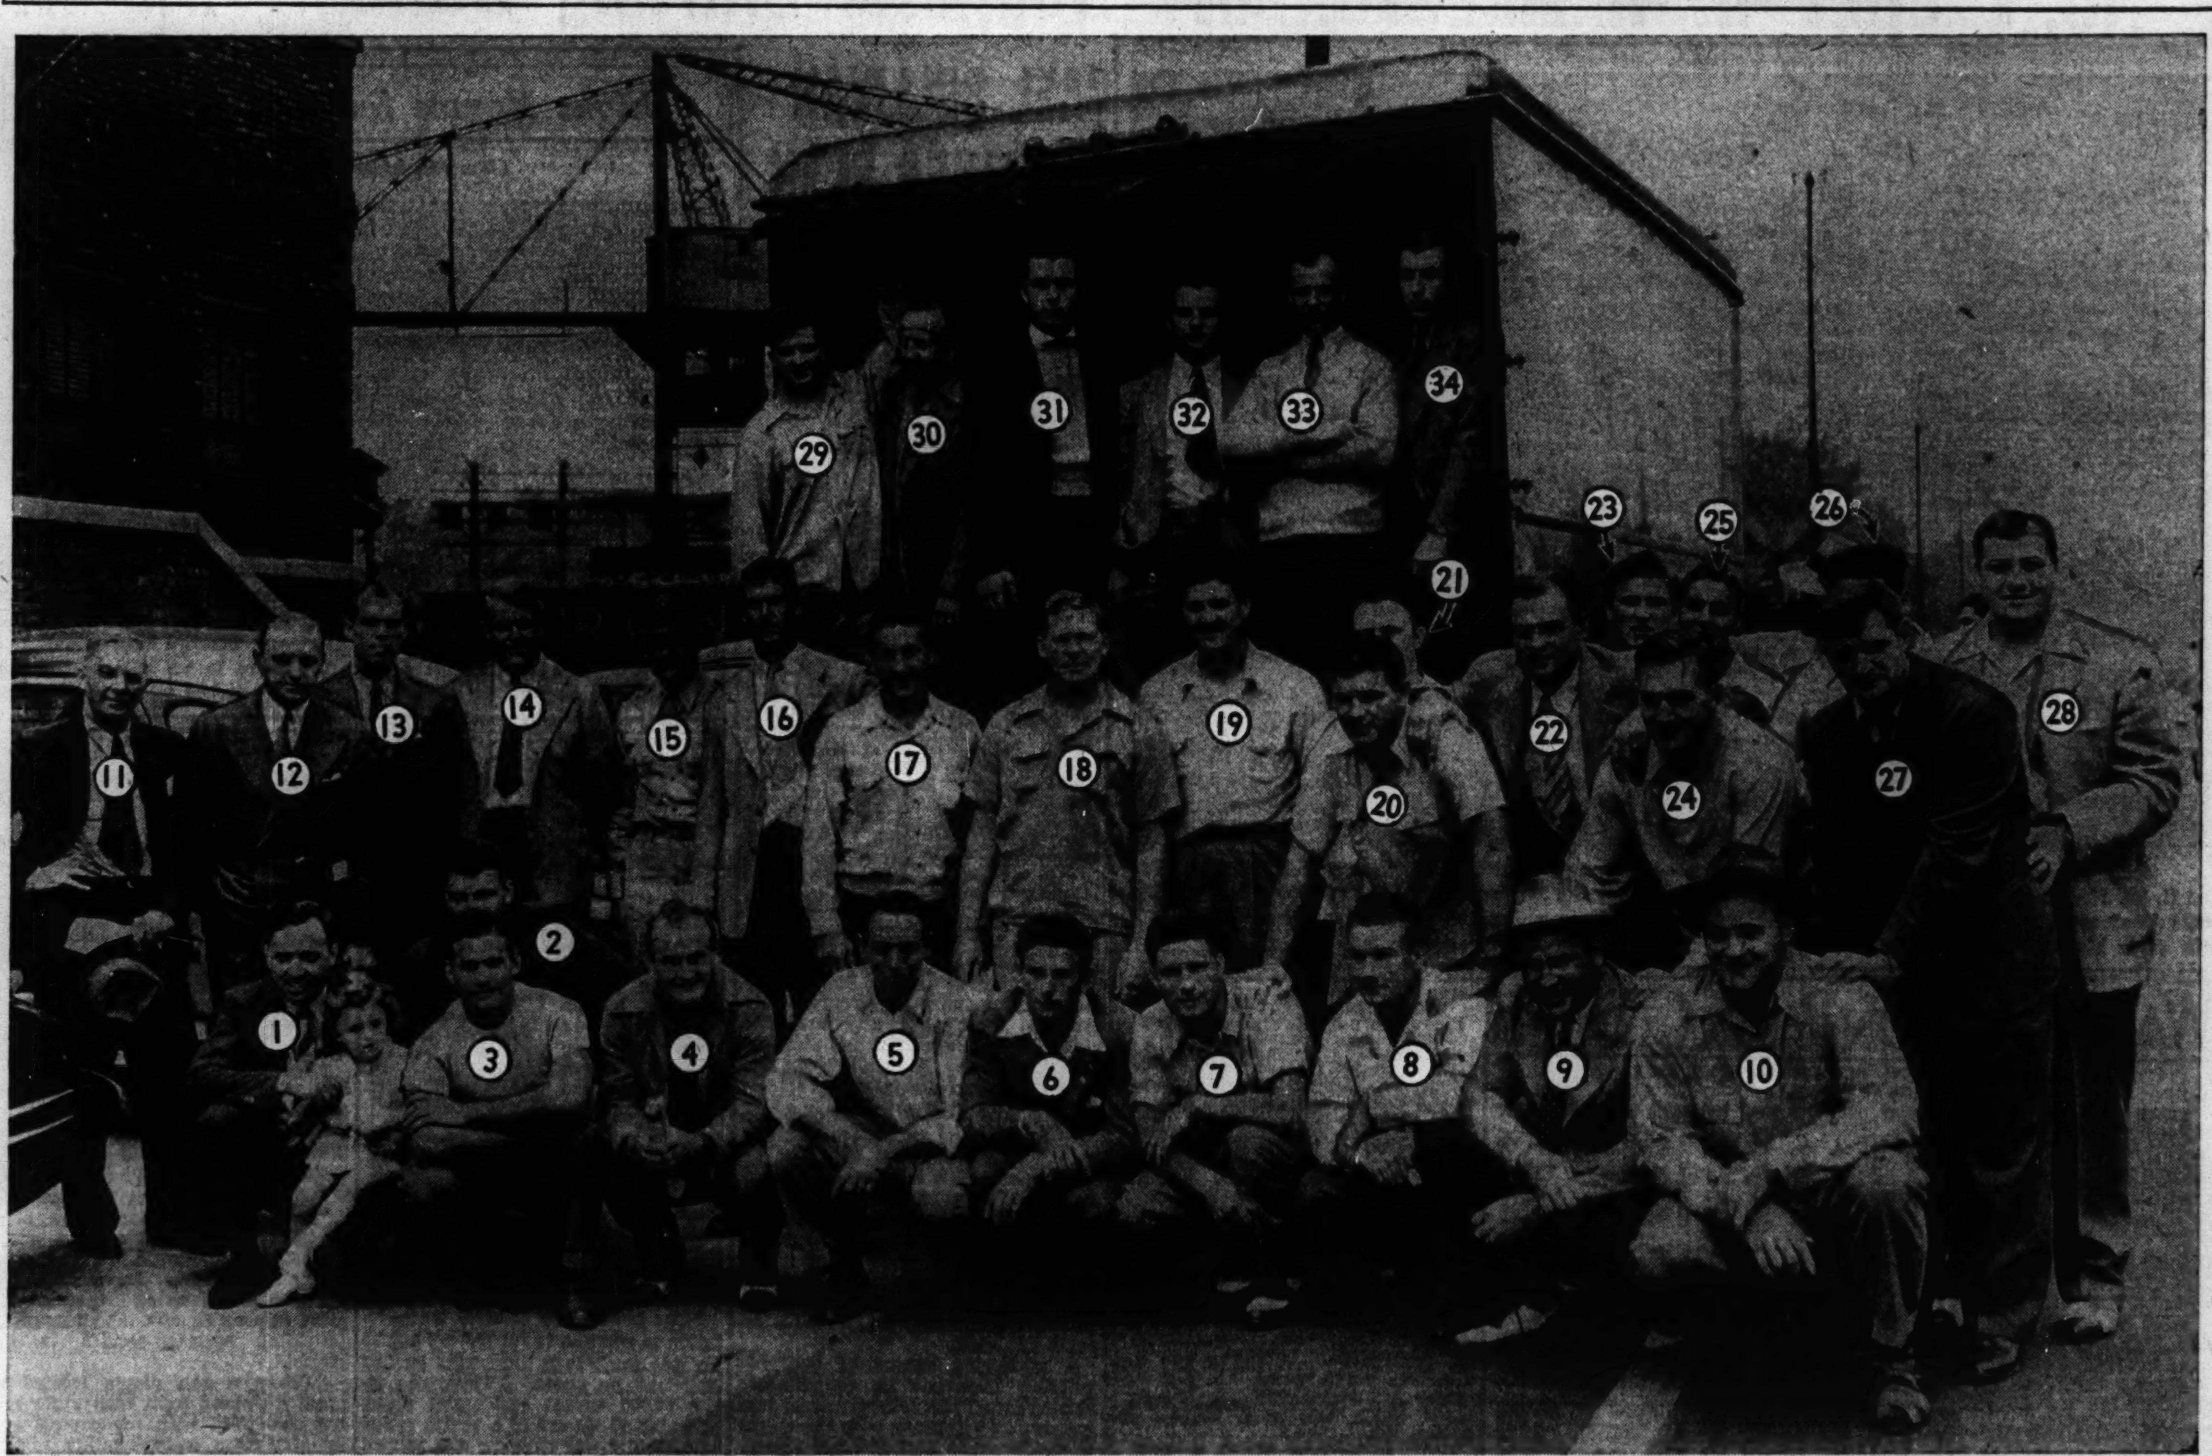
Amateur bicycle riders will open their quest for Illinois titles in senior, junior, and girls' divisions at 8:30 this morning in Sherman park, 53d street and Racine avenue. The title races, scheduled originally for Friday night at the Humbolt Park Bicycle bowl, were postponed because of weather.

Senior division races today will be over half mile, 2 mile, and 10 mile distances; junior races 1 and 5 miles, and girls 1 and 2 mile races. The present champions in the senior and junior divisions are Marvin Thomson and Chuck Edwards, both of the Barrett Athletic club. The girls champion is Jean Michaels of the CYO.

Satchel Paige Leads in Negro All-Star Team Poll

Satchel Paige, pitching idol of Negro baseball fans, is far out in front in a nation-wide poll conducted by 30 newspapers to name members of East and West teams for the 10th annual Negro All-Star game in Comiskey park next Sunday. Paige has received over 150,000 votes as the West team's pitcher.

BEARS LEAVE CHICAGO—BUT THEY'LL BE BACK!



Happy and relaxed were the 1942 Chicago Bears as they lined up in one big group yesterday outside the Wrigley field gates before starting for training camp in Delafield, Wis., to prepare for their Aug. 28 assignment against the College All-Stars in Soldiers' field. The squad: Max Swiatek, equipment manager (1); Frank Morris (2), Leonard Aikin (3), Bill Osmanski (4), Stuart Clarkson (5), Hugh Gallarneau (6), Harry Clark (7), Young Bussey (8), Bob Nowaskey (9), Ed Kolman (10), Secretary Frank Halas (11), Owner-Coach George Halas (12), Trainer Joe Doller (13), Hampton Pool (14), Chester Chesney, former Bear center (15), Clint Wager (16), George Wilson (17), Clyde Turner (18), Joe Stydahar (19), John Siegal (20), Bill Hempel (21), Al Matuza (22), Ed Siegal (23), Danny Fortmann (24), Ray Nolting (25), Gary Famiglietti (26), Charles Drulis (27), George Musso (28), Bill Geyer (29), Vito Ananis (30), Arnold Winters (31), Frank Maznicki (32), Ray McLean (33), Charley O'Rourke (34).

SMITH SMASHES WORLD RECORD IN 440 FREE STYLE

New London, Conn., Aug. 8 (AP).—Broad shouldered, 17 year old Billy Smith of Maui, Hawaii, power stroked his way today to a world record in the 440 yard free style race, a feature of the national AAU men's outdoor swimming meet in Ocean Beach park's Olympic pool.

So good was Smith's performance that Larry Johnson of Boston, national AAU swimming chairman, described it as phenomenal. Others pointed out that Medica's record was made in a 25 yard pool, less than half the length of this tank, and that the former University of Washington ace had the advantage of more turns.

For Smith, who plans to enter Ohio State in the fall, it was his second crown of the three day meet, which ends tomorrow, and his second record. Yesterday he captured the 220 yard free style in the American mark time of 2 minutes 10.7 seconds.

Jim Counsilman of St. Louis, Ohio State star, was another record breaker, winning the 220 yard breast stroke in 2 minutes and 45.4 seconds, one-tenth of a second better than the meet record time made a year ago by José Balmores of Hawaii, the 1941 victor who was absent. Counsilman, the indoor champion, won by 15 feet.

Adolph Kiefer of Chicago successfully defended his 110 yard back stroke title so effortlessly that he left the impression he could have beaten his own record time had he not elected to coast near the finish. Adolph was clocked in 1 minute and 6.6 seconds.

Ohio State Wins Relay.

As a final flourish, Ohio State's powerhouse, which piled up 20 points this afternoon to bring its total to 46, won the 880 yard relay in American record time of 9 minutes and 13.4 seconds. The Buckeye quartet of Don Schnabel, Jack Ryan, Jack Hill, and Nakama shaved nearly four seconds off the old mark made two years ago by Alexander Community house.

Summaries:

440 YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Bill Smith, Hawaii; Keo Nakama, Ohio State, second; Jerry Kershner, Columbus, O., third; Paul Herron, Los Angeles A. C., fourth; Mike Priano, Brooklyn, N. Y., fifth; Danny Green, Texas A. and M., sixth; Dick Peters, Yale, seventh; B. Trubee, Princeton, eighth. Time, 4:39.6 [a new world record; old mark, 4:40.8, by Jack Medica of Washington, in 1934].

110 YARD BACK STROKE—Won by Adolph Keifer, Chicago; Dan Dannenbaum, Yale, second; Max Follansbee, Ohio State, third; Ed Nista, Providence, R. I., fourth; A. Rodendeck, Yale, fifth; C. Gillet, Yale, sixth; Bill Ryan, Ohio State, seventh; T. Burke, Yale, eighth. Time, 1:06.8.

220 YARD BREAST STROKE—Won by Jim Counsilman, Ohio State; Joe Verdeur, Philadelphia YMCA, second; Floyd Hagan, Pasadena, Cal., A. C., third; Carl Paulson, Providence Boys' club, fourth; Roger Smith, Yale, fifth; John Sorman, New York A. C., sixth; T. Jackson, Yale, seventh; Max Weller, Reading, Pa., eighth. Time, 2:45.4 [new A. A. U. record; old mark, 2:45.5, by Jose Balmores, Hawaii, in 1941].

880 YARD FREE STYLE RELAY—Won by Ohio State [Don Schnabel, Jack Ryan, Jack Hill, Keo Nakama]; Yale "A," second; Yale "B," third; Yale "C," fourth; Yale "D," fifth. Time, 9:13.4 [new American record; old mark, 9:17.3, by Alexander Community house, Hawaii, in 1940].

Restrictions on Wild Geese Are Tightened

BY BOB BECKER.

With a big increase in the wild duck population of North America already noted, attention of the conservationists now seems to be centered on the goose situation, judging by official Washington comment on the 1942 waterfowl hunting laws recently announced. The duck hunting regulations are simple and easy to keep in mind. Bag limit, 10 per day. Possession limit, 20. One wood duck per day permitted in the bag limit. The season starts Sept. 26 in the northern zone, Oct. 15 in the central zone [which includes Illinois], and Nov. 2 in the southern with 70 days of shooting permitted in each zone. With the hunting hours specified from sunrise to sunset another break is given the hunter.

But in the regulations governing the hunting of wild geese this year there is a definite note of tighter restrictions and what the secretary of the interior calls "safeguards." There has been a decline in the Canada goose population, while the numbers of blue geese have increased.

Unpopular Rôle for Illinois.

Unfortunately, Illinois again plays an unpopular rôle in the Canada goose situation by being singled out in official statements from Washington as a state that continues to kill too many geese. The Horseshoe lake preserve concentration plus the highly developed commercialized shooting down there is the set-up that is causing the trouble. In announcing the 1942 waterfowl laws, the secretary of the interior said that "notwithstanding a reduction in the take last year, investigations indicate that the kill of geese at Horseshoe lake in Alexander county was still too high to be consistent with good management."

The inference seems to be that Horseshoe lake [during the hunting season] is doing a far too thoro job as a funnel to pour thousands of geese into an area where very highly developed commercialized hunting makes possible a very heavy concentration of shooters around the edges of the preserve and takes far too many honkers for the good of the country. [During the 1939 season approximately 17,000 geese were killed in Alexander county.

Increase in Blue Geese.

Blue geese have increased their numbers so satisfactorily that this year one may take four per day in addition to two Canada geese. This is going to be pretty nice for the boys in Louisiana where the blue geese concentrate. If they want to stage a shoot only for blue geese, they can shoot six per day. Six is also the possession limit on blue geese.

American League to Give Movies to Servicemen

Major league baseball, which has coöperated in the war effort in many ways, took another step in that direction yesterday with the announcement by President Will Harridge that the American league's motion picture and promotion departments have been offered to the war and navy departments for the duration.

Lew Fonseca, league promotional director, who has been producing its annual motion picture, said that more than 3,000 films will be made available for army camps, naval training stations, United Service Organization centers and other recreational centers.

Requests from schools, clubs, fraternal organizations, etc., will be filled after the army and navy programs have been scheduled.

JIMMY BROWN OF CARDS SUFFERS FRACTURED TOE

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP).—Jimmy Brown, St. Louis Cardinals' third baseman, was sent back to St. Louis today, suffering a fractured toe on his right foot.

Manager Billy Southworth said the Cards' infielder sustained the fracture in batting practice preceding last night's Pirates-St. Louis game. Brown played five innings of the game before the painful injury forced him out. A doctor's examination today disclosed the injury. Whitey Kurowski replaced Brown in the lineup.

YANKEE PLACES 3D IN RACE, BUT WINS YACHT CUP

Yankee, Ed Schnabel's 39 foot sloop, placed third to Gould Davis and his Tabasco yesterday in the third and final race for the Sir Thomas Lipton trophy, but won the cup on total points. Schnabel won the first and second races Thursday and Friday. Wearing the Lipton trophy winner's traditional top hat, Skipper Schnabel was tossed into Belmont harbor after the race yesterday by his competitors. He won the prize in 1939 and 1940.

His winning score yesterday was 19½ points to 16¼ for Tabasco and 16 for Nancy, the Kimball-Railton entry. Tabasco was sailed by Skipper Davis, May Proper, Otto Stoessel, Walter Wolf, and William Hansen, backstays. The double ended sloop covered the quadrangular course in 2 hours 48 minutes and 23 seconds. Safara, second to finish, was timed at 2:55:45. Yankee finished in 2:58:52.

Romany Wins Nutting Trophy.

Romany won the Sir John Nutting trophy for the Heinemann-Schmidt syndicate with three firsts. Gordon Brummel won the August Gehrmann trophy with the Tumlaren class sloop Hexa. In previous years the best he had scored was a second and a third for the award.

Harry Nye Jr. and his wife, Betty, won the Joseph Richter trophy for Chicago Yacht club Star boats by taking all three races in his 22 foot racer, Gale. They won the third race yesterday morning off Belmont harbor.

Among the crews in yesterday's racing off Belmont harbor were four yachtswomen, Mds. Adrian VerBrughen aboard her husband's R boat, Safara; Margeret Stedman aboard Dr. Theodore Morris' Alert IV., Mrs. Harry F. Olson aboard her husband's Aquila, and Mrs. Albert Miller aboard her husband's yacht, Little Haste. All aided the yachtsmen in sailing the craft.

Adara First at Columbia.

Altho Adara, Henry Hodeck's Columbia Yacht club Star boat, won the club's race off Chicago harbor yesterday, the Skippy, owned by the Wade-Lange syndicate, won one of the Baccarat trophies awarded by Louis Ainbinder. Skippy placed third in the final race of the trophy series yesterday. Fran Byrne in Cherokee was second.

Mrs. Ken Schmid, whose husband is on duty as a navy photographer, sailed his Snipe class sloop Dry Sue to victory in the Chicago Corinthian Yacht club's first race held yesterday afternoon off Montrose harbor. The Pagels-Wingard syndicate entry, Lady O, runner up in the opening event, won the second race. Arvid Gunderson was Dry Sue's crew.

Commodore John T. Pirie II. won the Sheridan Shore Yacht club race for Star boats off Wilmette harbor yesterday in his flagship, Gemini. His brother, Lieut. Lockwood M. Pirie, USNR., a veteran yachtsman on leave, and Charles Brashears, 15 years old, were his crew.

Cincinnati Legion Wins Ohio Diamond Title, 3-1

Blozis, 250 Pounds, and Odson, 240, Are All-Stars' Giants

Fans who attended yesterday's first practice session of the 1942 College All-Stars in Dyche stadium rubbed their eyes in amazement when Al Blozis, the modern Hercules from Georgetown university, trotted out on the field. Blozis, who plays tackle, and how, weighs 250 pounds and is 6 feet 6 inches tall, towering over his fellow Stars. The runnerup in the physique division is Minnesota's Urban Odson, 6 foot 3 inch 240 pounder, who also plays tackle.

These two mighty men make up the biggest All-Star tackle duo since Joe Stydahar and Bob Reynolds teamed up in 1936. Altho one of the country's greatest linemen last season, Blozis attained greatest prominence for his track exploits. He hurled the 16 pound shot 57 feet ¾ inches for a world indoor record and only one quarter inch off the outdoor mark. He also has made the third best competitive throw in the discus, 173 feet 10 inches.

Busiest chap around the All-Star camp yesterday was little Bill Andrews, who came from Austin, Tex., to serve as manager of the squad. Bill, who was manager of the University of Texas team as a freshman last year, knows his way around a football camp. In addition to running chores for the Long Horns last fall, he scurried over to New Orleans to manage the West All-Stars in the East-West game on New Year's day.

Bill's greatest regret is that Pete Layden and Chal Daniel of last year's great Texas team were unable to join the All-Stars. Both are in pilot training in the army air corps at Randolph field. But Andrews says that Malcolm Kutner, starting end on the college team, will uphold Texas' reputation ably. Bill thinks that Kutner, who is 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 195 pounds, is just about the greatest end who ever stepped upon a football field.

You have the word of Pete Kmetovic, Stanford's great half back of last season, that Marchy Schwartz will be a popular successor to Clark Shaughnessy, who resigned as the Indians' coach to go to Maryland. Pete said yesterday that the former Notre Dame star is well liked on the Palo Alto campus and that his selection as head coach was enthusiastically received. Schwartz was assistant to Shaughnessy for the last two years.

Stanford has four representatives on the All-Star squad. In addition to Kmetovic, they are Vic Lindskog, towering center; Ken Robesky, guard, and Fred Meyer, end. A fifth player, Frankie Albert, was elected to the squad, but was unable to accept because of his duties as a naval ensign. Kmetovic, whose ball carrying exploits at Stanford already are reaching the legendary stage, is a petty officer at Great Lakes and will be a member of the station's football team this fall.

Sergt. Bob Gude, Vanderbilt center, will arrive from Camp Cooke in California, to join the All-Star squad tomorrow. Sergt. Gude is a member of the army football team which is training under Maj. Wallace Wade, formerly of Duke university, for a schedule of games with members of the National Football league.

Coach Bob Zuppke, whose familiarity with the celebrated T dates back to the beginning of his coaching career at Illinois 29 years ago when it was his basic formation, said yesterday that it is the great personnel of the Bears that makes the system effective, rather than any inherent feature of the system itself. Coach Homer Norton of Texas A. and M. corroborated Zup's views by adding, "The Bears have the T formation—plus."

Lloyd Cheatham, quarter back from Alabama Poly, will report to the All-Stars Wednesday. He has been spending the summer as a member of the Anniston, Ala., baseball team and has obtained his release in order to play in the All-Star game. After the game he will report to the Chicago Cardinals.

AMATEUR LEAGUE HAS 21 GAMES ON PROGRAM TODAY

Metropolitan Amateur league baseball games postponed from last Sunday will be played off this afternoon. The schedule calls for 21 contests.

Interest will center on a prospective pitching duel between Ted Wallinger of the St. Vitus nine, and Garland Feigenbaum of the St. Davids. The schedule:

LINCOLN-REVERE SENIOR BRACKET. Wilson Sports vs. Clarion A. C., Revere Park, 3 p. m.; Orioles vs. Assumption, Waveland Park, 3 p. m.; Rob-Wins A. C. vs. Indians A. C., River Park, 3 p. m.

SHERMAN-McKINLEY SENIOR BRACKET. Red Wings A. C. vs. Kildare Tigers, 39th and Western, 1 p. m.; Chi-Reds A. C. vs. Chi-Plebes, 19th and Wood, 3 p. m.; Rams A. C. vs. Tim Ryans, Sherman Park, 3 p. m.; St. Vitus A. C. vs. St. David, Mark White Square, 3 p. m.

CALUMET-SUBURBAN BRACKET. Golden Stars vs. Messeville, Hesseville, 3 p. m.; Club Society vs. Arden Boosters, Washington Park, Diamond 3, 3 p. m.; Guadalupanos vs. Whiting-Moose, Whiting, Ind., 3 p. m.; St. Johns vs. Assumption, Block stadium, 3 p. m.

LINCOLN-REVERE JUNIOR BRACKET. Dodgers A. C. vs. Avalon A. C., Waveland Park, 12:30 p. m.; Chi-Braves vs. Krivan A. C., 5200 North Elston, 3 p. m.; Park Ridge vs. Chi-Boys club, Revere Park, 12:30 p. m.

McKINLEY-SUBURBAN JUNIOR BRACKET. Rebels A. C. vs. Maciejewski Boosters, 52d and 29th place, 3 p. m.; Wolcott Tigers vs. W. S. Arrows, Douglas Park, 3 p. m. Cicero Cavaliers vs. Central A. C., Roosevelt and Central, 3 p. m.; St. Mary of Celle vs. Panda Giants, 14th and Euclid, 3 p. m.

CHICAGO CARDS AWAIT CALL TO WAUKESHA CAMP

20 Named for First Squad Leaving Tomorrow.

The Chicago Cardinals, who aren't playing the College All-Stars, but who, like the Chicago Bears, are members of the National Football league, will report to training camp tomorrow in Waukesha, Wis. They will exercise at Carroll college in the town which is not much further than yelling distance from Delafield, where the Bears are preparing for their busy season.

A group of 20 will be shepherded tomorrow by Arch Wolfe, business manager of the Cardinals. They will leave at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon over the Chicago and Northwestern railroad. Coach Jim Conzelman, who has been teaching in a coaching school at Louisiana State university, is expected to take charge of the team Tuesday. He will be assisted by Phil Handler, a Cardinal fixture as player and line coach for more than a decade.

Newcomers Are Plentiful.

The Cards will look over a lot of new talent, including recruits from the college ranks and players obtained in deals. The south siders perhaps were the busiest traders this summer of all the league teams. They got Joe Bukant and Johnny Knolla, half backs, from Philadelphia for Hugh McCollough and Bert Johnson. They traded Johnny Hall to Detroit for Billy Jefferson, a fine passer.

In addition to Knolla and Jefferson, other backs in the departing squad will be John Martin, Bob Morrow, Buddy Parker, Bud Schwenk, Chet Wetterlund, and Ernie Wheeler. The first three are veterans from last year. Schwenk was one of the best college passers in the nation in 1941, tossing the ball for Washington university in St. Louis.

Three Centers in List.

Half Backs Francis Splinter of Plattsville, Wis., Teachers, and John Tennant of Wisconsin, together with Tackle Gene Hollister of Louisiana and Guard Frank Bohlman of Marquette, will go from their homes to Waukesha. Half Backs Steve Lach of Duke and Lloyd Cheatham of Auburn and End Ray Ebli of Notre Dame are members of the College All-Star squad and will report after the game with the Bears. Alton Coppage and Bill Daddio, ends, will come in later in the week, as will Half Back Bukant and Milt Popovich, a full back and guard.

Marshall Goldberg, the old star from Pittsburgh who has played for the Cardinals for three years, apparently has decided to pass up competition this year because of the press of business.

Zuppke Sends College Stars Thru 1st Drill

vidual vote in the poll; Jim Daniell, Ohio State tackle; Vincent Banonis, outstanding center from Detroit university; Al Blozis of Georgetown university, whose 6 feet 6 inches make him the tallest of the collegians; Bob Jeffries, scrappy guard from Missouri's Big Six championship team; Steve Juzwik, Notre Dame's fleet half back; Judd Ringer, end on Minnesota's undefeated 1941 team, and Bruce Smith, also of the Gophers, who sparked the Minnesota attack for three years.

The immediate personnel problem apparently is at the flanks of the scrimmage line. Temporarily, there is a shortage of ends and to fill this need Coach Zuppke immediately moved Ray Ebli of Notre Dame from tackle to end. The move was dictated by Ebli's experience since the Irish star won his monogram as an end in 1940, but was shifted to tackle last year by Leahy because of a dearth of veterans at this all important spot. Other changes can be made, for several men listed as full backs have had experience as blockers at the right half position. Vic Lindskog of Stanford, center last year, also has had experience at full back.

GOSHEN AGOG AT HAMBLETONIAN, COLBY HANOVER

Grand Circuit Feature to Be Run Wednesday.

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—The trotting horse clan began gathering today for three days of grand circuit racing headlined by the 17th Hambletonian Wednesday. Conditions being what they are with tires and gas rationing, the meeting has been cut to three days—Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday—and the crowd figures to be somewhat smaller but Hambletonian day is the town's one big chance to splurge and the home folks intend to make the most of it.

Ten or 12 3 year old trotters are expected to start in the $40,000 trotting derby but the horse that is being talked about is Colby Hanover, champion 2 year old of 1941 which is being prepped by Fred Egan.

Purchased for $15,000.

Colby Hanover was purchased last year from the estate of the late Eugene Frey of York, Pa., for a reported $15,000 by C. W. Phellis of New York and I. W. Gleason of Williamsport, Pa.

The brown son of Mr. McElwyn, who has a 2 year old record of 2:04¼, has been out only once this season but in that he won the final two heats of the National Stallion stake at Old Orchard Beach, Me., after finishing fourth in the first brush. If Colby Hanover comes thru as his short priced odds indicate he should, it will be the second Hambletonian victory for Egan. The veteran Kentuckian won in 1940 with Spencer Scott.

Purse Is Split Six Ways.

But there are several horsemen who don't think Colby Hanover is such a sure fire cinch, with the result they'll plank down the required starting fee of $500 on the day of the race. Besides, the purse is split six ways and that offers everybody a pretty good chance of getting something back on the $960 necessary to keep a horse eligible and get him to the post.

Listed among the most likely starters are George F. Benham's Cannon Ball, Colby Hanover's most serious rival last year and his conqueror in the Arthur S. Tompkins Memorial race over the same racing strip; Bill Strang's The Ambassador, and Ebby Gerry's Blue Boy. All three are New York owned. Others are George L. Hempt's Follow Me of Camp Hill, Pa.; Leo McNamara's Green Diamond of Indianapolis and Joseph F. Burke's President Elect of Plainfield, N. J., both trained by Tom Berry; Paxton Hanover from B. C. Mayo's Tarboro, N. C., stable; Pay Up, with which R. H. Johnston of Charlotte, N. C., will seek his second straight victory, and Sophie Hanover, Lawrence Sheppard's hope for his third triumph in the stake.

NO. 1 COLT IN HAMBLETONIAN

Colby Hanover, 2 year old trotting champion of 1941, owned by I. W. Gleason of Williamsport, Pa., and C. W. Phellis of New York, holds the favorite's post for the 17th running of the $40,000 Hambletonian stake Wednesday at Goshen, N. Y. Colby Hanover works out under the guidance of Fred Egan, who will drive him in the stake. [Associated Press Photo.]

DEFENSE bore out while showing speed, was carried out himself after reaching the stretch, responded to strong handling and drew clear in the last sixteenth. SALES TALK was a sharp factor from the start, took command on the inside nearing the stretch and, bearing out in the drive, failed to last. WOOF WOOF was never far back, raced wide to the stretch, came to the inside for the drive and held on well.

SIXTH RACE—Mile and an eighth. Three year olds and up. Sheridan handicap. Purse $7,500 added. Net value to winner, $6,935; second, $1,500; third, $750; fourth, $375.

Winner trained by J. H. Skirvin. Went to post at 5:06. Off at once. Start good from gate. Won driving, place same.

ALETERN, steadied along for three-quarters, rallied thereafter when roused, and, closing fast between horses, was up in the last sixteenth. THUMBS UP followed the pace in hand, took command when shaken up in the stretch, and held on well, but could not withstand the winner. JAMERICA, badly outrun for five-eighths, began to improve his position thereafter, came to the extreme outside for the drive, and closed strongly.

Suggests Shifting Building Materials in State

GAEL SULLIVAN OUTLINES PLAN TO AID SHORTAGE

Clay Products Body Urges Substitutions.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Two new methods of relieving the building material shortage in Illinios and elsewhere were outlined yesterday. First, Gael Sullivan, FHA state director for Illinois, suggested removal of home construction items from communities outside of war industry areas to active defense zones where they are badly needed.

Second, the Structural Clay Products institute said the present scarcity of lumber can be met by substitution of brick and other fireproof clay products which are still available without the necessity of securing priorities. Labor to handle these materials also is available, it was said.

Suggests State-Wide Census.

Sullivan's plan to relieve the Illinois building material shortage by shifting materials is based on reports from FHA agents and representatives of the building industry thruout the state. There are 1,100 lumber yards in Illinois, he said, and of these about 1,000 are in nonwar industry zones. Many of these have ample supplies of building material on hand, his reports disclosed.

A state-wide census of available building materials in communities outside actual war industry areas was suggested by Sullivan with the object of having some authoritative agency requisition them for use in territories where such materials are badly needed.

Yards Piled High.

"There are many lumber and building material yards thruout the state piled high with various items sorely needed now by builders in war industry areas," Sullivan said.

"Some agency with sufficient power might requisition such materials, with proper compensation, of course, and direct them to areas where they could be immediately put to use.

"A bath tub lying in a warehouse is about as important to a war home as the spare tire is to an automobile.

"If we could pick up, for example, sufficient material for five homes from each of the 1,000 lumber yards in nonwar industry areas, we would have potentially 5,000 more new homes for the growing army of war workers thruout Illinois."

Brick and Tile Plentiful.

W. D. Connelly, director of the Structural Clay Products institute, said there is a plentiful supply of brick and tile in this area. He also reported that clay products are being substituted for lumber in many projects slowed up by the recent War Production board's designation of lumber as a critical material.

How the clay products industry is meeting shortages in building materials was told by Connelly. Bath tubs and kitchen sinks, not available in sufficient quantities to meet present needs, are being replaced with glazed tiles. Shortages of metals for heating systems also is being met by the institute with a fire brick furnace now being developed.

Clay tile is now being used on certain war projects thereby making more tons of steel available for the armament program, Connelly said.

TWELVE STORY MERRILL HOTEL SOLD FOR $102,000

The 12 story Merrill apartment hotel, 7046-50 Merrill avenue, was sold yesterday by the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, to the Liberty National Bank of Chicago, trustee for undisclosed parties, for a reported $102,000. The price includes land, building, and furnishings, according to Stephen Love of Wolf & Love, attorney for the buyers. Pritzker & Pritzker were attorneys for the seller. Milton A. Sherman was broker. The building contains 50 apartments of one, two, and three rooms.

Eight Homes for War Workers

Four buildings, each containing two five room apartments, at 8032-44 Kingston avenue, built for and rented to war workers at $50 monthly by J. E. Merrion & Co. J. V. McPherson was architect. Each building is financed with a $7,500 FHA first mortgage insured loan negotiated thru Greenebaum Investment company. There is no basement—each flat having its own utility room with gas fired, forced warm air heaters.

With 30,000 Home Vacancies, Los Angeles Faces a Shortage

With 30,000 vacant dwelling units in Los Angeles county there is an acute housing shortage in Long Beach and the harbor area, writes Homer Hoyt, director of research of the Chicago Plan commission, who is now studying housing and planning on the Pacific coast. Out of a total of 10,195 living units in Long Beach there are only 17 vacancies, he reported yesterday.

Homer Hoyt.

"The importance of mass transportation in relation to furnishing homes for war workers is illustrated by Los Angeles," he wrote. "There are today 30,000 vacant residential units, of which 20,000 are in a rental range suitable for war workers and yet all of these vacant units are at points remote from war plants.

21,000 New Home Units.

"Over 21,000 new dwelling units, public and private, were made available in Los Angeles county in the first six months of 1942, and 12,000 more are expected to be completed in the last half of this year.

"Yet all the workers can't be housed near the plants. It is recognized that providing transportation that will enable workers to make the greatest use of existing homes is the essence of the problem.

Working Hours Are Staggered.

"The airplane plants have staggered working hours so that shifts in different plants do not terminate at the same hours. This enables the bus companies to use their equipment at peak capacity at all hours in providing special service to the plants.

"However, the plants located at great distances from each other and not connected with the central city by any mass transportation system are facing a serious problem in getting workers to their homes."

Mansion Built by Pullman Is Being Wrecked

Another of Prairie avenue's old-time mansions, when Chicago's gold coast of the 1880s and 1890s was on the near south side, is disappearing under wreckers' tools. The stone front residence at No. 1906, built by the late George M. Pullman, founder of the Pullman company, and given to his daughter, Harriet, as a wedding gift in 1892, is being razed by the Harvey Wrecking company.

The property, owned by the Harris Trust company, trustee for the Alexander estate, has been vacant for the last two years. For a decade prior to that it was used as a rooming house.

Harriet Sanger Pullman married Francis J. Carolan of San Francisco in 1892. Following his death in 1923 she became the wife of Col. Arthur Frederick Schermerhorn of New York.

George M. Pullman also built another imposing mansion, adjoining Mrs. Schermerhorn's home on the south, for his second daughter, Florence, wife of former Gov. Frank O. Lowden. This was torn down by the Harvey Wrecking company two years ago.

The two daughters' homes were a block south of their father's big residence at the northeast corner of Prairie and 18th street and were directly across the street from the home of the late Marshall Field at 1905 Prairie avenue.

MERRION BUILDS 550 HOMES IN 3½ YEAR PERIOD

Merrionette Park Units Are All Occupied.

J. E. Merrion, president of J. E. Merrion & Co., which has built 550 homes in Chicago during the last 3½ years, yesterday announced that all of the 125 residences recently built in Merrionette Park, his 33 acre development at Kedzie avenue and 115th street, are sold and occupied. With the exception of a few outside minor construction details the entire project is finished, he said.

Merrion recently completed four buildings at 8032-44 Kingston avenue, each containing two five-room flats, which are occupied on a $50 per month rental basis.

Other Projects Under Way.

He has several other projects nearing completion in various south side locations. At the northeast corner of Kingston and 81st a six unit five room row house development is being finished. All units already have been rented at $50 a month. As in other rented units, both apartments and row houses, the tenant pays his own heat and lighting bills. Merrion furnishes heating equipment, gas stoves and refrigerators.

The 81st-Kingston row house project represents an investment of $36,000 in land and building, Merrion said, and is one of the first to be erected under Chicago's recently liberalized building code.

Homes for Chrysler Workers.

At the southeast corner of Sacramento avenue and 87th street a 12 unit row house project is under construction. This is planned for workers at the huge Chrysler aircraft engine plant now being built about 2½ miles distant.

MARTIN'S, INC., TO HAVE CAFE IN WEST RANDOLPH

A new restaurant is planned for Chicago's theatrical district. The two upper floors of the four story building, 40 by 81.75 feet, at 7-11 West Randolph street are being removed by the Harvey Wrecking company for the owners, Mrs. Laura Von Glahn and Mrs. Antoinette Storch. The two lower stories are to be remodeled into a modern restaurant to be operated by Martin's Inc. Lawrence Monberg is architect. The lessee now operates cafés at 33 North La Salle, 120 South La Salle, in the Board of Trade building, and at 2015 East 71st street.

PACKING LOSSES MOUNT IN PORK PRICE SQUEEZE

Costs One Company Million a Month.

Heavy financial losses on pork packing, ranging as high as a million dollars a month in the case of at least one of the major processors, have been incurred in the packing industry in the squeeze resulting from pork price ceilings and high hog prices, stock yards sources reported yesterday.

Packers would not state the extent of their losses, but existence of their unfavorable position with regard to pork processing is known generally in the industry. Some of the smaller companies, including F. Hilgemeier & Brother, Inc., of Indianapolis, have gone out of the pork packing business because of the price squeeze, and others were reported postponing similar decisions until they can determine their chances of surviving under the recent proposal to subsidize the small companies.

Diversification Cushions Shock.

The large packers—Swift, Armour, Wilson, and Cudahy—have diversified and extensive markets which enable them to cushion the shock of such pork losses as they have incurred. Officials of Swift and Armour declined to state what their pork losses have been.

In many plants the carrying chains that move hogs thru the processing operations have been adjusted to the lowest possible pace, and crews put on a "slow motion" basis. Two factors account for the slowing down. At present, the plants cannot get enough hogs to supply their needs, because this is a slack marketing season, and the dearth of animals is expected to last for another month or six weeks, when heavy marketing of new crop hogs is expected.

But even before the hog supply dwindled, the processing plants were slowing their pork production lines because every hog they handled meant another loss. Stock yards men estimated that packers have been losing 75 cents to $3 on every hog they processed recently.

Packer Reports on Losses.

A representative of one big packing organization said the company had been taking losses on pork, "like all other packers," but added:

"We are not planning any protests to the government and are not crying about the situation."

He said the company did not plan to do much even in the way of trying to get adjustments in price ceilings in certain areas where the pinch has been worst, altho the smaller packers are seeking such changes.

Some company spokesmen expressed hope that a solution to the pork loss problem might develop after the fall marketing movement from the farms gets under way. They said the companies at least could look forward to an easing of the meat shortage that has caused many retail butcher shops to close.

GENERAL FINANCE BUYS CLIMAX ENGINEERING CO.

The Climax Engineering company, Clinton, Ia., has been purchased for cash by General Finance corporation, Owen L. Coon, board chairman of the latter company, announced. The price was not revealed.

The purchase was made, Coon said, to better enable the Iowa company to press its war projects by using the financial facilities of General Finance, of which it will be a subsidiary. The present management and personnel of Climax will continue, but policies will be formulated by a new board of directors.

Climax, incorporated in 1916, has, since its inception, manufactured internal combustion engines. In recent years it has enlarged its activity to include oil field drilling and pumping engines, light plants and generating sets, industrial power units, gray iron and alloy castings.

Order Wisconsin Steel Works Bargaining Vote

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—The National Labor Relations board ordered today elections among workers of the Wisconsin Steel works, Chicago, a subsidiary of the International Harvester company, to determine collective bargaining agencies. Production and maintenance employés will vote on whether they wish to be represented by the CIO-United Steel Workers, by the unaffiliated Progressive Steel Workers union, or by neither.

Chicago Area Awarded 72 War Contracts in Week

Chicago area companies last week received 72 war production contracts, nearly twice as many as in any other recent week, the Chicago Association of Commerce reported yesterday. The orders were placed with 56 companies, 17 of which had not received war contracts before. The association said 1,610 Chicago area companies have received 7,347 government orders totaling $1,818,316,000 since the production program began in July, 1940.

Beef Shortage Is Most Severe in Best Grades

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

A survey conducted by the department of agriculture in the Chicago stock yards disclosed an "alarming" shortage of prime beef, it was learned yesterday. The proportion of animals slaughtered that graded choice to prime was found to be the second lowest on record for the season.

Only 12.2 per cent of all beef cattle butchered during July graded choice to prime, compared with 35.5 per cent for the two top grades during July, 1941. Four years ago, 59.8 per cent of July steers were choice to prime.

The Office of Price administration's beef ceilings in wholesale and retail channels, as well as the buying of meat for the armed forces and allies, trade observers agree, encourage the production of lower grades of beef animals. As a result, 61.9 per cent of last month's steers were "just good," against 47 per cent a year ago.

Encourages Shorter Feeding.

To encourage farmers to sell their cattle after a shorter feeding period than is necessary to bring stock into prime condition, lend-lease and army meat buyers are paying prices for meat from the medium to good grades of cattle that make it unprofitable for farmers to keep steers on feed for that final top finish.

Stockyards men illustrate the relatively high basis for "cheap" cattle by figures showing choice and prime steers averaged 106 per cent of parity last month while good averaged 110 per cent, medium 115 per cent, and common 114 per cent. Good cows sold at 119 per cent of parity, canners 136, and bulls 139 per cent . . . the cheaper the cattle the higher the relative price position.

Since ceilings were placed on beef early in May, there has been a heavy selling of cattle that farmers had intended to keep until later in the fall. As a result cattle weigh 25 to 50 pounds a head less than at sales a year ago. This represents a loss of 25 to 50 million pounds of beef monthly, it was estimated.

Cattle Prices Advance

Fear of the beef shortage as well as the recent upward adjustment of prices hotels and restaurants are permitted to pay for meat, stimulated a sharp price rise in cattle prices last week. Best grades rose 50 cents per hundred pounds.

Altho lamb meat will come under a ceiling in retail and wholesale markets tomorrow, based on prices charged during the period July 27 to 31, live lamb costs rose 25 to 35 cents. The $14 average for the six days was 30 cents above the base period.

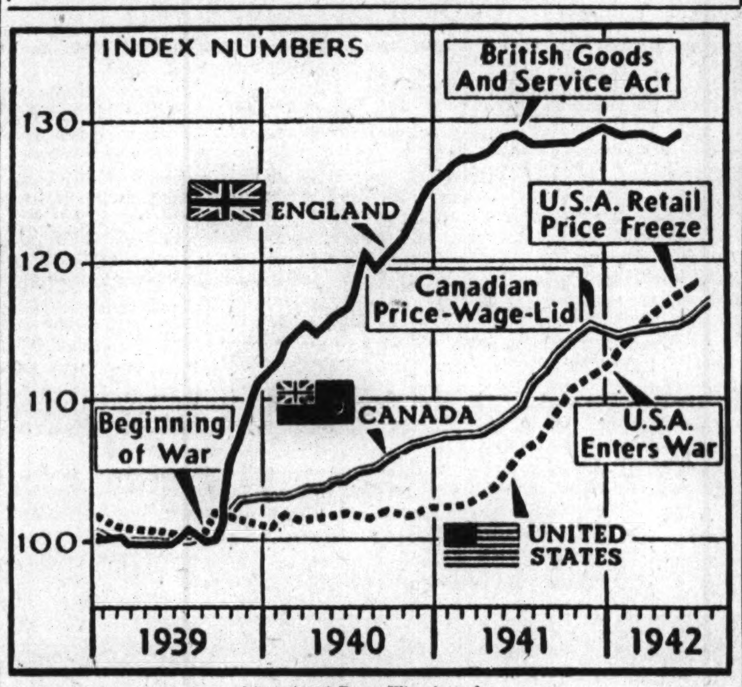
Hogs shared in the general price advance.

MEXICAN BANKS TO RULE SILVER IN HOME MARKET

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Miners and Merchants bank today announced that it and the Bank of Mexico, central government bank, would control jointly the sale of Mexican silver in the domestic market.

The large silver producers now sell directly to the United States government while the small ones, representing about 20 per cent of Mexican production, have been supplying the domestic market. Prices in this market have risen to nearly double the price paid in the United States, working hardship on small silversmiths here, it was said.

Canada Leads in Living Cost Control



[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

In the effort to control the cost of living Canada has been more successful than the United States and England. Figures of the United States bureau of labor statistics show the rise from the August, 1939, average: Canada, 17 per cent; United States, 18 per cent; England, 29 per cent. Canada's prices rose in June, but dominion officials say it is temporary. England's big rise reflects higher prices of imports.

LARGEST COTTON CROP SINCE 1937 FORECAST; 22 PER CENT OVER 1941

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—The largest cotton crop since 1937 was forecast today with a preliminary estimate by the agriculture department that production would total 13,085,000 bales.

The immediate effect of the forecast, nearly three quarters of a million bales above expectations in New York trade quarters, was to send futures prices at New York and New Orleans down nearly $2 a bale.

Shortly after announcement of the estimate, 2,341,000 bales or 22 per cent more than 1941 production and a fraction less than the 1931-40 average of 13,109,000 bales, the Commodity Credit corporation announced its 1942 cotton loan program.

The new loan rate was based at 16.02 cents a pound on 7/8 inch middling. A two-cent a pound increase over the 1941 rate, the figure was based upon 85 per cent of the parity price of 18.85 cents on August 1, 1942.

TRUCK DRIVERS' STRIKE THREAT TO COKE SUPPLY

Uniontown, Pa., Aug. 8 [Special].—Eight hundred CIO truck drivers who haul coal to 4,500 beehive coke ovens struck today in protest against the failure of the OPA to make a decision on pay raises.

It was their second strike over wages in a month and the action forecast a shutdown of the coke ovens which have been pressed into service for the war effort after years of idleness.

Expect Transit Tie-Up.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 8 [Special].—Spokesmen for the 8,000 union employés of the Philadelphia Transportation company today indicated that they regarded a strike over wages on the system, serving 300,000 war workers, as "almost inevitable."

Some Stores May Close for Lack of Goods

Trade sources estimated yesterday that unless the situation of the small retail merchant is altered drastically in the next six to nine months, 20 per cent of them will be forced out of business by a shortage of civilian consumer goods. This does not include the normal mortality of 16 per cent annually.

The number of retail merchants in the United States is placed at about 1,775,000. Of this total, 54 per cent do a business of less than $10,000 annually. The volume of these "little fellows" accounts for about 10 per cent of retail sales each year. Sales of all retailers in 1939 totaled 42 billion 41 million dollars, according to the census bureau.

The Illinois Federation of Retail Associations said that retailers face large financial losses thru merchandise shortages and that this squeeze will be tighter as more manufacturers turn to war production. In Illinois, 110,000 merchants are affected, the federation said.

Pinch Not Severe Yet.

Joseph T. Meek, executive secretary of the federation, said there have been few failures among the smaller merchants so far because of shortages and price ceilings. Many government limitation orders, he continued, have gone into effect only recently, or will not be effective until early fall. Meanwhile, merchants either have been able to obtain merchandise or are drawing upon inventories.

By the beginning of next year, however, these stocks will be dwindling, he asserted, and the full impact of the war economy soon will become apparent.

Meek said an example of what may be expected is to be found in the business failures of tire, automobile, and household appliance dealers whose goods were cut off early in the war. As in the case of these groups, he said, the financial loss or failure of individual merchants will depend largely upon the business ability of the operator.

British Stores Closed.

The British Board of Trade recently reported that of the 750,000 stores in Great Britain before the war, "many thousands" have been forced out of business by lack of supplies and other war factors. It held out little hope for improvement in the situation of the small merchant.

The board predicted that conditions in Britain will get worse, and indicated the United States is likely to share this experience on a large scale.

Retail trade groups have urged intensified government effort to ease the condition of the smaller retailer by maintaining an even flow of consumer goods from manufacturers who cannot participate in war production.

Chicago Bank Clearings Decline to 374 Millions

A decrease in Chicago bank clearings last week to $374,100,000, from $381,900,000 in the preceding week was reported yesterday by the Chicago Clearing House association. The association's report follows:

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—The War Production board today extended its freeze order on construction lumber an additional 15 days to Aug. 27, pending completion of a new order.

Denies Dealers Hoard Junk; Salvage Much Building Steel

Flow Is Not Adequate

Scrap metal is being recovered from sources formerly overlooked or ignored by dealers but the intensified drive has not maintained the flow of scrap to mills at the level required to keep steel production at capacity, William Pohn, president of the Chicago chapter of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel, said yesterday.

He said it is not true that junk dealers are refusing to sell scrap hoards because of price ceilings set by the Office of Price administration, as has been reported. He explained that it was unprofitable for dealers to hold scrap indefinitely because their storage and maintenance costs would consume the profit margin and they would still have to sell within the price ceilings.

Businesses Demand Turnover.

"Junk dealers are doing their utmost to bring in the scrap," Pohn said. "It's their business, and if they don't get scrap to sell they can't stay in business. I don't know of any dealer who is refusing to go out and look for possible scrap he can buy."

Pohn said the OPA ceilings permit a fair profit and that most dealers should be able to remain in business under them. He said the primary difficulty in the trade is the insufficient supply of scrap, not the price controls.

J. E. Michaels, secretary treasurer of Hyman-Michaels company, large scrap dealers, said the scrap shortage is serious and results largely from the huge consumption in the last two years and the drying up of normal sources.

Can Be Used as New

The Harvey Wrecking company, 1701-31 West Cermak road, reported yesterday that it had been successful in salvaging from demolished buildings structural steel that could be used directly in war construction.

Harvey Goldberg, secretary, said that by careful inspection of old materials, the company is able to salvage steel beams and girders which can be put to immediate use, rather than melted as scrap, and often reformed into original shapes.

Lumber also Salvaged.

Approximately five million board feet of used lumber were salvaged in the first six months of 1942, and three million feet have been shipped on A-1-A preference ratings for use in army and navy construction.

Goldberg said the company has intensified its efforts to reduce waste in wrecking operations. In normal times, he said, a certain amount of steel, lumber, brick, and plumbing is scrapped because the cost of labor in salvaging it is prohibitive.

"At present, however, because of the shortage of all kinds of new building materials and despite the increased costs of labor, we are working with the most painstaking methods to save lumber from the kindling wood pile and structural beams and channels from the scrap metal pile," he said.

SENATE DEFEAT PREDICTED FOR SALES TAX PLAN

Backed as Source of Needed Funds.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—There were signs today that the senate finance committee would reject a proposed sales tax despite arguments of its supporters that it would meet the treasury's demand for a 2 billion 500 million dollar increase in the new revenue bill voted by the house.

Altho proponents said they would seek to force a vote on the question, an informed senator said an informal canvass showed sentiment preponderantly against the proposed levy. This senator predicted that if the proposal were brought to the floor it would be defeated after a brief fight.

Two Republicans, Senators Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, have been the most outspoken advocates of a sales tax among committee members, drawing support from such Democrats as Senators Clyde L. Herring of Iowa and Harry F. Byrd of Virginia.

Treasury Opposes Move.

The treasury consistently has opposed such a tax, contending it would prove inflationary. The house ways and means committee rejected proposals for the levy, but Chairman Walter F. George [D., Ga.] of the senate committee said he expected a fight to write it into the bill.

George told reporters that if the bill was to be boosted to the point where it would bring in the additional revenue requested by the treasury the committees would have to resort to some new form of taxes.

[The bill as voted by the house provides for $6,271,000,000 in new revenue. This, when added to existing taxation would bring federal revenues to between 22 and 24 billion dollars, it is estimated.]

George has favored a withholding tax, collected at the source on wages, interest and dividends, similar to the collection levy placed in the bill by the house.

Credited on Tax Bills.

This latter provision would call for the deduction of 5 per cent of regular wage, interest or dividend payments, to be credited on current income tax liabilities. George has indicated an attempt might be made to make this a direct tax, instead of merely an advance collection device.

Taft and Vandenberg said, however, that they would demand effective government wage controls before any attempt was made to tax pay rolls.

While Sen. Prentiss M. Brown [D., Mich.] said he had received no complaints from labor against a withholding tax, Sen. Robert M. La Follette [Prog., Wis.] said he would oppose it because he believed such a levy would put a disproportionate burden on lower income brackets.

General Investment Firm to Vote on Business Shift

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The General Investment corporation today announced that its stockholders would vote Sept. 15 on a proposal to enter the industrial engineering field, and as a first step in that direction to merge with the Foundation company, a Delaware corporation. The merged companies would assume the name of Foundation Industrial Engineering Company, Inc. The investment corporation is affiliated with the Equity corporation group.

Illinois Group Asks 8 Point Tax Revision

The Illinois Manufacturers' association reported yesterday that eight recommendations of its federal tax committee asking relief from the heavier burden of the 1942 revenue bill will be presented to the senate finance committee next Wednesday.

Recommendations were predicated on the appeal that unnecessary nonmilitary spending be abandoned and that waste and extravagance be eliminated. The manufacturers rated these reforms as point No. 1.

Other Steps Advocated.

The committee, headed by Oliver E. Mount, secretary of the American Steel Foundries, advocated these additional steps:

That normal and surtax rates on corporations with net income above $50,000 be cut to a maximum of 40 per cent from 45 per cent as provided in the bill approved by the house.

That excess profits tax rates be fixed at a maximum of 80 per cent instead of 90 per cent.

Elimination of the capital stock tax and declared value excess profits tax in view of the extent of other taxation.

Restoration of the provision that 75 per cent of the average of the best three years' earnings of the 1936 thru 1939 period may be substituted for tax purposes for the poorest year in the base period.

Seek Revision on Losses.

Deduction for losses on sales of buildings and other property in full instead of being treated as losses on capital assets, which have been limited in the pending bill.

Tax allowance for annual additions to reserves for inventory losses.

In the eighth point of their program the manufacturers expressed opposition to a provision that fiscal year taxpayers be assessed at different rates if the taxable period embraces years with different losses.

GROUP TO STUDY BRITISH STEEL CONTROL PLANS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—An American steel mission is going to England to seek more efficiency in the use and allocation of the production of the two countries, the combined production and resources board announced today.

"The capacity of the United States and Great Britain to make weapons is now greater than their joint capacity to produce steel," the board said. "Therefore it is important that every pound be used as efficiently as possible."

The mission will study the British system for control of steel production, allocation, and distribution; how the programs of the two countries can be brought into better balance; possible advantages in sending more ingort steel and less finished weapons to Britain or vice versa; and which theaters of war should be supplied by each country to save shipping space.

The mission will be headed by Charles R. Hook, Middletown, O., president of the American Rolling Mill company, and include Walter S. Tower, New York, president of the American Iron and Steel institute.

War Transport Agency Established in Chicago

The war department yesterday announced establishment in Chicago of an army transportation agency under the command of Col. Harry G. BUILD ICE BREAKERS TO OPEN WINTER ORE LANES TO WAR PLANTS

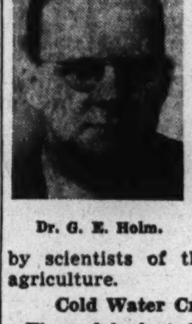
Toledo, O., Aug. 8 (AP).—In an effort to keep the Great Lakes open in the winter for the movement of urgently needed iron ore and coal, several ice breakers are being constructed in the yards of the Toledo Ship Building company. They are described as capable of breaking 9 foot ice, and equal in size to icebreakers built for ocean service.

Three Detroit ferries also are in dock at the Toledo yards awaiting conversion into auxiliary ice breakers. Tied up since the building of a tunnel and bridge, they had been taken over by the coast guard.

Experienced transportation executives saw a possible connection between this work and the decision to build a railroad from Escanaba, Mich., to Superior, Wis. This would permit transportation of the ore and coal to and from far northern points without using Lake Superior or the Soo locks, if Lake Huron were kept open by the ice breakers.

Science Turns Old Butter to Churn Quality

American fighting men in far off places one day may spread their bread with year-old butter, but the favorite fat of this land still will be fresh as butter from the churn.



Dr. G. E. Holm.

The butter would be produced from pure butter oil and skim milk powder, dehydrated products whose merits were outlined yesterday by scientists of the department of agriculture.

Cold Water Creates Butter.

The dehydrated products, the scientists said, could be shipped to tropical countries, held for a year or more if desired, then made into good butter with the aid of a little cold water and a helping of salt.

Dr. George E. Holm said butter oil would solve the problem of a possible lack of refrigeration on ships or in storage warehouses on the fighting fronts. He said the product retains all the valuable nutritive properties of butterfat in the original butter, and therefore practically all its food value. In liquid form it is entirely practical in cooking and baking.

Shipping Space Saved.

The product would save about 20 per cent in shipping space, compared with butter in the usual form.

The manufacture of butter oil was an old procedure centuries ago in India, where the product is known as "ghee." Several years ago butter oil was made commercially in the United States, principally for the baking, ice cream, and candy industries.

CIVILIAN RUBBER USE IN CANADA CUT ABOUT 85%

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 8 (AP).—Civilian use of rubber has been cut to between 10 and 15 per cent of Canada's normal consumption, munitions and supply department officials revealed today.

Canada's crude rubber stock at the end of June was described as the largest in history but "dangerously inadequate" for war needs. The synthetic rubber program, to produce 40,000 tons a year, is scheduled to be in production late in 1943 for war use.

Almost 75 per cent of the present consumption of rubber is going into tires and tubes for military vehicles. Truck and bus tires for essential transportation are getting little more than three per cent.

NATION WARNED TO SPEED WAR GOODS OUTPUT

News of Industry Is Unfavorable.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

The nation last week went thru another period of unfavorable business and war production news, topped off with an official declaration that "we could lose this war" because we have not been getting war material to the fighting fronts "in the time and in the volume that will be needed to win."

Disclosure that America is falling behind schedule in the production of planes, tanks, navy ships, and most types of artillery was made by the Office of War Information, which called on the people to brace themselves for sacrifices in materials and lives.

Several other developments appeared against the same dark background. As steel production slipped further, a charge that some steel warehouses are evading price controls and bootlegging steel in a "black market" jolted the industry, and resulted in a demand by President Roosevelt that offenders be jailed.

22 Warehouses Punished.

Donald M. Nelson, War Production board chairman, began an investigation of the charge, and disclosed that disciplinary action had been taken against 22 warehouses accused of violating WPB quotas in the last two months.

While the President and other authorities were warning easterners of a possible lack of fuel oil for heating homes this winter, confusion in the petroleum supply situation increased to such a degree that a conference of Atlantic coast oil associations appealed to Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones to help in a drive for a unified control over petroleum. The groups blamed difficulties on friction between the Office of Price Administration, the petroleum coördinator, and the Office of Defense Transportation.

The President, seeking to clarify the possibilities of producing synthetic rubber, named a committee to study conflicting claims of backers of various interests.

Vetoes Farm Bloc Bill.

He vetoed a farm bloc bill that would have created an agency to push production of rubber from farm crops. The farm bloc accused the WPB of favoring the petroleum industry in the controversy over the best source of synthetic rubber.

Additional ship sinkings intensified the efforts of proponents of cargo plane construction, and Henry J. Kaiser, west coast shipbuilder who had put up a stormy fight for a chance to build 70 ton flying boats, finally won a commitment from the government. Nelson approved plans to have Kaiser build 100 of the planes as an experiment.

Railroad Oil Shipments to East Reported Lower

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—Railroads carried 784,350 barrels of petroleum and petroleum products to the Atlantic seaboard during the week ended Aug. 1, a decrease of 15,750 barrels daily, or 2 per cent from the preceding week, when shipments reached a high of 800,100 barrels a day. Petroleum Coördinator Harold L. Ickes said shipments are expected to reach higher levels.

STOCK MARKET IDLES THRU DAY; LOSES FOR WEEK

Trade Is Second Lightest in Two Years.

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The stock market was a no decision affair today. Additional unfavorable war news and the Anglo-Indian crisis again restrained bidders, but failed to touch off real liquidation.

The usual reluctance to extend commitments over the week-end also was a restraining influence, but light investment demand remained as a prop.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 36.2, but showed a net loss of 0.3 for the week. It was the fourth consecutive weekly decline. Transfers totaled 101,100 shares, second smallest Saturday since August, 1940.

American Locomotive Gains.

American Locomotive preferred was up 1¾ on two sales, further reflecting a favorable earnings statement. Schenley edged into new high ground for the year. Liggett & Myers B advanced 1. Fractional gains were retained by Southern Railway, United States Gypsum, American Telephone, American Can, Air Reduction, and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Stocks managed to edge forward Monday behind rail and liquor issues as belief was revived that war developments and tax prospects had been discounted. Prices slipped in the next three sessions without being subjected to much pressure. There was a mild comeback Friday.

CHICAGO STOCKS UNEVEN.

The Chicago Stock exchange price movements were mixed yesterday. Advances edged above declines, 18 to 17, while 13 stocks were unchanged. Turnover was 5,000 shares. Consolidated Biscuit, the volume leader, Radio Corporation and Chicago Yellow Cab closed unchanged. Commonwealth Edison advanced ⅛ and Stewart Warner lost ⅛.

RAIL EQUIPMENT MAY RUN SHORT, GENERAL WARNS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—A warning that without additional locomotives, cars, and other equipment the railroads might be unable to carry the mounting war load came today from the chief of the new army transportation corps.

Brig. Gen. Charles P. Gross said the carriers are approaching "a rather serious and even critical condition," and that next year would bring even heavier demands.

"The railroads already have about used up their reserves of surplus equipment," he said. "Right now, because of ship sinkings, they are obliged to use some 1,200 locomotives to haul oil which were available last year for other traffic movements.

"This year will see 34 per cent more ton miles of freight moved than in 1929 and 48 per cent more than 1918, the peak of the first World war."

Draft Boards to Consider Deferments for Miners

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—Local draft boards have been advised that the War Manpower commission has ruled that metallic and nonmetallic mining activity is "essential to the support of the war effort," selective service officials said today. An occupational bulletin for guidance of local boards listed more than three score "critical occupations" in mining which the boards were advised to take into consideration in acting on deferments.

New York Stock Exchange Bond Values Rise in July

New York, Aug. 8.—The New York Stock exchange has announced that 1,150 bond issues were listed on the exchange at the end of July having a par value of $63,992,198,940 and a market value of $61,277,620,583. The average price was 95.76. On June 30, 1,152 issues were listed with a par value of $61,899,239,025, a market value of $59,112,072,945, and an average price of 95.50.

HOUSEHOLD LOAN REDUCTION, TAXES CURTAIL INCOME

Six Month Earnings Fall to $2.74 a Share.

The Household Finance corporation, Chicago, yesterday reported net income of $2,442,950 for the first six months of 1942, compared with $2,712,293 a year ago. Higher taxes were blamed for the decline, which reduced common stock earnings from $3.07 to $2.74 a share.

B. E. Henderson.

B. E. Henderson, president, said the amount of customers' notes receivable as of June 30 declined $5,370,477 from the peak of $86,394,489 on Dec. 31, 1941.

Reynolds Metals Profit Cut.

Earnings of the Reynolds Metals company, Richmond, Va., were adversely affected by higher depreciation and tax charges, and by losses on plants closed as a result of priorities, according to a report to shareholders.

Net profits for the first six months of 1942 were $844,884, equal to 69 cents a share, compared with $1,886,853, or $1.71 a share in the 1941 period. Depreciation charges were raised by $1,382,000 at accelerated rates approved by the government for new plant facilities; federal taxes rose $378,400 above the 1941 period to $1,258,000, and $1,638,373 was charged off in losses on aluminum and lead foil plants closed by priorities.

Time, Inc., reported net profit of $1,427,414 for the six months ended June 30, compared with $2,194,028 a year ago. Profit before taxes likewise declined. This figure was $4,370,414, against $5,071,724 a year ago.

WHEAT PRICES DIP, RALLY, END LITTLE CHANGED

Weather and Mill Buying Check Slump.

Wet weather and mild buying of wheat futures attributed to mills were credited with checking an early decline on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday and bringing a rally of 1¼ cents a bushel from the lows. Little support developed on the upturn, however, and closing prices were unchanged to ¼ cent lower. September wheat finished at $1.17½ a bushel.

Harvesting and threshing of spring wheat in the American northwest is reported to be delayed seriously by unfavorable weather. Market observers expressed the belief that this may hurt seriously the quality of the new grain.

A department of agriculture estimate on the 1942 production of leading grains, to be released Tuesday, is expected to indicate a larger yield than a month ago.

Corn Futures Decline.

Corn declined ½ to ¾ cents. Rains were regarded favorable for this crop. Oats closed unchanged to ¼ cent higher, and rye was off ½ to ⅞ cent.

The effect of wet weather on the cash markets is more apparent in barley than other grains, brokers said. The price of cash barley has advanced about 4½ cents in Chicago within the last week, and the best kinds at Minneapolis gained 6 cents. Cash oats advanced about 1 cent as industries were good buyers in Chicago for shipment to Iowa. This is said to be the first such movement in recent years.

White Corn in Demand.

Demand for the white corn, supplies of which have been small for several years, was unabated. A car of No. 1 white sold at $1.05 or 17¾ cents over the September future. Several years ago white corn sold at about 25 cents over the future, and more than 100,000 bushels were bought to come here from extreme southwestern Texas.

Rails Draw Most Interest in Irregular Bond Market

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Prices were mixed in a narrow and selective bond market today. A few rails, mostly in the lower priced group, drew most attention. United States governments held about even in both listed and unlisted dealings.

WAR DAMAGE INSURANCE.

Backed by a one billion dollar appropriation, a new system of government war damage insurance became effective July 1, replacing the temporary form of federal indemnification provided soon after the outbreak of war with the axis. Policies are issued by the War Damage corporation and are sold only by private fire insurance agents and brokers thruout the United States.

The new system of providing federal insurance against losses resulting from war damage was devised by the department of commerce with the aid of a number of leading fire insurance company executives.

A War Damage corporation policy protects the insured, and legal representatives, against "direct physical loss of or damage to" the property described in the application which may result from "enemy attack, including any action taken by the military, naval, or air forces of the United States in resisting enemy attack."

Consequently, the insured is not protected from loss of use and occupancy or any other indirect or consequential damage, or from damage resulting from blackouts, sabotage, looting or seizure. Damage caused by this country's allies in resisting enemy attack is not covered by government war damage insurance.

Since the damage must be caused by enemy action, or by United States forces resisting the enemy, no insurance protection is afforded against accidental damage caused by American troops in training.

Indemnification against certain losses will be provided upon an additional indorsement in the policy and payment of added premiums. These include losses resulting from damage to accounts, bills, currency, deeds, securities, and bullion. Real property not a part of the buildings, such as fences, also must be covered by endorsements.

Under a government's war damage policy, jewelry, furs, and certain other valuables will be protected for individual owners up to $10,000, with a $5,000 limit for one article. Growing crops will be insured up to $100,000 for a single owner.

Rates for federal war damage insurance are uniform thruout the United States. Losses will be paid by the War Damage corporation within 60 days after the amount of the loss has been determined.

Other provisions of a government policy are much the same as those of most fire insurance companies in relation to loss procedures, appraisals, suits against the corporation and misrepresentation. A government policy on property already insured by a private company covers only losses not covered by the private company.

BRITAIN TO VOTE ANOTHER BILLION POUNDS FOR WAR

Three Year Credits to Top Eleven Billions.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 8.—One of the first tasks confronting the house of commons when it reassemble after the summer vacation will be to vote another 1 billion pounds sterling [about 4 billion dollars] to meet the cost of the war.

This will bring total credits since the outbreak of hostilities up to 11 billion 50 million pounds [about 44 billion 200 million dollars] compared with 8 billion 400 million pounds [about 33 billion 600 million dollars] for the entire last war. The pound credits already voted will cover expenditures to the beginning of September, completing the third year of the war.

12 Million Pounds Daily.

In recent weeks, treasury statistics show, national expenditures have run at the daily rate of 12 million pounds [about 48 million dollars] of which 9,750,000 pounds [about 39 million dollars] is absorbed by the fighting and supply services.

Increasing war costs were reflected this week in a new record currency circulation. Bank of England figures showed an increase of another 9,200,000 pounds [about $36,800,000] to a peak of 833,315,000 pounds [about $3,333,260,000].

The currency issue has expanded 166 million pounds sterling [about 664 million dollars] during the last year.

Inflationary tendencies inherent in this situation provoked further urgings in the financial press for drastic pegging of wages. The prospect of early government action to stabilize pay rates was said to be perturbing the trade union movement.

Declare Situation Is Not Serious.

The dangers of inflation, according to union leaders, are not yet serious enough to necessitate abandonment of the present wage regulation policy.

The glut of money and scarcity of commodities has brought comparative prosperity to the few luxury trades still allowed to operate. Evidence of this is contained in record profits reported by the Provincial Cinematograph Theaters. Larger transfers to reserves and heavier taxation absorbed most of the profits, with the dividend remaining at 15 per cent.

Investors are reaping more substantial benefits, however, from the big business being done by brewers. Watney Coombe Reid, one of the largest English brewery companies, announced a gain in profits and set the dividend this year at 18 per cent, against 15 per cent last year.

Lend-Lease Farm Output Is Valued at 806 Millions

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8 (AP). — Lend-lease deliveries of farm products and processed foods from the start of the program in April, 1941, up to July 1 totaled 5 billion 769 million pounds, costing approximately 806 million dollars.

Chicago Steel Output to Be Higher This Week

Steel ingot production in the Chicago district next week is scheduled to rise to 101 per cent of theoretical capacity from last week's rate of 100.1 per cent.

PENNY-IN-SLOT DEVICES NOW PAY DEATH—TO AXIS!

BY LLOYD NORMAN.

Mills Novelty company, which spent 53 years endowing the lowly penny and nickel with unprecedented magical powers, is grimly at work turning steel sheets and bars into precisely machined articles of death and destruction.

Fred L. Mills.

The machinery which manufactured the vending robots that told your weight, released a candy bar, handed you a cold drink, or ran off a quick movie while you drank your beer, is now shaping cold steel into projectiles and other war implements which bear an obituary for axis soldiers.

In a few months, Mills has been transformed from the nation's largest maker of coin operated machines to a busy arsenal from which shells roll by the thousands. The glistening, tapered chunks of steel are painted yellow—which means that they will be filled at loading plants with high explosives.

Armed Guards Patrol Plant.

One of the three Mills plants looks harmless to a passerby. It might be a modern university building, screened by a trim row of Chinese elms and fronted by velvet lawns and manicured hedges.

Only the uniformed guards with pistols in easy reach disclose the plant's real purpose. No one, not even Fred L. Mills, the president, can penetrate the gates or guarded doors without wearing an identification badge or obtaining an admission pass signed by one of four key officials.

The visitors cannot go beyond the modernistic lobby without filling out a form in duplicate which not only records his signature but his fingerprints. He cannot leave the grounds until he has submitted his pass which is checked carefully against the duplicate. On his tour he may be stopped a dozen times by armed sentinels.

Old Products Gather Dust.

The conversion of the huge factory from a place where engineers and workmen were preoccupied with making automatic machines which amused or provided a quick snack has been rapid. The remnants of the prewar operations are completely gone. The vending machines which remain in stock and are frozen by government order are getting dusty in a storeroom.

As production of coin machines was curtailed last fall, the management directed Anthony Minarik Jr., chief engineer, and his staff to work on plans for the changeover to war production. Minarik started with blueprints and estimates. Bids were submitted to government procurement agencies. Early in January the first war contract arrived.

Minarik, who once studied medicine but chose to work for Mills 20 years ago, assembled the metal working machinery from the company's three plants. The turret lathes which cut and shape steel and other metals were fitted with new tools. He tried to obtain new machinery but found thousands of other war plants clamoring for the same thing. He finally wangled a few multiple spindle lathes.

Convert in Three Months.

Production started three months after the first contract was received, Minarik said. In the 90 days, the job of changing from old to new was done. Workmen who made the parts for the innards of the coin machines were trained to perform the more exacting duties required by ordnance specifications.

Where new machinery could not be obtained, the old machines had to be taught new tricks. Minarik said he and his staff worked 16 and 18 hours a day fitting, adjusting, and improvising with ingenuity when the needed part was not at hand.

The plant is organized on the mass production plan with conveyors moving each unit from one operation to another. Long bars of steel go in one end of the line; shiny, trim projectiles emerge at the other—each machined to within thousandths of an inch of specifications.

Machines Positively Uncanny.

The multiple spindle lathes are the most efficient and amazing of the machinery. Minarik said he wished he had more of them. They perform 17 separate operations automatically while the operator stands by to see that nothing goes wrong.

Another uncanny device is a multichecking machine which automatically flashes green lights if any of the exterior dimensions of a projectile do not meet the required specifications. A sensitive scale reveals whether the projectile is overweight or underweight by 12 thousandths of a pound.

Minarik related how the experience of commercial engineers is improving upon ordnance methods. A copper band which fits around the waist of the shell has to be squeezed into a groove. This formerly was done by a hydraulic press with six shoes forcing the band. The process was slow and left a ragged edge.

Experiment with Plane Parts.

Minarik developed a cone shaped die which performs the same job smoothly and increases output from 4 a minute to 18. He said similar improvements have been made elsewhere in the operation.

Herbert S. Mills, treasurer of the company and one of the four brothers who control it, said all three plants are converted to war work. The company is now experimenting in its wood shops with the production of plastic plane parts.

WOMAN FALLS TO DEATH.

Galesburg, Ill., Aug. 8 [Special].—O. L. Campbell, 90 years old, retired newspaper publisher, died today at his Knoxville home. He was a reporter for the Quincy Herald, editor of the Canton Register, and publisher for 40 years of the Knox County Republican, Knoxville. Later he joined the news staff of the Galesburg Evening Mail. He was postmaster at Knoxville for 16 years. For the last 59 years Mr. Campbell had been secretary of the Knox County Old Settlers' association. Surviving are three children.

Adolph L. Reiner.

Adolph L. Reiner, said to have been, in 1880, the first manual training teacher in the Chicago public schools, died yesterday in his home at 2100 Montrose avenue. Mr. Reiner was born in Cincinnati, O., and was 82 years old. He leaves his widow, Jessie; a son, Russell, and a daughter, Mrs. Gladys James. Services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday in the chapel at 3415 North Clark street. Burial will be in Acacia Park cemetery.

William Williams.

Services for William Williams, 122 Le Moyne parkway, Oak Park, who died Friday of a heart ailment, will be at 3 p. m. tomorrow in the chapel at 5708 Madison street. Mr. Williams, who was 70 years old, was a building contractor in Chicago more than 40 years. He was active in Masonic organizations and was vice president of the Employing Plasterers' association of Chicago. Survivors include two sons, two daughters, and a brother.

Blanche Blackstone Grieves.

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 8 [Special].—Mrs. Blanche Blackstone Grieves, 81 years old, Lacon, Ill., daughter of a pioneer family, died here today. Her late husband, John Grieves, was the son of the founder of the Lacon Woolen Mills. Mrs. Grieves was one of the oldest members of the Lacon High school alumni association, having received her diploma in 1879. Two sons and a sister survive.

Frank C. West.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 8 (AP).—Frank Chadwick West, 63 years old, vice president and general manager of the Canadian Oil company, died at his home here today following a long illness. West had been associated with the company since 1909. He was born and educated in Cleveland, O., and worked for the National Refining company here.

Albert S. Louer.

Services for Albert S. Louer, who died in his home in Highland Park yesterday, will be held in the Rosehill chapel, 5800 Ravenswood avenue, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Mr. Louer, who was 71 years old, for many years was an attorney with the firm of Ringer, Wilhartz, and Louer. For the last 10 years he was a Christian Science practitioner. He leaves a son, Albert, and three brothers.

E. J. Waite.

Manitowoc, Wis., Aug. 8 [Special].—E. J. Waite, 55 years old, salesman for the Peters Oil company, Milwaukee, died as he was breakfasting in a restaurant here today. A restaurant employé told police he saw Waite gasp twice and then slump over. Waite was on his way to Sturgeon Bay where he maintained a summer cottage. His family is there.

Constant Brown.

Wyanet, Ill., Aug. 8 (AP).—Constant Brown, president of the First National bank of Wyanet, former chairman of the Bureau county board of supervisors, chairman of the building committee of the new Bureau county court house and a leader in district Republican politics, died yesterday.

RITES TOMORROW FOR E. T. FLOOD, UNION ORGANIZER

Funeral services for Emmet T. Flood, for many years head organizer for the American Federation of Labor and close personal friend of the late Samuel Gompers, will be held at 9:45 a. m. tomorrow from his home at 5133 Sheridan road to St. Henry's church.

Mr. Flood, who died Friday night at the age of 68, was a pioneer organizer of labor unions thruout the country. In Chicago he founded the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workers of America. He also obtained the first charter for the Flat Janitors' union, and organized the International Nurses' and Attendants' union in all Illinois state hospitals, enabling members to obtain an eight hour day.

He began his union activities in 1900 with Gompers, who was a frequent visitor at Flood's Chicago home. When Gompers died, Flood retired. Surviving are his widow, Anna, three sons, and six daughters. Burial will be in Mount Carmel cemetery.

Identify Victim of Hanging as Missing Evanstonian

The body of a hanging victim found Aug. 5 at Kedzie avenue and Jerome street was identified yesterday as that of Carl Anderson, 41 years old, 1418 Washington street, Evanston. Anderson, a former patient at Elgin state hospital, disappeared July 6 from the home of his brother, Gus, according to James Gleason, Evanston police department record clerk, who traced Anderson's identity thru two slender clews—the belt evidently used by the man to hang himself and dental work.

Buying of 3,418 Tires and 170 Autos Gets Approval

Certificates for 3,418 automobile tires and tubes were issued during the last week by the Chicago rationing board, Michael F. Mulcahy, rationing administrator, announced yesterday. Certificates for recapping and retreading of 1,201 passenger and 468 truck tires were issued. Also purchases of 170 cars were approved.

Cook County Enjoys Day Without Auto Fatalities

No automobile fatalities were reported in Cook county in the 24 hours ended at 4 p. m. yesterday. Up to that time 433 persons had been killed by automobiles in the county since Jan. 1. Of these 337 were killed in Chicago, where 12,336 were injured.

T. A. BUCKNER, 77, LIFE INSURANCE EXECUTIVE, DIES

Son of Middle West, Rose from Office Boy.

New York, Aug. 8 [Special].—Thomas A. Buckner, 77 years old, who rose from office boy to chairman of the board of the New York Life Insurance company during his 60 years of continuous employment, died in St. Luke's hospital here today. He had suffered a relapse while convalescing from a minor operation two months ago.

Thomas A. Buckner.

Buckner was a son of the middle west. Born in Bloomington, Ill., he spent his boyhood in Independence, Mo. The posts of duty at which he laid the foundations for his career as one of the nation's most influential insurance executives were Milwaukee, Wis.; Ottumwa, Ia.; Wichita, Kas., and Chicago. In his entire business career the New York Life Insurance company was the only employer he ever had.

Retired in 1941.

When Buckner retired in 1941 as chairman of the board of the company he had a longer period of continuous service with a single company than any other life insurance executive. The previous year he observed the 60th anniversary of his start in the company's Milwaukee office as a $20 a month office boy.

When 21 he went to Ottumwa, where in his first year he sold $250,000 in policies.

Served in Chicago.

He became cashier of the company's offices at Wichita in 1890 and two year later was inspector of agencies for 12 midwestern states with headquarters in Chicago. He went to New York in 1898 and was elected fourth vice president of the company the following year. He took full charge of the entire agency force as vice president in 1903 and became president of the company March 11, 1931, and chairman of the board in 1936.

Surviving are his widow, a daughter, Mrs. Loring Washburn of Greenwich, Conn., and a son, Thomas Buckner Jr. of Riverdale, N. Y.

CHARGE GERMANS STEAL MEDICINES MEXICO SEIZED

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, Aug. 8 (AP).—Medicines valued at $60,000 were removed secretly from the German drug firm of Merck and company after it was taken over recently by the government and at least a part was shipped to Argentina under forged consular certificates, two Mexican federal agents reported today.

Their report said the medicines were taken from the company's building at the direction of a German employé and sent to a secret warehouse.

Later, the agents declared, some medicine was sent to the Guatemalan border, consigned to a business house in Bolivia, and thence to Argentina.

ROBBED OF $45.

Clarence Peterson, 32 years old, 4345 North Keeler avenue, was robbed of $45 last night by two colored men he met at 2500 Madison street.

U. S. OPENS DRIVE AGAINST 3 STATE WHITE SLAVE RING

Cleveland, O., Aug. 8 (AP).—Government attorneys and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents today moved to smash a Cleveland white slave ring charged with recruiting women for vice assignments in Ohio war plant areas and in Florida and New York.

Cases of five higherups will go before a special federal grand jury convening Monday. Twelve women are held as government witnesses.

First inkling of the drive came yesterday during a preliminary hearing of the cases of two men and a woman charged with violating the Mann act—Louis P. Morei and Carl T. Bruell of Cleveland and Mrs. Vera Miller, Lorain, O. They were freed on bail.

Miss Joyce Foley, 24 years old, now employed in a legitimate Cleveland job, testified that Morei arranged for her employment at a fashionable call house she said was frequented by stage and screen celebrities in New York.

She said she was employed for seven months at Mrs. Miller's place in Lorain, never making less than $75 a week. Miss Foley testified that she sent all her earnings to Morei, but that he paid her transportation and hospital bills.

MAJ. HOIRIIS, 41, PIONEER FLYER OF ATLANTIC, IS DEAD

Somers Point, N. J., Aug. 8 (AP).—Maj. Holger Hoiriis, 41 years old, noted Danish aviator who flew the Atlantic 11 years ago, died last night in Shore Memorial hospital.

Herbert C. Addiscott, hospital superintendent, said death was the result of uremic poisoning, recurring from typhoid fever the flyer contracted in the tropics several years ago.

Hoiriis was commissioned a major in the United States army air corps a week ago after having been grounded for some time because of illness.

Hoiriis and Otto Hillig of Denmark flew from Newfoundland to Krefeld, Germany in June, 1931. The king of Denmark knighted him, and he received many other national honors.

$95,965 IS ASKED FROM STATE FOR PUPIL TRANSPORT

A claim for $95,965 as the state's share of the 1941-'42 school year cost of transporting students to Cook county schools, including $43,837 due the Chicago board of education, has been filed with the state superintendent of public instruction, Noble J. Puffer, county superintendent of schools, reported yesterday. The amount is larger than the $55,614 claimed last year, Puffer explained, because more schools took advantage of the state law, passed in 1939, which provides partial reimbursement, up to $15 a pupil, by the state.

WILMETTE FLYER SAVED BY 'CHUTE IN FIGHTING JAPS

Lieut. Gene Drake, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stafford W. Drake, 1011 Greenwood avenue, Wilmette, joined the Caterpillar club on his 22d birthday anniversary July 30, press dispatches from Australia disclosed yesterday. His plane was disabled after he shot down a Japanese bomber in an air battle near Darwin, and he landed with a parachute. Lieut. Drake joined the air corps March 1, 1941, and got his commission last Dec. 12. He has been in the South Pacific since February. His brother, Stafford Jr., has just been commissioned as a dive bomber pilot in the marine corps at Corpus Christi, Tex.

HELP WANTED—MEN.

Salesmen.

TO THE RIGHT MAN.
A SALESMAN, NOT A CANVASSER.
If you have a good past selling record and seek a sales job which will average $100 per week or better we invite you to explore the possibilities of our INSULATION field. In addition to the fact that we have no production problems because ours is a "national defense measure," the United States government has just issued a gratifying ruling permitting insulation customers 3 years in which to pay.
Our advertising program has developed more leads than our present staff can handle, hence this ad for additional hard-hitting salesmen who can be trained to close business on our EXCLUSIVE Rock Wool Insulation. Experience in our field is not essential, but you must be a man of good education, good appearance, draft deferred, POSSESS A CAR, and be willing to work 3 hours in the morning qualifying leads and 4 hours in the evening closing sales.
We guarantee a weekly drawing account, pay liberal commissions, furnish leads [our salesmen call only by appointment], we supply free gas to producers, and we have the "tire problem" solved. We are the outstanding firm in our industry. Our men are trained intensively and are backed with competent field co-operation plus a vigorous advertising campaign.
We invited you to attend a special personnel meeting at our plant, 3110 S. Michigan-av., Monday, Aug. 10, at precisely 2:30 p. m. [no other time]. We will outline fully our sales program and our requirements. If you are the man we seek, your future is assured.
CONSUMERS' INSULATING & ROOFING CO., 3110 S. Michigan-av.
P. S.: Perhaps we may have rejected your application before. You are cordially invited to try again. If you are draft deferred we will be glad to interview you.

SALES ENGINEER
Experienced, for industrial lubricant. Salary $3,000 plus commission and expenses. State age and experience. Replies confidential.

Address S H 136, Tribune

UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY
Our organization has been surveyed by psychological aptitude tests. We know definitely and specifically what traits and qualities make for probable success as Sonotone Consultants. SALES CONNECTION OPEN
An opportunity is now available in the Chicago territory of a national organization offering an educational business service.

This organization is a leader in its field and has enjoyed international prestige during a period of more than 30 years. Sales volume increased during the depression and is not, and probably will not be affected by priorities.

The man who fits into our organization must be under 50, and of unimpeachable character with sufficient experience to enable him to talk to mature business men. He will be the type of man who wants a permanent, profitable connection. He will receive preliminary training, full co-operation, and an adequate and regular supply of inquiries from national and local advertising.

Many of our men have enjoyed substantial, regular incomes over a period of from ten to twenty-five years.

Compensation is based upon a drawing account against earned commission and liberal bonuses, and is commensurate with the high qualifications required.

If you think you have the necessary qualifications, write telling us your business history, including age, education, experience, past and current earnings, and telephone number.

All letters confidential and an interview will be arranged if the information you supply would seem to justify it.
ADDRESS E C 31, TRIBUNE.

SALESMAN
Does $4,000 or more a year interest you?

You may be a "natural" for our business. If you have had direct-to-consumer selling experience, specialties, services or intangibles — we will prove to you by actual demonstration in the field that our men make extremely large income on a liberal advance commission arrangement. Many of our good men average well over $5,000 annually. A 10-year service program for executives and families of background sponsored by largest and oldest publishers in its field. Personal integrity first requisite. Position permanent. Our expansion program, opening new offices, affords good opportunities for advancement to managerial field. Call in person, 9 to 12—suite 1558, 20 N. Wacker-dr.

CLOSER SALESMEN.
In 1932, most every body had their chins down. I was in another business, the fields in this business looked green to me. They were green.
This country is at war—tongue, tooth, and nail—so are we.

August Stages Show.

Aug. 8, 1942.

WITH just about every color of wild flower one could ask for forming a decorative border, the big pond on the Wheaton farm this week served as an effective outdoor stage around which August was exhibiting many typical features of the season. We sat near this pond for a few minutes one morning when the hot sun injected a laziness into the atmosphere.

Near us nine mallard ducks were dozing in the shade of a willow altho it was only 11:30 a. m., early siesta time for them. A clattering kingfisher dove into the water occasionally to provide the only sign of spirited activity. A big blue heron could be seen at the far end of the pond making a bluff at fishing when actually he was doing more loafing than fishing. Over all spread the heat of a typical August day which seemed to be drawing the fragrance from hundreds of wild flowers around the pond.

Masses of Color.

Behind the willows which line the pond the deep purple flowers of the ironweed were five feet high and between the willows and the higher ground [about 75 feet from the water] everything from Queen Anne's lace to sunflowers was growing abundantly.

Yellows, various shades of purple, greenish white, greens, grays, and other colors were massed around the pond and the wild cherry trees in the woods near by were ornamented with dark red masses of fruit, some of which was ripening and turning black.

We cannot recall any August that put on a more colorful show than the one around the pond this week. The 1942 growing season has been marked by unusually luxuriant growth and abundance of flowers. Even some of the thistles have big ideas this August. We saw one or two plants [in blossom] that were more than six feet tall.

False Indigo Appears.

When we hiked north from the pond we discovered a specimen of false indigo, a useful wild plant from which some Illinois pioneers obtained an indigo dye. Altho we had seen this decorative plant [so good looking that it is suitable for a home ornament] south of Chicago in the forest preserves, we had supposed that it didn't grow in the farm woods because we had looked for it in vain.

The false indigo, or wild indigo, may grow six feet tall or more, has purple flowers in the spring, and at this season displays clusters of green pods, each about one inch long. When the leaves or the pods begin to dry they turn black, a characteristic which denotes the presence of the indigo dye. Not only did pioneers know about the color they could extract from this plant, but doubtless many were acquainted with the shrub's medicinal qualities. It often has been used as an astringent and stimulant by persons familiar with medicinal herbs and plants.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—His white hat was at a pert angle on the corner of his head as he waited for a break in the traffic to cross 16th street. Otherwise, he was not a jaunty figure. His body had shrunk from his sea-going blues and he carried a cane.

It wasn't a swagger stick. It was a heavy pine-colored cane like the kind they issue in hospitals to a patient learning to walk. And he didn't carry it. It carried him. With a break in the traffic, he hobbled across the broad boulevard on the stick as if it were a crutch.

Across the street, near the curb, he turned around and, still leaning on the cane, waved a thumb at the passing motor traffic heading toward down town.

A Crippled Sailor.

Traffic passed him by. He was a crippled sailor of the United States navy. To those who saw him, he appeared to be a casualty of enemy action. Maybe a participant in the battle of Coral sea or at Midway—who could tell? Maybe his was an unromantic injury, such as falling off a truck. The motorists who ignored his raised thumb couldn't tell.

It was about 11 o'clock at night, on a brightly lighted, well-policed boulevard lined with embassies. He had hobbled from the east, where a block or two away lived blacks and whites, Jews and Gentiles, in the scramble of a rooming house district that in a city other than Washington would be a low cost rental area.

On 16th street waiting for a pick-up, the sailor was in environs of the luxury that surrounds the representatives in America of peoples conquered, peoples destitute, and peoples in battle thruout the world. To his left was a formal mansion, formerly the Italian legation, now with its first story windows boarded, a division of the Swiss legation in charge of Italian affairs. Across the street, in an elaborate stone edifice, was the Spanish embassy. In the same block could be heard laughter and music from the Mexican embassy. Behind him was the splendid home of the Polish legation.

Officers Pass Him By.

The traffic that passed him by included large cars with "DPL" on the license plates, indicating diplomatic corps, of America or some other country. The driver of an open roadster, a young fellow in a naval uniform, looked over his shoulder at the crippled sailor and continued south. Young officers, army and navy, with their privately owned automobiles, are conspicuous in Washington traffic.

But most of the drivers who passed him by were civilians, a goodly portion men of military age. There have been about six thousand occupational deferments of government employés, and Sen. Millard E. Tydings [D., Md.] has asked selective service to investigate a batch of 900. Even press agents with political appointments have become "indespensable," including some who before Pearl Harbor were shouting, "when do we fight?"

The sailor moved to the rear of a parked car where he could stand on his good leg and lean against the spare tire. He now waved for a ride with his cane. More cars passed him by. It wasn't because they didn't see him. As was said before, the street was well illuminated. It wasn't because they were afraid of a hold-up. A policeman was standing in front of the old Italian embassy.

Finally a car stopped. The door was opened, and the sailor was welcomed in. It was a sedan. We couldn't see the driver. We couldn't read his license number. That driver could finish this story if the sailor told him how the leg was injured. We can't.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Continued attention to maintenance has enabled Great Britain to keep most of its trucks and buses rolling despite three years of war, the Office of Defense Transportation reports. The ODT suggests that American truck and bus operators may profit by British experience in keeping their vehicles running.

The transportation and maintenance activity section of the Society of Automotive Engineers has made a detailed study of the maintenance methods used by the British. The SAE found that the British developed many methods of reclaiming and rebuilding available used parts in order to make the most of existing equipment.

Air raids by the Nazis destroyed many vehicles and stores of spare parts, but the methods of preventive maintenance used enabled the British to keep their equipment in use. The vehicle maintenance section of the ODT's division of motor transport is distributing the study made by the SAE of the British war maintenance methods.

The Automobile Old Timers, Inc., an organization composed of veteran members of the automobile industry, are urging that automobiles built before 1918 be eliminated from proposed legislation which would require the junking of all over-age cars.

The organization reports that about 5,000 antique automobiles are preserved in museums and owned by collectors thruout the country. The Henry Ford museum at Dearborn, Mich., possesses about 800 and other private museums have from 50 to 200 each. It states that England, altho long at war, has made no demand for the breaking up or scrapping of ancient cars.

The proposal to scrap all cars is contained in senate bill 2651 introduced by Senator Robert R. Reynolds [D., N. C.] at the request of the War Production board. George C. Diehl, president of the Automobile Old Timers, suggests that the bill be changed so as to eliminate the antique and museum cars.

VETO MESSAGE BY F.D.R. POINTS TO GAS RATIONING

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—The eventuality of nation-wide gasoline rationing was seen by government officials in a veto message delivered to congress this week by President Roosevelt. In congress the message was interpreted as postponing this eventuality until after the fall elections.

The veto was of a bill to create a separate governmental agency for the production of synthetic rubber from grain alcohol. It had received an overwhelming majority, not so much as an endorsement of its practicality, but as tribute to the muddle in the government's synthetic rubber program in the first seven months of this war.

With his veto, the President appointed a committee which will relieve his administration of the embarrassment of imposing restrictions on automobile operations to conserve tires.

The committee headed by Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier, chairman of World War I. industries board, was given an assignment too comprehensive for a decision within a few weeks. It is to review the entire rubber situation—supply, production, and use—executive functions that have heretofore been handled to the dissatisfaction of the public as reflected in congress. Other members of the committee are Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard university, Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Fuel Curtailments Mentioned.

"This committee . . ." said Roosevelt, "will form a basis for future action not only with respect to synthetic rubber but also such matters as nation-wide gas rationing and motor transportation."

The President condemned the veto bill because it "provides that even the civilian needs of rubber—for pleasure driving, joy riding—must be given consideration, for the bill sets forth the duty of the new agency to furnish rubber in quantities sufficient 'to meet the military and civilian needs of the United States' irrespective of the relationship of such civilian needs to winning the war.

"It is a gross distortion of our war production policy and a repudiation of our all-out effort to win the war, to say that any critical material can be taken away from military purposes and devoted to nonessential civilian demand. I am sure that not one loyal American would wish to take an ounce of critical war materials of any kind in order to insure the use of his own automobile for anything but essential war needs.

"The question of rubber for automobiles is an unusually important one because it so intimately affects the daily lives and habits of so many American citizens. The very passage of the present ill-advised bill is an indication of the overwhelming interest which the American people have in this problem.

Believes Public Willing.

"I am sure, however, that once they are given the full facts as to the supply of rubber and the military and essential civilian needs for rubber, and the amount of materials required for the production of an adequate supply of synthetic rubber, they [the motoring public] will be wholly willing to forego their own convenience or pleasure. Americans gladly give up their comforts, their time, their money—everything that seems necessary to the successful prosecution of the war effort. They freely and proudly make the greatest sacrifice of all—their own sons and brothers.

"In recent months there have been so many conflicting statements of fact concerning all the elements of the rubber situation — statements from responsible government agencies as well as from private sources—that I have set up a committee of three men to investigate the whole situation—to get the facts—and to report them to me as quickly as possible with their recommendations."

Like advocates of nation-wide gasoline rationing as a tire conservation board, in the Office of Price Administration, and in the Office of Defense Transportation, the President warned that the public must forgo the use of tires for driving not essential to the war effort, or to wartime civilian economies.

Arthur Newhall, War Production board rubber coördinator, has said that gasoline rationing is the only method so far suggested to eliminate nonessential driving.

President Roosevelt's conception of essential and nonessential driving was indicated, altho not defined, in his message. The definition is probably one of the most difficult assignments of the advisory committee.

Program Adopted by WPB.

"The War Production board," said the President, "has adopted a program for making synthetic rubber, and is now operating under it. In doing so, it has endeavored to operate on the basis of estimated military needs for rubber and those civilian needs which are essential.

"By the phrase 'essential needs' are meant those needs of civilians who require rubber in work directly related to the war effort—for example, driving to war production plants in automobiles where other transportation is not readily available. It included also certain necessities for the community, like getting milk to the consumer or children to school."

Nation-wide gasoline rationing was advocated here this week by a committee of mayors of cities in the 17 eastern states where motor fuel is now rationed owing to a petroleum shortage caused by enemy submarine activity. Led by Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York, they urged that the rest of the country, including oil producing sections where there is a surplus of automobile gasoline, share the hardship suffered on the Atlantic seaboard. A similar plea from them several weeks ago was answered by an Oklahoma congressman with a statement that all members of a family don't have to take bitter pills when only one member is sick.

VOICE OF TRAFFIC

DEMOBILIZE THE RECKLESS.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—While the Roosevelt brain trust is advocating reduced use of automobile tires, why can't our city and state officials take the step that will bring about this result without penalizing the careful motorist? My suggestion is that traffic courts make more generous use of those provisions of the driver's license law for suspending licenses. To suspend a driver's license for six months or a year would seem to me a very effective way of conserving tires.

If the present driver's license law isn't strong enough in this respect, it could be amended by legislation so that suspension could be imposed rather than fines in virtually all traffic cases. Instead of taking a motorist's money from him, making his wife skimp on the grocery bills and maybe taking a pair of new shoes from some innocent kid, you could take the car away from the offender for a few weeks or several months, unless he needs the automobile to earn his living. While the car is idle the nation's stock pile of rubber now on vehicles would be conserved. ELMER M. BIGLOW.

TROUBLE AT CRYSTAL LAKE.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Please print the following for me so that other innocent motorists aren't fleeced out of $2 like I was today. It happened in Crystal Lake, Ill., where I had just parked my car to get some information about a friend of mine who had invited me and my family to spend a day at their summer home when a police officer appeared and started making out a ticket for a parking violation. I hadn't been but a minute and tried to explain to this small town dictator the circumstances surrounding my case, but to no avail. He proceeded making out his ticket which he could have destroyed if he were only one-thousandth part of a true police officer. I know that our Chicago police officers treat out of town folks with a great deal more courtesy than that displayed by this Mack Sennett cop.

I have only one wish and that is that if ever a Chicago police officer meets up with a Crystal Lake citizen who has unintentionally parked wrong that he pay no attention to their story but to give them the works.

Before leaving town I paid my $2 and I hope that with this small sum that officer earned his pay for the week, and thank heaven I live in Chicago.

J. R. B.

TOO MANY SIGNS.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Our suburbs could help save tires if they would remove the many unnecessary stop signs. Every time you apply the brakes it takes some rubber off all four wheels. Every time you start it takes some off the two rear power wheels. If speeds are restricted as they should be for wartime economy, it isn't necessary to come to a complete stop at many of the intersections where it is necessary with faster driving. Furthermore, many of our stop signs were never required but were put there solely because some politician had been asked by a finicky frequenter of the intersection to help him get across the street. SHERMAN of the LEXINGTON

By STANLEY JOHNSTON

HE IS A sailor's sailor—but he is not a battleship admiral. It was under his command that the aircraft carrier superseded the battleship as the capital ship of the world's oceans.

At 54 he is an active pilot of military airplanes and proudly wears both the dolphins of the submarine service and the wings of the naval air services on his tunic.

He is the only man in the entire navy who has commanded in war both submarines and aircraft carriers—the two most potent naval weapons of World War II.

I write of Rear Adm. Frederick C. Sherman. It was he who conned the gallant old Lexington thru the air fighting off Bougainville in February, 1942, and during the combats in the Coral sea last May, for which he was elevated from captain to rear admiral.

I saw him in the greatest of these fights—the Coral sea battles—and I saw him at the moment that a ship's captain, particularly a fighting ship's captain, dreads most—the moment in which he must admit that his vessel is lost.

He is a great captain. He is a great sailor. He knows air fighting from first-hand experience. He himself has seen the power of air attack upon ships at sea. It was he who told his men after the Lexington was sunk that World War II. in which we now are engaged is primarily an air war. And he promised his crew that they would be held together if possible and put to sea again in a new Lexington—one of the great new fleet of aircraft carriers the nation is building.

In the series of news dispatches telling of the Coral sea victory I described Captain Sherman as a crusty seaman. When he came thru Chicago a month later he jestingly referred to this description, asking me, "What do you mean, a crusty old seaman?"

When told this was paying him a compliment he grinned. Mrs. Fanny Sherman, his wife, who accompanied him, laughed, too, and said: "He was pleased as Punch when he read that. That's what he likes to think he is, a crusty old salt."

He is crusty. His face is bronzed, weather-beaten. His eyes are surrounded by a thousand wrinkles. He gives those who see him for the first time an impression of serenity, of conscious power. He is a man of good humor, of wide knowledge and understanding. He is notably quiet.

For years he has been one of a small coterie in the navy that has been pressing for recognition of the importance of aircraft carriers, claiming, "the aircraft carrier is the fastest, most flexible and destructive naval attack unit."

One of the admiral's favorite affirmations at this time is: "I disagree with all authorities who say that carriers are eggshells. That is a term of disparagement, a catch phrase, used only by the battleship-minded. Not only can a carrier take severe punishment, but it has ways and means of defending itself against aircraft, in contrast to a battleship's manifest helplessness. I know that a carrier can do anything a battleship can do and a lot that a battleship cannot do."

He is not particularly vehement in this statement. He says it as a man says that he has money in the bank. He knows he is speaking facts. Hence he does not raise his voice, resort to histrionics or any of the phony tricks of the politician or the actor.

That characteristic of quiet command was what impressed me most during the Japanese air attack on the Lexington. It was in this fight that the fine old vessel received her death wounds. It was a furious 16-minute air assault that packed more action and potential death into each second than occur in the whole lifetime of an ordinary man. It was a bit of hell created by 103 Japanese planes that passed over dropping torpedoes or heavy bombs.

Thru it all Captain Sherman never raised his voice, never indicated by one unusual gesture or by any movement that he was disturbed or perturbed. His commands to the helmsman and navigation officer thruout the fight were given in the same tone of voice that he had used to ask if I would take sugar in my mug of navy coffee.

I had been partly prepared for this. His officers often described his actions in the Bougainville fight. At that time the Lexington was attacked by 18 twin-engined land-based Japanese bombers. This was on

THIS IS the story of the story behind the third annual Chicago Tribune fashion show, which was unfolded in the W-G-N audience studio Friday and yesterday.

It is a story of imagination, ingenuity, vision, and hard work, and in an effort to make it visually tangible two sets of pictures are reproduced in today's Tribune.

The first set consists of the eight black and white sketches on this page. These are the designers' original sketches for eight of the 30 superb fashions which were finalists in the 1942 nation-wide fashion competition sponsored by The Tribune.

The second set consists of the eight fashions reproduced in color on the front and back pages of the Picture Section of this issue. These are reproductions in exact color of those eight designs as they were finally made up into garments.

Between the two was Mrs. Grace Pickering, fashion authority, who for the third successive year has conducted The Tribune's fashion competition and showing. The story of imagination, ingenuity, vision, and hard work is hers.

• • •

Consider entry No. 1617 on this page. It is the work of Elinor Osterman of New York City, but until the sketch was selected as a finalist in the contest the designer was unknown. Her name was in an envelope pasted on the back of the 14x20 cardboard sketch. The envelope also contained her suggestions for the transformation of the design into an actual dinner dress. With it would be worn flat red shepherd sandals.

She suggested black crêpe with a narrow belt of gold kid and gold kid binding on the long slit of the pencil skirt.

The design is unchanged, but the material is red crêpe, the belt and slit binding are purple velvet, and the model wears purple sandals and long purple suede gloves.

This change was made by Mrs. Pickering. Why? She thought it had more distinction. She consulted Miss Osterman, who readily agreed with her, and the changes were made.

Little touches, the delicate touches that give distinction to attire, have been made in almost every design modeled in the contest, but no change was made without the consent of the designer. Often it was the color. Again it might be hat or shoes, or the addition of a muff, stole, or gloves.

Consider the next entry, No. 728, designed by Victor A. Pincus of New York City. You can study its lines from the sketch here. Mr. Pincus' description and instructions were:

"Green Russian tunic dress trimmed with bands of seal, caracul, or Persian fur. Narrow string belt. This can be made in artificial crêpe or thin wool."

Now turn back to the colored pictures. The dress is changed in three respects—the tunic is of bright yellow wool rather than green and of heavy wool rather than thin, and whereas the sleeves of the sketch were banded in Persian lamb, the sleeves of the finished model tie at the wrist, and bands of Persian were used to edge the black gloves.

Compare the two and decide for yourself which is the more effective.

"Bodice of the dress is made from two long pieces of white jersey finally ending in the skirt to give it fullness. This saves material and yet gives the appearance of much draping. There are no side seams on the skirt, only the four it takes to set in the two panels, which may either be continuations of the bodice or may be additional lengths with the connecting seam at the diagonal gathering on the left hip in the front and on the right hip in back."

With it go gold kid sandals and silver fox furs.

Entry No. 1393, designed by Mme. Paule Madoc of New York, developed into the three-purpose black cocktail suit reproduced in color in the lower right hand corner of the first picture page.

This suit had two jackets, one worn over the other. The upper jacket, as well as the skirt, is of sheer black wool. It may be removed to reveal an underjacket of black net heavily embroidered in black soutache braid and fastened with black and gold tassels. This jacket in turn may be removed to reveal an evening blouse—a bodice of strips of pale apricot and iridescent green taffeta with ribbon straps.

Mrs. Pickering suggested no changes in this except touches of color. She did away with the soutache braid hat of the designer and replaced it with a towering one of mink with a green snood. She then added soft green suede gauntlets and a mink muff. The designer had suggested black gloves.

No. 2037, the work of Celeste Byrne of New York, was designed in dark green velour. Mrs. Pickering suggested it be made up in a lemon green tweed. Otherwise every intricate detail of this stunning coat was carried out, even to sewing the nutria to the sleeves and muff with ornamental hand stitching. A beret of nutria was, of course, substituted for the touch of green feather in the sketch.

No. 1566, designed by Nancy Layton of New York, was changed in only one respect. The sketch suggested that the scroll-like banding on the waist and slit skirt be of blue, green, and silver. The silver was not used.

Neither the sketches nor the color pictures of the finished garments give any intimation of the other and even greater problems involved in the metamorphoses of these eight designs — the difficulty of getting materials in a priority-pinched world, the difficulty of matching colors and samples, the careful and exquisite workmanship required of the seamstresses, the selection of proper accessories, and the primary necessity of selecting a design that could be copied with faithful adherence to WPB regulations.

This latter point is a major one. The 30 fashions selected for the showing were made up in pure silks and 100 per cent wools, but all can be copied in substitute materials without loss of effectiveness or distinction.

OUR HOLLYWOOD stars aren't any different from their less publicized sisters when it comes to following their menfolk into the training areas—but I'm wondering with a good deal of amused speculation just what the public's reaction will be to this latest phase of Hollywood life.

For the last year, and especially since we ourselves got into the war, a cross section of my mail would read like a chapter from bedlam.

"All actors who haven't rushed into the service are cowards, yellow-bellies, or lazy slackers. Those who've gone in and been given commissions aren't really worth a hang—they just got their rank thru pull. When they give up their time to camp entertainment they're only showing off—when they turn down a request for a camp show or P. A. they've got the swelled head and think they're too good to turn out and help like the others. When the women work like Turks in the different defense organizations they're only doing it so they can wear swank uniforms; when they work on air spots and turn in their two and three thousand dollar pay checks to some war charity, so what? It's all just a publicity stunt!"

In other words, they're damned if they do and damned if they don't. To please the various schools of thought every last one of them would have to be at least sextuplets!

Today more and more of our married actors are being called up, and their wives, who are also professionals, have a quite human desire to follow and be near them until such time as they have to go overseas.

Producers are beginning to have chills and fever at the prospect and are pointing out that the same patriotism which called their husbands to the colors demands their services in picture entertainment for the benefit of the public morale.

I suppose any day now I'll be getting letters saying on the one hand, "How can So-and-So let her poor husband languish in an army camp while she struts around a studio, starring away as if nothing was going on?" and on the other hand: "What is all this guff about Such-and-Such leaving Hollywood to be near her husband? She's only doing it for publicity and to create a flutter among the service men!"

Yea, verily! Human nature is a lovely thing—and a columnist gets plenty of opportunity to study its lovelier side!

Be that as it may, we've got a flock of gals here rarin' to go. Ann Sheridan, whose performance as the faithful wife in Warners' "Wings for the Eagle" has received such praise, had a repeat performance to do in real life with Husband George Brent. Brenda Marshall, Deanna Durbin, Jeanette MacDonald, Jane Wyman, Mary Pickford, Laraine Day, Ilona Massey, Loretta Young, Priscilla Lane, Claudette Colbert, Ellen Drew—the list's growing each day—and one and all they're champing at the bit to finish up whatever picture chore's on the fire and be off to rejoin their respective mates.

In the case of Jane Wyman, her husband, Ronald Reagan, is stationed in Burbank and no farther from home than he was when he was working for Warners at their Burbank studio, so her problem's fairly simple. But the others for the most part are scattered far and wide and represent a bad headache for the studio heads, besieged to adjust shooting schedules so as to allow for flying visits in between pictures.

Mary Pickford took right out after Buddy Rogers when he joined the air corps—says she's a camp follower and she doesn't care who knows it! Laraine Day's husband, Ray Hendricks, is stationed at Phoenix, Ariz., so she's been able to fly back and forth to see him in her spare time from Metro. Ilona Massey chases like mad from one Pacific port to another in pursuit of her coast guard hubby, Alan Curtis.

Priscilla Lane, when she married Bombardier Joseph Howard, moved straight up to Victorville to be with him and swears that when she starts her next picture she'll commute from there—that is, until her tires give out, I guess!

Altogether there's plenty of readjustment going on in our town, but I think the producers are exaggerating the dangers of a general exodus. Of course, in the first heat of battle most of the young wives threaten to kick their careers into the ash can. But don't forget they have to keep the home fires burning under the family cooking pot, now that hubby's no longer there to bring in his share of the bacon. A soldier's pay doesn't go very far toward maintaining a star's ménage.

Not only that, but the actor's wife who stays on the job is more or less keeping her foot in the door for her man's reentry into pictures at the end of this war. They provide an active contact with the studios that bachelors like Jimmy Stewart and Jeffrey Lynn will lack on their return. Then, too, all of them know that picture entertainment is a part of public morale in wartime, and it isn't so easy to square things with your conscience when you've run out on a job that needs doing, just to be near the man you love. After all, he's doing his job, too!

When I asked Ann Sheridan how she felt about it she got very austere with me.

"Wives have always followed their men to the edge of battle—and movie wives are no different from any others," she said grandly. Then she fell off her perch and added, "What the heck? We love our husbands just as much as they do!" in such a truculent tone I could have hugged her.

Brenda Marshall, on the other hand, told me with touching honesty that she was staying strictly at home because Bill Holden (whom she adores) wanted her to. She added with a catch in her voice, "But we hope to be together a long, long time when this is all over!" You can tell from that Bill's a tough guy—and I'm all for him!

Personally, if I had anything to say about it, I'd be tough, too. I'd see to it that the wives of men in active service stuck strictly to their knitting. I'm not talking about men detailed to Washington—men with desk jobs who are able to maintain a home out of office hours. I'm speaking of those in barracks or under canvas.

These men have a job to do and a way of life to learn. They have to get up early and get to bed early, and an important part of their training is to accustom them to a rigid routine. Anything which serves to interrupt that training and to distract the men from the job in hand is, I think, a mistake. There's nothing pretty about war. It's tough and it's hard and it's ugly. All of this trying to pretty it up with the gentle feminine touch may sound grand, but in actual practice it's a pain in the neck to the men in charge. If you don't believe me, just ask any case-hardened regular army officer how he feels about it—and don't be surprised if he turns the air blue about your head.

I'm not talking about week-end passes. A soldier who's put in six weeks to two months of intensive training may be all to the good for 48 hours of rest and relaxation in a different environment — and I'm all for showing him a swell time. But while he's in camp he should stay there and keep his eye on the ball and his mind on the race; spend his leisure hours with others like himself, getting to know them, rubbing minds with them, digesting the day's grist, comparing notes, and seasoning himself for what's to come.

I'm sorry if I sound like an old vinegar puss—and I may be wrong, but I don't think so. The earnest and well meaning wife who thinks to introduce a touch of home life into the grim army routine is like the bride who poured her best perfume on the boiling mutton to kill the smell. No matter how worthy the motive, the result was terrible!

DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

This is another in a series of biographical sketches of America's historical celebrities appearing every week in the Graphic Section. The illustrations are taken from a famous work, "The National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans," published in 1865.

GEN. FRANCIS MARION, the "swamp fox" of the American revolution, was one of the most famous exponents of guerrilla warfare in his time. With few troops, all poorly equipped, he kept the British army from controlling South Carolina following the British successes at Charleston and Camden in 1780 and cleared the way for an eventual American victory in the south.

A small, thin, wiry man, General Marion was the son of French Huguenots who had settled in Berkeley county, South Carolina. The year of his birth is not known but is believed to be 1732. As a boy Marion wanted to follow the sea, but after a shipwreck in which he almost lost his life he accepted his parents' wishes and became a planter near Eutaw Springs. In 1759 and 1761 he served in campaigns against the Cherokees. In 1775 he was elected to the provincial congress and was made captain in the second regiment which the congress ordered raised.

Seven months later Marion's regiment was at Charleston, but he was ordered to the country because of an injury, and he escaped the disaster to his troops when the British took the city. At Camden he again escaped, since the day before the battle he had been detailed by General Gates to cut the British communications with Charleston and was not at the field.

Following this defeat of the American regular army Marion took command of the state militia and for five months harassed the British behind their lines. His forces would strike suddenly at the invading forces and then retreat into the swamps before the enemy could recover. Twice he was driven completely out of his district, but he rallied more men, took supplies from the enemy, and continued the campaign.

When General Greene brought his army into the south Marion, now a brigadier general, joined with him in an offensive to drive the British from the Piedmont area. He commanded the militia in the battle of Eutaw Springs, and from that time to the evacuation of Charleston he was Greene's chief dependence for outpost duty. He had a widespread reputation as a master of guerrilla tactics.

During the last year of the war General Marion was elected to the South Carolina senate, and following the peace he served two additional terms. He lost everything but his land during the fighting, and South Carolina, in gratitude for his services, placed him in command of Fort Johnson at a salary of $2,500 a year.

In 1786 General Marion married his cousin, Mary Esther Videau, a wealthy spinster. He continued in command of the fort, altho almost without salary, and became a planter. He sat in the state constitutional convention of 1790, and the following year was again elected to the state senate. He died Feb. 27, 1795.

AMERICAN FAMILY FLAKES BEAT ALL OTHER SOAPS 3 to 1 for WASHING WHITE

WIN OVER EVERY BRAND OF GRANULATED SOAP, CHIPS AND POWDERS IN PRACTICAL HOUSEWIVES' VOTE!

READ HOW TO SAVE CLOTHES IN WARTIME

See Them Look Better, Too, This Amazing Way!

WASHING clothes the American Family Flakes way will delight you! White things come out dazzling white. Washable colors stay wonderfully bright. Clothes wear longer, too. Yes! This famous American Family Flakes method can make an amazing difference in the way clothes look and wear. That's why American Family Flakes is Chicago's largest-selling package soap in wartime, when clothes are so precious!

No Other Soap Can Say This

FIRST for washing white! American Family Flakes won 3 to 1.

FIRST for washing safely! American Family Flakes won 5 to 1.

FIRST for washing in machines! American Family Flakes got more votes than the next 12 laundry soaps combined.

Save Clothes, Save Money

Results with American Family Flakes are thrilling for 3 reasons. (1) American Family Flakes are especially made for the hard water in this area. (2) American Family Flakes are safer for colors than strong granulated soaps. (3) American Family Flakes wash white clothes whiter than many soaps. Yet there's no need for ruinous, hard rubbing or harmful bleaching. Remember! American Family Flakes just soak dirt loose—quickly, safely. That's why clothes look better, last longer—washed this amazing way!

Here's another reason for changing to American Family Flakes. Today most dealers feature them at prices as low as any nationally-advertised washday package soap. So now, more than ever: "It's cheaper to buy good soap than new clothes!"

GRAPHIC LITTLE THEA

1 Stan and Oliver, a couple of harmless vagrants, are kicked out of an Atlanta jail and ordered to leave town within 24 hours. Escape is possible when Oliver accepts an offer of free transportation to Dayton.

2 All Stan and Oliver have to do for the free ride is accompany a corpse. What they don't know is that the corpse is very much alive and very much wanted by police. The criminal is being aided in his escape by Frank Lucas (Elisha Cook Jr.), who poses as an aunt.

4 Getting the wrong coffin safely stowed away, they go back to their seats, only to be slicked out of their expense money by a crook. Dante advances them some money and they promise to pay him in Dayton.

5 The wrong coffin is delivered, and Stan and Laurel rejoin Dante. Stan falls in love with Margo (Sheila Ryan), Dante's niece and assistant, only to find she is in love with the stage manager, Tommy White (John Shelton).

Stumbling into the midst of a rehearsal, Stan and Oliver create so much hilarity they are put in the act—to pay off their debt.

1 The Jap carrier swings sharply to avoid attacking planes, but several near misses are scored.

2 More near misses plague the Shokako as she executes a sharp "S" turn. Notice the wake.

3 Despite anti-aircraft fire, the American planes are getting the range. A near miss off the bow damages the carrier.

5 The camera plane leaves the Shokako burning and badly damaged. Notice how the carrier's wake maps the story of the brief encounter.

TADPOLES

CONSIDER the lowly tadpole. The offspring of a father and a mother frog or of a father and a mother toad, it is compelled by nature to live in the water while its parents hop about freely upon land. It is only when it grows up into an adult frog or toad that it is able to emerge from pond, lake, or stream and live the life in full that evolution has created for it.

Because tadpoles are so relatively small and unimposing, they attract very little human recognition. Most people merely pass them by, and some who do notice them think they are little fish.

To put polliwogs—which is another name for tadpoles—before the public and arouse scientific interest in them, the Field Museum of Natural History provides in one of its halls a unique exhibit. This consists of tadpole models made from transparent and translucent plastics and colored in strict accuracy to life. Prepared by Frank H. Letl and Joe Kratolick of the museum staff, these models reveal details of form and structure which most laymen would overlook entirely in observing the original specimens. The models, several of which are shown in the accompanying illustrations, present the first application of this new type of plastics in museum exhibition work. Only a few of the principal types of tadpoles are illustrated in the models, altho more than 1,000 different kinds exist.

"Of all the abundant forms of higher life, the common tadpole is one of the least appreciated," says Clifford H. Pope, curator of amphibians and reptiles of the Field museum. "Even students of amphibian life often put tadpoles aside as uninteresting, and laymen are prone to think of them only as generalized blobs of flesh from which frogs and toads arise, scarcely realizing that each kind of frog or toad has its own particular kind of tadpole. Nevertheless tadpoles are fascinating animals that differ widely in form, color, and habits.

"From the frog's point of view the tadpole is one of the two remaining links in an evolutionary chain that once completely bound the frog to a life in water. The other link is the necessity of breeding in water. If frogs could only sever these two links they would emerge as full-fledged land animals like their more advanced relatives, the reptile, birds, and mammals. However, the frog at least has the satisfaction of looking down a long nose at the lowly fish, still completely chained to an aquatic existence.

"The polliwog faces many problems in a largely inhospitable world. Having never developed the ability to live in salt water, polliwogs must be content with fresh water habitats. They are restricted further from living anywhere north of the temperate regions, because perennially frozen soil makes adult amphibian life impossible. They almost completely lack defensive ability and are all but helpless against the attacks of certain fishes. A few tadpoles, however, have developed poison glands, but these can bring them at best only a Pyrrhic victory, for altho they thus may kill the fish that bites them, they are themselves killed in the process of getting bitten. The poison, incidentally, is not dangerous to human beings who may happen to handle tadpoles.

"Most tadpoles are adapted, by downwardly directed mouths, to clinging to the bottom of pools, and those of this type are called bottom dwellers. Another major adaptation is the torrent dweller, represented by a little-known species from the mountains of western North America. These have developed a streamlined form that offers little resistance to currents and a sucker belly which enables them to cling to rocks despite rushing water. A third important variation is the surface dweller, which has an upwardly directed mouth and ability to float at any level; feeding on particles caught by the surface film of quiet pond or pool, the surface dweller cleverly avoids competition with the crowded bottom-loving creatures and seems to test that saying that 'There is always room at the top.'"

According to Mr. Pope, there are 11 distinct species of frogs and toads in the Chicago area. These include nine species classified among the frogs and two classified among the toads. In the frog group are the common bullfrog, which attains a length of a foot with its legs extended, and the tree frog or tree toad, which lives an arboreal life. The two toad species are the common American and the Fowler's toad. All of these, like nearly all other frogs and toads, arise from tadpoles and are compelled to return to the water for breeding.

ABOU BEN ADHEM

By JAMES HENRY LEIGH HUNT

Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold:
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?" The vision raised its head,
And, with a look made of all sweet accord,
Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."
"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still, and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow men."
The angel wrote, and vanished. The next night
It came again, with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed,—
And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS BY BOB BECKER

This is the way a neglected Irish terrier may look if an owner does not have its coat taken down by stripping.

Frank Galati, professional handler of Northbrook, Ill., is working on the coat of the dog with his stripping knife. The long hair is removed from the dog's cheeks and head, but its face furnishings are only trimmed.

Note the difference between the right ear of the dog which has been worked on with the stripping knife and the left, which remains to be done. From the head and neck the handler goes to the shoulders and back of the animal.

NOTHING helps certain breeds of dogs like a hair trim or stripping. Wire-haired terriers, Scotties, Sealyhams, Airedales, Irish terriers, and other breeds with rather thick, wiry coats are healthier looking pets if the owners have them stripped or plucked occasionally.

Taking down the coat of a terrier simply means a hair trim by a groom or handler who knows how to remove the dead hair that accumulates in the coats of these terriers, trimming the animal neatly and according to the standard of the breed, and fixing up the furnishings on the pet's face and legs.

From a health angle taking down or plucking or stripping a terrier's coat is just as desirable as it is when viewed from the standpoint of appearance. A dog is very uncomfortable in hot weather with a lot of dead hair irritating him. He scratches more than he should and may develop a skin eruption. It's hard to kill fleas in a dense, matted coat.

We had our terrier given a hair trim just before the hot weather started. His coat has been taken down so he will be very comfortable this summer. At the same time his nails were cut back a little. When we got him back home from the professional handler who did the barbering job we gave him a dip in a solution that kills fleas and ticks, cleaned his kennel again to make sure that none of these insects was hanging around there, and then the dog was ready for the summer.

At this time of the year the job of grooming a terrier includes combing and brushing, taking down his coat if it's too long, adequate measures against flea infestation, and occasional bathing. Clipping the coat from any breed of dog is not recommended by most veterinarians. It generally makes the dog miserable rather than comfortable.

Taking down the coat of a terrier is quite a job. There's a real knack in learning how to use one of those stripping knives so you don't hurt the animal. As a rule it's wise to ask a professional groom or handler to do the job of barbering the dog, altho one may take lessons and learn how to work on the animal's coat so he looks presentable and not as if some one had run an unsharpened lawn mower down his back.

In grooming the wiry-haired breeds there are quite a few tricks to be learned by the owner attempting to use a stripping knife, scissors, and comb. For example, when an expert finishes with a good wire-haired terrier the dog's whiskers are arresting in contour and the "pants" he has on his front legs (hair combed out instead of being removed) enhance the snappy appearance of the dog. The same treatment improves the appearance of an Irish terrier.

No matter what an owner may want to do to the coat and skin of his pet, he'll find it can be done easier by placing the dog on a high box or table. When we want to do a real job of brushing our terrier we put him on a table, where he stands quieter. When we have to clean his coat with some type of moist or bubble cleaner, up he goes on a table, and he stays there until we are thru with him. For some reason all dogs are better behaved when on a table.

TOP MAN OF THE FLAT-TOPS!

Feb. 20. When the first nine bombers swept into view they were set upon by the fighter squadron from the Lexington under Lieut. Comm. John S. Thach of Fordyce, Ark. Not one reached the release point. They were shot down all around the Lexington, but no bombs were aimed at her. It was a short fight, but some of the planes involved in it ran out of ammunition and landed to replenish their supplies.

While these planes were down the second Jap formation of nine more planes came over. It was here that Lieut. (now Lieut. Comm.) Edward (Butch) O'Hare in action alone shot down five planes and damaged a sixth in this formation before the arrival of his skipper, Thach. Four planes, however, reached the point where they could drop bombs aimed at the Lexington, despite this harrowing defense of the ship.

On the ship's bridge Captain Sherman stood quietly watching the air fight. He saw the bombers come on, watched them reach the release point, and saw the first group of bombs drop away. They were horizontal bombers, bombing from 11,000 feet high.

"Hard aport," he told the helmsman, still looking upward. The Lexington's 888 feet swung around to the left as the helm was answered.

The admiral, then Captain Sherman, continued to watch the Japanese planes. The entire salvo of bombs was in full flight toward the Lexington by that time. The Lex, doing a good 25 knots, was turning swiftly.

"Bring her back on course," the skipper ordered, still in the same calm, workaday tone. He then turned his back on the falling bombs and walked to the other side of the bridge.

He had judged the flight of the missiles, decided they would miss the ship, and after issuing the order that put the carrier back on her proper course he lost interest in them. They fell harmlessly into the sea some 200 yards to the right of the Lexington, which had swerved in one huge hooked turn and then sped back on her course.

The morning of May 8, standing on the signal bridge near Captain Sherman watching him operating the ship, we heard him estimate that the Japanese air fleet would reach us about 11 a. m. and saw him send off his air patrol group—he had only 16 planes, eight fighters and eight scout-bombers, to protect the carrier, since the rest of our complement was off bombing and torpedoing the Japanese 200 miles away. These patrols were split in two sections, one flying and one on deck. The flying sections were called back often enough to keep their fuel tanks nearly full at all times. The captain wanted his planes prepared to fight at any moment.

In an action of this kind it is the captain who controls the air umbrella. He kept a reserve of planes on deck until at 11 a. m. his flying patrols reported torpedo bombers coming in fast from about 60 miles away. The reserves then were sent off and the vessel and her crew were ready for the fight. All that was left for the captain was the maneuvering of the Lexington. The gun teams were all primed and ready, each commanded by its own junior officer. No general order to fire was necessary, each team being prepared to fire as soon as an enemy plane was within range.

The bridge of the Lexington was an open balcony 25 feet above the flight deck and about 75 feet above the sea. The huge signal switchboard, to which lines from all compartments in the ship are led, also is there. The wheel, too, is on the bridge. In normal times the small wheelhouse is inclosed by glass partitions. For battle these are lowered so that there will be no flying glass slivers if a lucky shot hits on the "island." The lookouts on all parts of the ship reported directly to the bridge. There is no armor on the bridge of a carrier.

To all intents and purposes this post is open and exposed, and from it the captain can look to all points of the compass and almost to every point on the flight deck. His job in battle is to see, then fathom the enemy's attack. Then he must issue orders to counteract, avoid, or minimize the assault.

As the lookouts sang out, "Enemy torpedo planes on port quarter," we all turned and saw the spurts of flame and smoke from the guns of the cruiser protecting us on that side. The spouts of smoke from her anti-aircraft guns opening on the Jap planes were seen for several seconds before the sharp reports began coming across the three-quarter mile of water between the vessels.

The battle opened. Our own guns began firing. The captain concentrated on watching the Japanese. He did not stand with his legs apart holding a glass to his eye; he merely stood quietly and watched. He wore sun tan trousers and shirt, a canvas zipper-front windbreaker (navy issue), and his battle "bonnet"—an army tin hat. We all had on tin hats. The theory was that they might be some protection from glancing machine gun bullets or shell fragments.

"Hard port," came a second order. It was followed by

Repair crew at work on deck of Lexington.

"Hard starboard," and the Lexington went into her snake dance. Her wake, foam-marked behind us, was a huge zigzag track across the blue ocean. Beside the skipper the ship's navigating officer, Comm. James R. Dudley, was making notes of every order and reading the compass every time the ship settled in one direction long enough for a compass reading to be taken.

Torpedo hits shook the Lexington, but Captain Sherman was unmoved. "Dive bombers," came the lookouts' cry, and a 1,000-pounder put the port forward 5-inch gun battery out of action. His response was a quiet "Hard port" order. He had to maneuver the Lexington so that the whole long line of dive bombers already committed in their dives would miss us. And he did, for these bombs all fell beside our port quarter as the rear of the ship swung to the right under the helm.

A point to remember here is that ships at sea turn differently than automobiles on land. At sea a ship swings from the stern. The bow goes straight on, but when rudder is applied the stern swings. This brings the bow around eventually into the desired direction.

About this time there was a momentary lull. I could see Captain Sherman looked worried—as who wouldn't be worried in the midst of such an action, when the responsibility for the safety of the ship and its crew rested on his shoulders? As I passed the captain, striding from one side of the bridge to the other, I said to him, "It's going to be all right, captain."

For a moment his attention, fixed on battle, shifted to me. His eyes twinkled briefly and he replied, "I hope so, I hope so." And we shook hands on that.

Immediately the lookouts reported new onslaughts of torpedo and dive bombers. We avoided three more torpedoes and dodged dive bombers for another 10 minutes. More quiet helm orders.

It was about here that our lookouts reported one of our own pilots kneeling on his little rubber lifeboat floating right thru the middle of the fleet. The Lex, sheering thru the water at 25 knots, passed within 100 yards of this boy. I could see him kneeling and cheering and waving wildly to us. The captain looked briefly at him and then said to the signalman, "Signalman, call the destroyer" (he indicated the last destroyer in the fleet with his thumb) "and tell him to pick up that boy." I learned later that this was done.

Five minutes later the fight was over. In the entire action the captain had not said a word—except when I brashly broke into his concentration—that did not pertain to specific orders. Now reports began pouring in to him on the ship's condition. Remember there were two torpedo holes in the Lexington's port side and damage from three heavy bomb hits and many near misses. There were fires in the hold, and we were taking water.

"Have you enough water to fight your fires?" "Have you taken the precaution to dump the anti-explosive chemicals into the fuel tanks?" "Give me a report on the wounded." "How are my engines?" "What is the situation of our anti-aircraft batteries?"

These were some of the captain's remarks as he listened to telephone communications from his subordinates. His men knew their jobs. He made no effort to tell them what to do about conditions they described. They knew, and he knew they knew.

Then came the first internal explosion and the deadly fuel fires.

When he began to see the picture he told Comm. Mort Seligman, his executive officer: "Those few torpedoes won't hurt her. She can carry those. The fire is the thing we have to fight." He understood the problem perfectly. (During this period he was taking aboard our returning air attack squadrons, launching air patrols.)

Reports on losses of electrical pumps and water began coming in. The captain suggested that a destroyer be brought alongside to help with its pumps, and this was done. He ordered hoses extended, sent in extra chemical squads.

Still the fire gained. One after another the ship's facilities failed.

When the steering gear was burned away the captain set up the line of men from his bridge to the trick wheel deep in the hold at the stern. The electric lights went out. "Use battle lanterns," the captain ordered. The ventilation failed, and heat rose to 160 degrees in the engine rooms. It was about here that the captain first acknowledged he might be beaten.

"Get the men on deck. Get a destroyer alongside and transfer them with the flight crews," the captain ordered. "Draw the fires in the boilers." Before these orders were given by Captain Sherman the fleet had been warned to stay clear and disregard the movements of the Lexington. By that time she was steering erratically because the helm orders were being relayed so slowly that they were always behind the ship.

At 4 p. m. all except the fire fighters were ordered to the flight deck. The captain had been informed that the bombs and torpedo war heads were in the fire area and in imminent danger of exploding. The captain was insistent that patrols go thru the ship to get the "on deck" order to every one.

About 5 p. m. Adm. Aubrey Fitch leaned over from his bridge above the captain's bridge and said, "Fred, let's get the men off." It was the abandon ship order.

The captain stayed on the bridge until many of his crew were off, then came down and made a personal tour of the flight deck and those portions of the Lexington not yet on fire. The purpose was to assure himself and his executive officer, Commander Seligman, that their orders to abandon ship were known to every one of the more than 2,000 souls aboard the big craft.

The captain is a great respecter of sea traditions, saying that many relating to seamanship are based on sound principles of command. He stayed on the Lexington's flight deck, keeping his staff with him, until almost all the men had departed. Then he and Seligman made another round of inspection. As they walked back to the ship's stern, the flight deck hot under their feet, the captain suddenly said to his aide, "Wait a minute."

He trotted back to his emergency cabin in the "island" and emerged a moment later adjusting to his head his "No. 1 cap." "That is the one with the most gold braid," Seligman said later. "The captain looked a little sheepishly at me and said: 'I hear there'll be no more gold braid available until after the war. Didn't want to lose this.'"

Seligman sat down on the deck, hooked one leg around a 50-foot line that dropped from the deck to the ocean, and prepared to slide down it. But the captain lingered a moment, surveying speculatively the deck and the flames and smoke pouring out of the poor old Lexington amidships.

"I'd look silly, wouldn't I, if I left the boat now and the fires went out," he mused half to himself.

Seligman, allowing affection for his skipper to break down formalities, urged the skipper to a rope and begged him to "come on." The advice was good, for Captain Sherman was only half way down his rope when the 1,000-pound bombs amidships exploded with a smashing effect that would have meant the doom of any one aboard. The concussion jarred him off the rope and he fell the last 25 feet into the water. He swam away and was picked up by a whaleboat, still wearing his cap.

Admiral Sherman is, of course, a professional sea warrior. He was born at Port Huron, Mich., on May 27, 1888. He was appointed to Annapolis in 1906 and was graduated in 1910. His first sea assignments were aboard the veteran battleships Montana and Maryland in 1911. From 1914 thru 1919 he served in submarines—during the years the United States was in the war he commanded the submarine USS H-2 and later the USS O-7. In the latter capacity he received the navy cross for distinguished service for patroling waters infested with enemy subs.

Following the war he served in the bureau of engineering—the years 1919 to 1921. Thereafter he commanded submarine division 9 until 1924. He was sent to the war college, spending one year, and in 1926 was on duty with the fleet training division. He then returned to battleships, serving as gunnery officer aboard the West Virginia from 1926 to 1929.

This tour of duty apparently cured him of any battleship ideas, for he never returned, and at his first opportunity took up flying, altho his age was far beyond that at which most men will step into a brand new field. Immediately following the battleship assignment he went to the bureau of navigation and returned to the fleet training division in the years 1929 to 1931. He was navigation officer on the U. S. S. Detroit, cruiser, for two years, 1932 and 1933. In 1934 he went to destroyers for one year.

His entrance into the field of navy aviation came in 1934, when he was named aide to the commandant of the 11th naval district at San Diego. In that year, altho 46 years old, he began flight training, graduating as a naval aviator in April, 1936. He served a tour as executive officer to Capt. (now Vice Admiral) William F. Halsey Jr. aboard the U. S. S. Saratoga until June, 1937, when he became executive officer at the San Diego naval air station. From here he went to command patrol wing 3 at Coco Solo, Panama Canal Zone, until July, 1938. He attended the naval war college in 1939 and 1940, and on June 13 of 1940 took command of the Lexington.

With Vice Admirals Halsey and Frank J. Fletcher (the latter raised in rank from rear admiral on July 12 following the Midway battle), and Rear Admiral Aubrey Fitch, Rear Admiral Sherman gives the United States a quartet of naval leaders who are the world's outstanding experts in directing sea-borne air forces. All four men have been ardent air advocates in the navy for years, and now their theories have been proved in war's testing ground.

Know Your Camera

—By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.—

It's a tough job to photograph a fast plane like this Curtis P-40 in flight. The plane used by the photographer must be fast, as it is dangerous to stall the other plane at close range. Daredevil photographers sometimes approach their aerial subjects as close as 10 feet. To avoid accidents, actions of pilots and photographer must be perfectly synchronized.

ONE OF THE toughest photographic assignments is taking pictures of airplanes in flight. While every one admires the startling flight pictures in newspapers, magazines, and on government posters, few people realize just what a difficult job it is to take such pictures.

With rare exceptions, pictures of airplanes in flight are taken from other planes. This means that the actions of at least two pilots and a photographer must be perfectly coördinated, or accidents will occur, not to mention spoiled pictures.

Flight shots are dangerous to take, because the two planes must be fairly close for good pictures. "Fairly close" in this case means anywhere from 75 to 10 feet.

The plane carrying the photographer must have a speed at least equal to the slowest safe cruising speed of the plane to be photographed. This enables it to keep up with the subject. The two planes meet at a predetermined altitude, the subject usually trailing the photographic plane, then pulling up alongside, and finally passing it. This arrangement permits a series of photographs giving different views of the plane.

There are plenty of problems to solve for the photographer. If he wants good pictures he cannot shoot thru glass windows, but must lower the window of his plane, or in most cases must remove the door before leaving the ground. Obviously the photographer must be strapped securely to the plane, and his camera must be fastened to his body.

range, the camera must be focused carefully to get sharp pictures. This is especially true if a telephoto lens is used. Often the diaphragm of the lens cannot be closed down for increased sharpness because the picture must be shot at high speed to eliminate the blurring effects of plane vibration. Some amount of haze is usually present, and to eliminate it filters are used, which cut down further on the exposure speed employed. The average exposure for a synchronized flight shot in good weather is in the neighborhood of 1/100 sec. at f:11 or f:16.

This would indicate that average amateur equipment is sufficient for taking such flight shots. Contrary to the belief of most amateur photographers, most of the successful flight photographers do not use special equipment, not even an aerial camera. The majority seems to prefer ordinary cameras of the speed graphic type. However, as the slipstream of the propellers would tear away the bellows of such cameras and shake the lens board, usually some homemade contraption of metal or wood is placed around the camera to protect it against wind.

Color pictures of airplanes in flight are especially difficult to take. For one thing, color film has a relatively slow emulsion which forces the photographer to use longer exposures and open up his lens, thus losing sharpness. But the greatest difficulty is caused by bluish haze and by the absence of sufficient color contrast. Shiny metal planes reflect the color of the sky and stand out very poorly against the sky background. Planes camouflaged in dull colors are expressly painted in such a manner that they will offer a minimum of color contrast. Under such circumstances the military insignia are about the only bright color spots to record. So whenever you see a really striking color photograph of an airplane in flight, remember that it is probably the one successful shot among a thousand, taken at considerable expense and at the risk of several lives.

Taking pictures of airplanes in formation merely multiplies the difficulties for the photographer. The movements of all pilots concerned must be synchronized, a flight plan must be worked out to assure not only perfect formation but also a favorable angle for picture taking, and finally the photographer must manage to get the nearest and the farthest plane in equally sharp focus.

When constipation brings on discomfort after meals, stomach upset, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with Syrup Pepsin for perfect ease to your stomach in taking. For years, many Doctors have given pepsin preparations in their prescriptions to make medicine more agreeable to a touchy stomach. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully the Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines to bring welcome relief from constipation. And the good old Syrup Pepsin makes this laxative so comfortable and easy on your stomach. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin, as directed on label or as your doctor advises, and feel world's better. Get genuine Dr. Caldwell's. WORRYING WON'T HELP A BIT!

By LOUISE DOOLEY

THERE IS NOTHING quite so lovely to look at in this world as a woman, beautiful or otherwise, who has that wonderful, seldom seen expression of serenity. Such persons are becoming increasingly rare in these harried days when furrows seem to be the fashion for brows, and tense, taut lines the vogue for the balance of the face.

True, this is not a time for complacency and the vacant, "nothing on my mind" attitude. There is plenty of work to be done and probably much to be faced, but worrying is not going to get it done, and puckering the brow and tightening the lips may lend a determined look but will not accomplish anything except to etch their unbecoming lines forever on the face.

It has been our observation that the women who actually accomplish the most are those whose calm appearance gives the lie to their ability. They are the ones who have found that composure aids them immeasurably in conserving their strength. There is no frittering away of nervous energy in tense muscles and jerky, fluttering motions.

Most of us can master the air and expression of serenity simply by catching ourselves every now and then and bringing to a quick halt the mental racing and jumping about that is frequently the cause of the pinched look. Stopping to think, to smooth out the little knots in the brain, automatically lets the facial muscles relax. The simple method of then drawing on the inner spiritual strength that is within all of us, really quite close to the surface, will complete the change. We have faith in the future, of course, and we all have confidence that things will work out as we deeply desire them, and such knowledge and faith deserve expression. It's contagious, that serene and hopeful attitude, and just a glimpse of some one with a look of faith and trust in her eyes is often as exhilarating and heart-lifting as listening to "The Star Spangled Banner."

These harried times call for composure. The lovely feminine face that reflects faith and hope is the one which inspires. Worry lines etch the face unbecomingly, accomplish nothing.

Photoelectric eye proof of Pepsodent's superior polishing ability convinced scientists. But not the Rick Twins. They wanted to see just how good Pepsodent was without scientific gadgets—when it was used in the practical way—the way anyone would brush teeth. So they tossed a coin to see who would use Pepsodent, and Margaret won. Marilyn chose to test another leading tooth powder.

People always had a hard time telling them apart . . . they were that alike. But that was before the test started. Then, admitted Marilyn, "Did I learn about tooth powders! Our dentist was skeptical at first . . . then amazed that Pepsodent made Peg's teeth twice as bright as mine! He said he never saw anything like it. Neither did we! Pepsodent showed us how really bright teeth can be!"

. . . and the Rick Twins' dentist says:

"Of course, I was skeptical. Pepsodent's claims sounded just too good to be true. However, this Rick Twins test convinced me that the statement of The Pepsodent Company is accurate and truthful."

Rick Twins Confirm Laboratory Findings

Independent laboratory tests found no other dentifrice that could match the lustre produced by Pepsodent. By actual test, Pepsodent produces a lustre on teeth Twice as Bright as the average of all other leading brands!

PRACTICE WHAT YOU PEACH!

By MARY MEADE

IF WE HAD an abundance of fresh peaches the year around I'm afraid the old American favorite, apple pie, might have a rival for first place in the hearts and appetites of the people.

For peach pies are lusciously good, and there must be at least a dozen and a half different methods of making them. It was a coincidence that today's prize-winning recipe happened to be peach pie, but because of that coincidence I'm able to offer you a choice of three elegant peachy treats instead of the two that I'd planned.

HONEY CREAM PIE WITH PEACH GLAZE

Filling

- ½ cup honey
- ¼ cup cornstarch
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup boiling water
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup irradiated evaporated milk
- ½ teaspoon vanilla

Blend honey, cornstarch, and salt, add water gradually, stirring to prevent lumping. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until very thick. Beat eggs, add milk. Stir slowly into cornstarch mixture and continue cooking and stirring until mixture is smooth and thick, about five minutes. Cool, pour into cool baked pie shell, and cover with peach glaze.

Glaze

- 1 cup sliced peaches
- ½ cup water
- 6 tablespoons honey or ½ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice

Cook peaches in water about five minutes. Mix honey and cornstarch. Stir into peaches and cook until clear and thick, stirring, but being careful not to break peaches. Add lemon juice. Spread while hot over filling. Chill before serving.

PEACH PIE GLACE

- 1 package orange flavored gelatin
- 1½ cups hot peach juice and water
- 2½ cups sliced fresh or canned peaches, drained
- Baked nine-inch pie shell

Dissolve gelatin in hot peach juice and water. Add peaches. Chill. When slightly thickened turn into pie shell. Chill until firm. Garnish with whipped cream if desired.

I have mimeographed recipes for peach sour cream pie, which is wonderful but doesn't stint on brown sugar. Interested readers who find their sugar ration stretches beautifully may have the recipe by writing and inclosing a stamped envelope.

If you have trouble with a baked peach or berry pie overflowing in the oven, if you like deep, thick fruit pies, or if you like them with evenly scalloped edge, you'll go for the new deep glass pie plate with scalloped rim for making that edge. It has handles to make the pie easy to take from the oven without breaking the crust.

TODAY'S PRIZE RECIPE

PEACH BAVARIAN PIE

- 1⅓ cups crushed ripe peaches
- ½ cup sugar
- Dash of salt
- 1½ tablespoons plain gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- 2 egg whites
- 1 cup heavy cream, whipped
- Graham cracker crust

Crush peaches, add sugar and salt. Soften gelatin in cold water and melt over hot water. Add to peaches, stirring to blend well. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and whipped cream, reserving part of the cream for garnish. Turn into crust and chill until firm. Spread with remaining whipped cream and serve.

CALL FOR NURSES!

By ELEANOR NANGLE

"ENROLL at a School of Nursing!" might well be a recruiting poster slogan addressed to the 18-year-old girls of America this year.

Dr. Thomas L. Parran, surgeon general, Public Health Service, says that 55,000 students must enter our accredited nursing schools this September to prevent a serious shortage of fully educated nurses three years hence. As the war lengthens and the need on battle and home fronts increases it will be vitally necessary to have a reservoir of nurses in training. Girls who have been graduated from high school or had some or a full college education are urged to realize that today they also serve who study now to be the registered nurses of the future.

According to the American Red Cross, there are more than 12,000 nurses serving with our armed forces now. The army is calling for an additional 10,000 by the end of this year, and next year it is estimated that both the army and navy will be asking for 30,000 more. The demand, of course, will increase as the need does in active service and in hospitals at home.

There are, however, no short cuts to the status of registered nurse, nor to nursing service with the army or the navy. Since neither branch maintains nursing education schools or camps, they are entirely dependent on the accredited nursing schools for their supply. And the nursing course in most states is a three-year one. The young women who wish, like the "unsung heroes" of Bataan and Corregidor, to nurse our war wounded, must either be registered nurses under 40 years of age or must complete the full course. In the latter case the sooner they start the better Uncle Sam and his heroes will like it!

This year the number of accredited nursing training schools in the Chicagoland area is increased by one with the reëstablishment of the Wesley Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, which was discontinued some years ago but is now resuming because of the desperate need for nurses during this emergency. Currently the school is operating with the student group from the Washington Boulevard hospital, which recently transferred to Wesley Memorial to complete its training. But Wesley Memorial's own nursing school, in happy affiliation with the Northwestern university medical school across the street, will open officially on Sept. 15.

Requirements are graduation from an accredited high school with a rating in the upper third of the class, and applicants must be at least 18 years old, since a nurse is not acceptable for registration until she is 21. Good health is an essential.

Less tangible qualifications for this most fascinating and valuable profession might be, we suppose, fortitude, common sense, and an intelligent interest in what makes us tick. Nowhere will you find a student body more absorbed in their studies than student nurses. As their work progresses from the preclinical period, at the conclusion of which they receive their caps, to the unfolding of the mysteries of nursing in medicine, surgery, and obstetrics, they never know monotony. The nurse who completes her preclinical period satisfactorily and enthusiastically knows she has found her vocation. And when at the conclusion of three years she wins her coveted pin she has the tremendous satisfaction of knowing that she embarks on a career that offers unlimited opportunities to serve humanity and to advance herself.

FASHIONS IN THE TRIBUNE'S 1942 CONTEST

The crepe dinner gown at the right is accented with purple velvet. The velvet is used around the slim waist in twin belts and to edge the slit in the skirt. The shoulders are covered; the back is open in a triangular outline. The designer is Elinor Osterman of New York.

Russia inspired this stunning street ensemble, which consists of a thin black wool skirt and a heavy yellow wool blouse. Persian lamb edges the peplum of the blouse jacket and is used for a snug little collar. The sleeves are tied at the wrist; the waistline also is tied. Persian lamb cuffs the gauntlet gloves and makes the high Cossack hat. The designer is Victor A. Pincus of New York.

This evening gown in green silk jersey relies entirely on line and fit for its chic. Sophisticated is the bare midriff, front and back. The designer is Ladye Dee Jones of New York.

The distinctive cocktail suit at the left, of sheer black wool, also has a black net jacket, braided with soutache. Gold and black tassels hide the hooks and eyes that fasten the jacket, under which is a decollete bodice of pale apricot and changeable green taffeta. Long green gloves and a mink muff and hat complete this cocktail costume. The designer is Mme. Paule Madoc of New York.

OLD BEN FRANKLIN HAD NOTHING ON ME!

MAYBE I WON'T get to be a bronzie like Ben! But I'm an inventor, too. I've dreamed up a salad. And, boy, oh, boy, my salad is as penny-conscious as a thrift-promoting Franklin proverb!

You'll find my culinary contribution carefully recorded in the minutes of our Ladies Aid Society.

You see, we had a meeting to plan a Service Men's Social. We ladies are patriotic, but the treasury's low. So I up and offer, "I can feed fifty men for six bucks!"

"On what?" asks our lady president. "Remember, our boys deserve the best!"

"They'll get it," I reply. "My Ben Franklin Salad is my own special version of a whipped potato salad. It gets its wonderful real flavor from the Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise in it. And I can tell you this—Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise is the kind men like!"

"But it's not salad dressing. That's just the point! Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise is all mayonnaise—no starchy filler. Stays smooth and creamy even when you add milk. Makes this whipped potato salad even whippier!"

"And it's really fresh—made with 'FRESH-PRESS' Salad Oil, prepared each day as it's needed. That's why Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise truly tastes fresher even than home-made."

This "word to the wise" did it! The Ladies Aid voted for Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise—100 to 0!

BEN FRANKLIN SALAD

4 cups mashed potatoes	3 large tomatoes, sliced
½ cup celery, diced	4 cooked frankfurters, sliced
2 tbs. onion, chopped	Lettuce or salad greens
2 tbs. parsley, chopped	Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise
2 tsp. salt	Pimiento stars, parsley
½ tsp. pepper
2 tbs. milk

Blend milk and 1 cup Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise. Whip with potatoes, celery, onion, parsley, and seasonings. Arrange potato salad, tomato and frankfurter slices on lettuce or salad greens. Garnish each serving with a pimiento star and parsley sprigs. Serve with Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise. Serves 6.

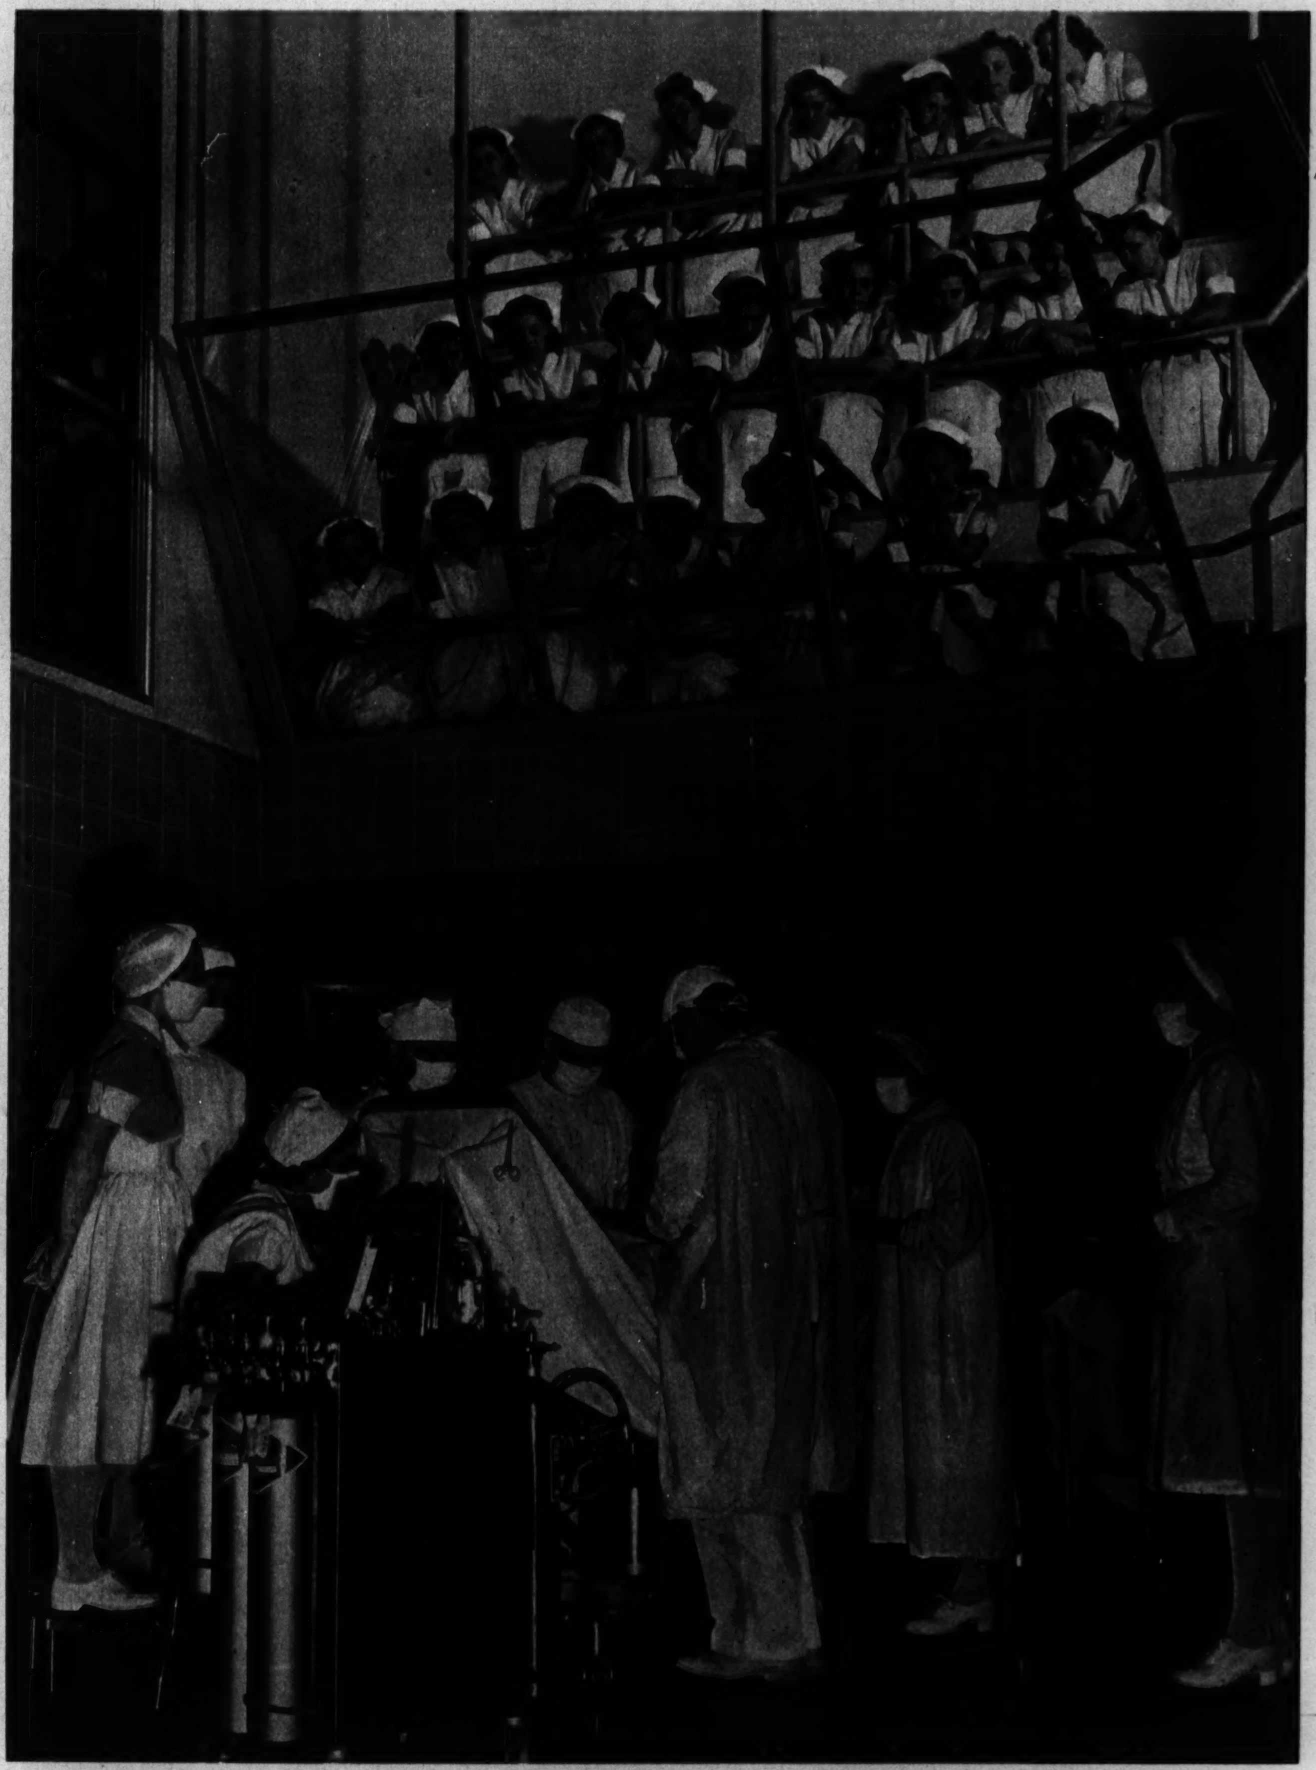
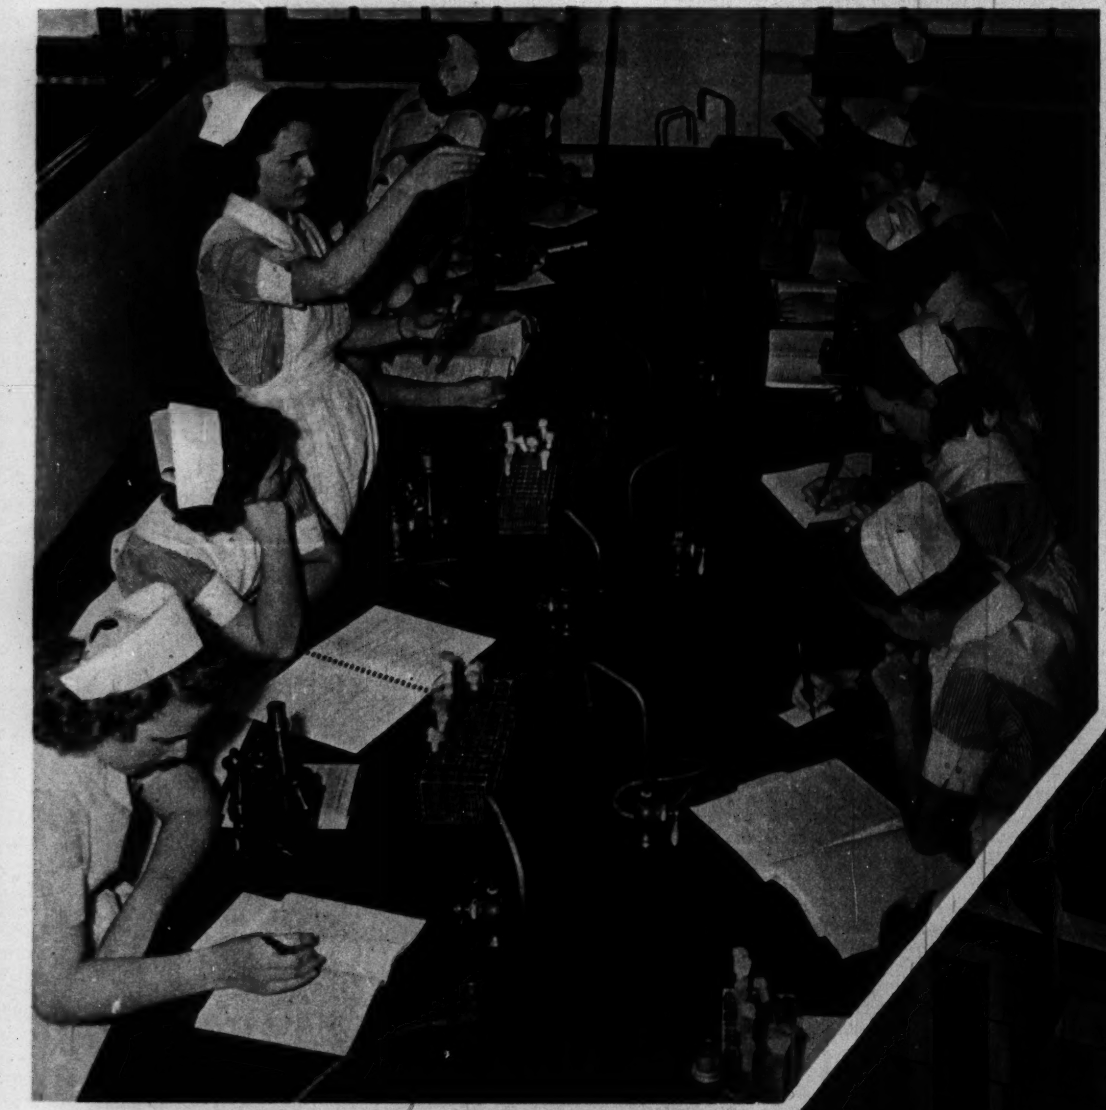
IN SEPTEMBER Rose Nizich of Chicago will complete her nursing course. Immediately, thru the American Red Cross, she will volunteer for service with the army.

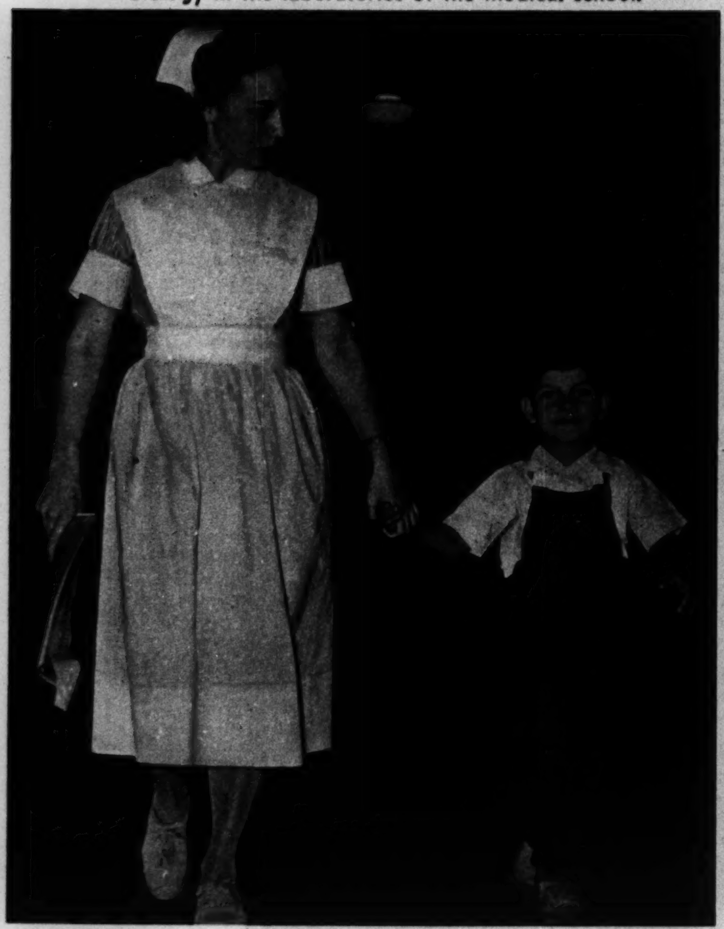


THE MYSTERIES OF THE OPERATING AMPHITHEATER unfold for the student nurses, who master, as all nurses must, principles and practice of operating room technique.



STUDY OF SCIENCES in Wesley Memorial Hospital School of Nursing is carried on at Northwestern University Medical school, with which the nursing school is affiliated. This is a class in microbiology in the laboratories of the medical school.

IN THE CHEMISTRY LABORATORIES at Northwestern University Medical school: Leanne Phelps of Spencer, Ia., now in her second year of nursing education.



AS PART OF HER TRAINING in pediatric nursing, Beatrice Lansdowne of Anaheim, Cal., assists graduates and physicians in the Montgomery Ward clinic at N. U. medical school. One of her first jobs is to lead youthful patients into examining rooms.

A daytime blue wool suit, at left, is belted with self material and fastened with coral suede rope and buttons. A simulated handkerchief, matching in color the turban and gauntlet gloves, is tucked into the chest pocket. Sleeves are three-quarter length and the narrow skirt has a shallow slit at the front. The designer is Elinor K. Bowman of Chicago.

China inspired the designer of the beautiful costume at right. Handsome soft blue Chinese brocade with a design in two shades of green and gold is used for the gown and also for the bag, which is copied from a Chinese fan. Deep blue and deep green satin bands and a long soft blue tassel are the only decoration. The designer is Nancy Layton of New York.

PEA POD CANOES

FOR several days there had been much activity under the rosebush where the Teenie Weenies lived. The peas which the little people had planted in their garden were ripe. The huge pods were cut away from the vine with Teenie Weenie axes and carried under the rosebush, where they were carefully slit open along one side and the fat green peas lifted out. Most of the peas were to be dried and put away for next Winter's use. However, the Teenie Weenies always eat some of the peas fresh, and how the little folk do enjoy them!

Peas are a very important crop to the Teenie Weenies. Of course, the food they supply is most important, but the big pods also supply the little people with transportation. When the peas are removed the pods are carefully dried and then coated with a waterproof liquid which is made from the milk, or sap, of the dandelion plant. Tiny seats, ribs and floor boards are then added to make a very nice little canoe that will safely carry two Teenie Weenies. Most of the Teenie Weenies know how to build pea pod canoes and they always try to see who can make the best boat.

It takes over a week to make one of the pea pod canoes. Of course, the little folk are always anxious to put them in the water at once to try them out. But for several days before the canoes were finished there came very hard rains, and the water was so high and swift in the creek that the General considered it unsafe for such tiny craft.

"You must wait until the water goes down," the General warned. "We don't want to invite any Teenie Weenie accidents."

"Yes, that's right," agreed the Sailor, who was an expert canoeman. "There are always lots of floating things in the creek when the water is high. A floating twig or a clothespin can very easily upset a canoe!"

"Why can't we try out the canoes in a pan of water?" asked the Dunce. "I know where there is a pan of drinking water in a chicken yard. The chickens who live there wouldn't care if we used it."

"That's not a very good place," said the Turk. "There's hardly enough room to turn a canoe around in a pan of water. The creek will settle down in a day or two, and then we can have a real place to try the canoes out."

"Well," urged the Dunce, who was always impatient, "couldn't we use the swimming pool?"

"That's silly!" exclaimed the Cook. "How in the name of common sense are you going to try out a canoe in a sauce dish? I agree with the General that we'd better wait until the creek is safe."

The Teenie Weenies watched the creek carefully. In a couple of days the water began to fall. Then it rained again and the water was higher than ever. The little people were greatly disappointed, but the very next day the Chinaman brought news that filled them all with joy.

"Me flind place for canoe. Allee same hose makin' big lake over there," shouted the Chinaman, pointing with his tiny finger. "Muchie water for canoe."

"Where is this lake?" asked the Turk.

"Flollow me. Me show where lake is," said the Chinaman, and he set off, followed by several of the Teenie Weenies.

The Chinaman led the little men to a spot in the garden back of a big house, where they saw a garden hose lying on the ground. The little boy and girl who lived in the house had been playing you-spray-me-and-I'll-spray-you in their bathing suits and forgot to shut the water off carefully when they went to dress. Water was running from the hose in a small stream, but there was enough coming out to make a large Teenie Weenie lake.

The Turk and his friends dashed off to the shoe house. In a short time they returned with the canoes and with the rest of the Teenie Weenie family tagging on behind.

While the water was scarcely deep enough to cover the toes of a wading boy or girl, it was quite deep enough to make excellent canoeing. So the little people had a fine time skimming over the smooth water in their pea pod canoes.

PLAN TO SPEED VOTERS' SIGNING IN WILL COUNTY

Registration Now to Avoid Confusion.

Will county has joined in the general downstate movement to sign up voters immediately under the new permanent registration act to avoid confusion on the Nov. 3 election day, it was announced by Joseph Hartley, Will county clerk.

Hartley said he plans to confer with party leaders in the county with a view to holding special registration drives in some of the heavier Will county precincts. If this is not done it will be virtually impossible for existing staffs to handle the registration rush, Hartley declared.

The new act, which extends permanent registration thruout the state, provides for two general registration days, Sept. 19 and Oct. 6, when all regular precinct polling places will be open for the registration of voters. Meanwhile, voters can register by appearing in person at their county clerks' offices.

Nonregistrant Can Vote Once.

By the terms of the new act, a nonregistered voter can vote at one election, but the procedure is so complicated that it will put both the polls officials and the voter himself to considerable inconvenience, Hartley said.

"Either we must put on a special campaign to get people to sign early, or we'll be hopelessly swamped," he said.

"We have an estimated 75,000 potential voters in Will county, or an average of more than 750 to a precinct. On our general registration days there will be three persons on duty in each precinct. If these three persons were to work at top speed all the time, in a 10 hour day they would register about 85 persons each, or a total of 255. That does not take into account delays from answering questions and other causes.

Can Handle Only Two-thirds.

"This would mean that our registrars in the two general days allotted could sign up only about two-thirds of our voters. The other third would have to register separately or face annoying delays election day.

"Inasmuch as our voters have been registering at my office at the rate of only about 300 a week, we're headed inevitably for confusion or worse unless we hold special registration drives."

Hartley said that 18 of Will county's 98 precincts have more than 800 voters each. One has more than 1,200 and another more than 1,000. Each under the law will have only three registrars, however. Inasmuch as the proportion of foreign born families in these precincts is high, the work of registration will be greatly involved by the proving of citizenship, he pointed out.

Eligibility for Voting.

Any person 21 years old or more who is a citizen, and who has resided one year in the state, 90 days in the county and 30 days in the precinct is eligible to register.

Appearing before a registrar [the county clerk or one of his deputies] the voter is required to state his name, address, term of residence, country of birth, citizenship, and age. If he is a naturalized citizen he must tell the court, the place and the date of his naturalization. Then he must sign his name or affix his mark.

On election days he is required to sign his name or make his mark in order to obtain a ballot, and his signature must agree with that on his registration card. The registration is effective without further attention unless the voter changes his name or residence, whereupon he must notify the county clerk of such altered status to retain his voting right.

Service Men May Vote.

Will county men or women in military or naval service can vote by absentee ballot without registering, Hartley said, and they are not required to register until 30 days after their discharge.

To obtain an absentee ballot the voter writes his county clerk for a ballot application. When he returns this properly executed, the voter receives from the clerk an official ballot, which must be returned to the clerk in time for delivery to the voter's regular polling place before the polls close on election day.

Permanent registration has been in effect for several years in Cook county and in the nine downstate cities that have election boards — Aurora, Bloomington, Cairo, Danville, East St. Louis, Galesburg, Peoria, Rockford and Springfield.

In Cook county nine suburbs are under the jurisdiction of the Chicago election board. They are the cities of Chicago Heights, Berwyn and Harvey, the town of Cicero, and the villages of Summit, Stickney, Morton Grove, Elmwood Park and Skokie. All other places in the county are under the jurisdiction of the county clerk.

Hammond Tech Runs 24 Hours a Day Training Workers for Defense Plants

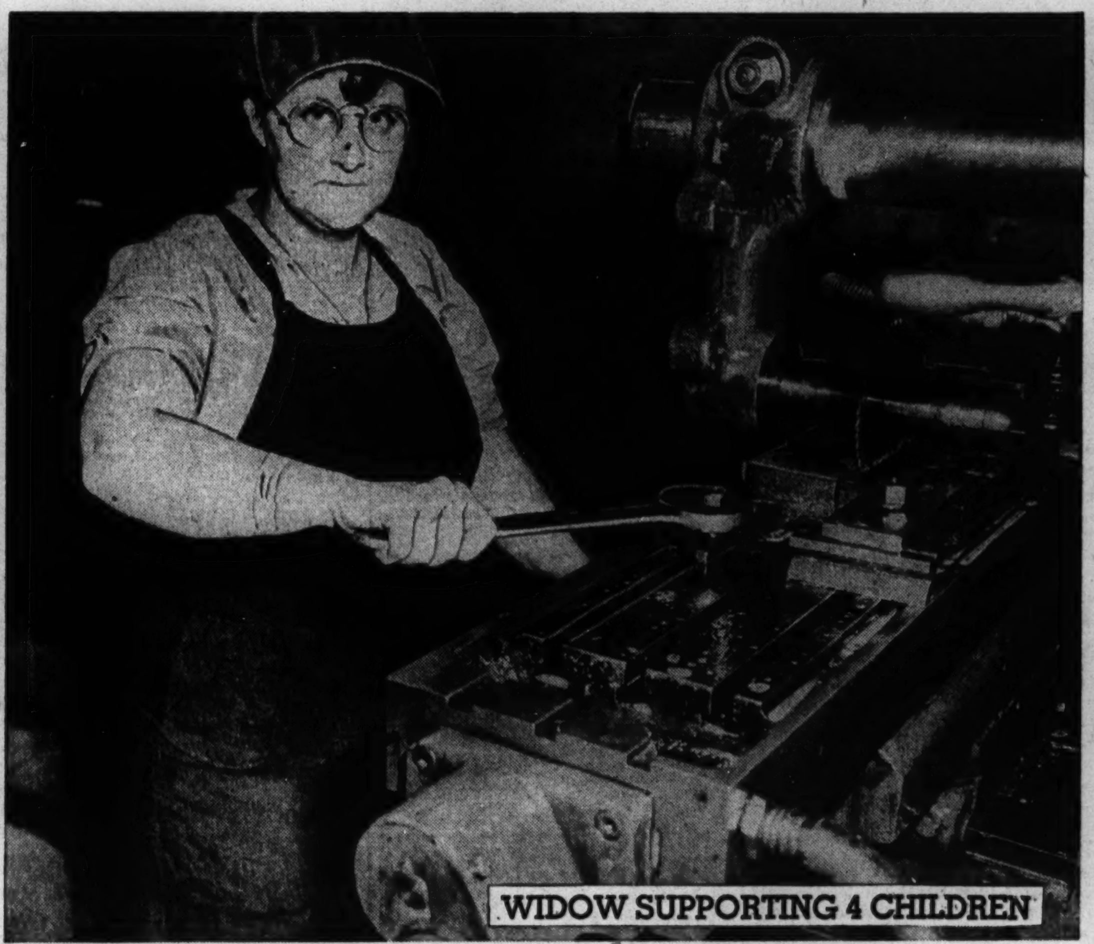
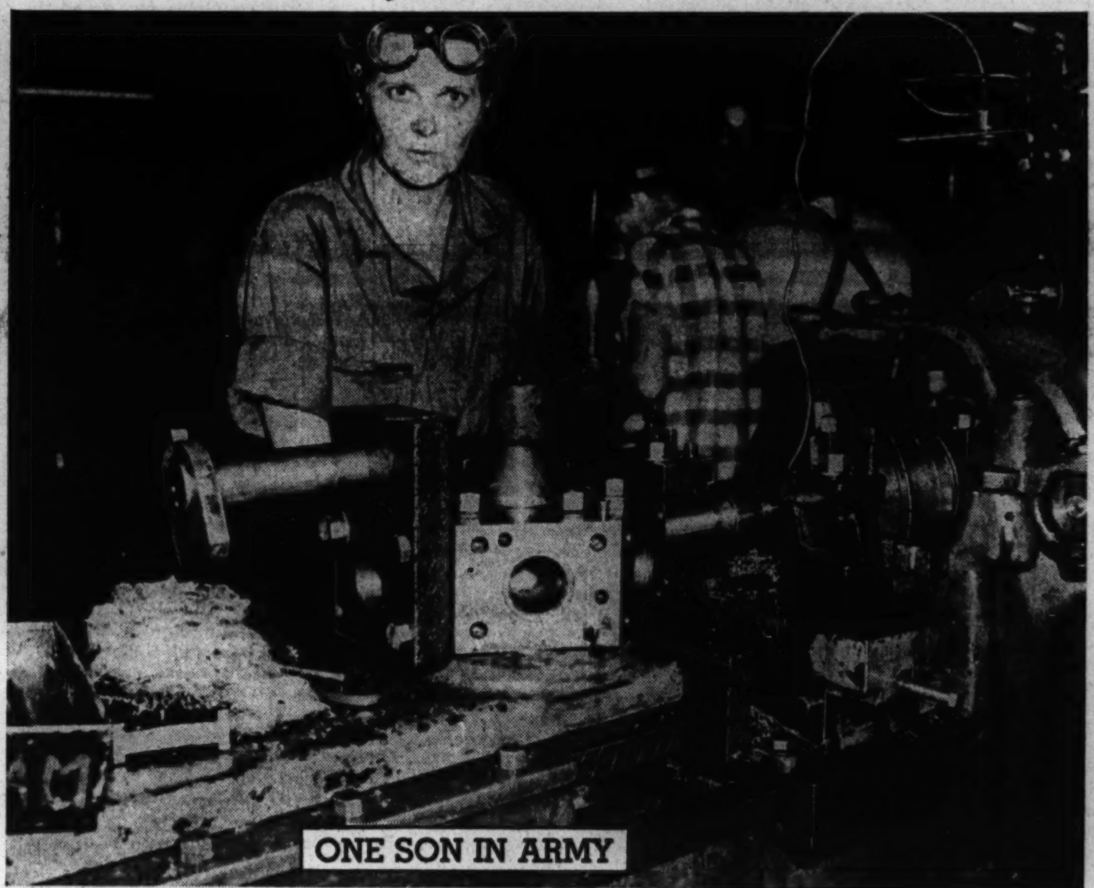
FOUR SONS IN SERVICE

At busy Hammond Technical High school classes now run day and night, seven days a week for national defense trainees. Among these students are patriotic housewives such as Mrs. Rose Burns, 43, who has one son and three stepsons, whom she has raised as members of her own family, now serving in the armed forces. They are Andrew, 26, at Great Lakes Naval Training station; Steve, 24, a sergeant assigned to radio duty in a Texas army post; Rudolph, 23, with the expeditionary force in Ireland, and John, 19, at a St. Louis air corps base. The three older boys bear the name of Mrs. Burns' former husband, Horvetich.



WIDOW SUPPORTING 4 CHILDREN

With the double grimness of winning a war and supporting her four children, all under 7 years of age, Mrs. Margaret Papas, a 34 year old widow, of 4836 Kennedy avenue, East Chicago, tightens up one of the chuck nuts on a milling machine. When the machines are running, the war machine trainees put down the transparent visor to protect their face from flying steel particles. This is one of the machines that were purchased before the war by farsighted Tech Director Fred Benson. [TRIBUNE Photos.]



ONE SON IN ARMY

One of Mrs. Boyd Davis' sons, James, 19, has come home from Panama where he was injured during maneuvers, and is now working on war production at the Pullman-Standard company. A second son, Benjamin, 20, is serving with the army in California where he is a sergeant. Mrs. Davis lives at 510 Ingraham street, Calumet City. While women such as Mrs. Davis are working on a 12 week course, Director Benson has a flexible schedule that allows them to attend classes as often as they wish and to go to work in a defense plant as soon as they master the machine.

GIVES UP SCHOOL TEACHING

Miss Mary Adeline McKinney has deserted the little red schoolhouse for the duration. Miss McKinney taught last year at Morehead, Ky. "There are plenty of older folks that can do the teaching, let me turn out some tank parts or shells on a lathe," says the former teacher.

Communities' Staffs Prepare for Black-Out

Community commanders and their staffs have been asked to familiarize themselves with the contents of the recently issued manual for practice black-out covering the test for Wednesday night when it will be the goal of the Office of Civilian Defense, Chicago metropolitan area, to darken the landscape as deeply, between 10 and 10:30 p. m., as it was before the first settler lit his cabin lamp.

Offices of the division chiefs will be in operation during the first area black-out in the middle west and will act as a clearing house for instructions to and questions from community commanders. Reports immediately after the all-clear signal has sounded shall include ground observation from each block and reports of any accidents.

Community commanders have been instructed to be on duty to see that zone captains and block captains are properly instructed and prepared for the test. The community office will act as a clearing house for all questions that occur in the community, except such occurrences as require action by the central control.

Zone Captains' Duties.

Zone captains are instructed that it shall be their duty to see that all block captains under their jurisdiction understand instructions before the black-out occurs, and that they are completely staffed and ready for the test. Zone captains shall see that all orders are transmitted to zone organizations and shall supervise the operations of block organizations to the extent necessary to see that they are functioning.

Householders are instructed to turn out all exterior and interior lights. Interior lights may be used when properly obscured from the outside. Lights must be checked in such places as basements, porches, attics, garages, barns, and other structures, as well as automobiles parked on the premises. Home owners who find it necessary to be away from home on the night of the practice must extinguish all lights before leaving.

People to Stay Indoors.

Persons in their homes are instructed to remain indoors until the all-clear signal is sounded, not to use the telephone unless absolutely necessary for emergency purposes, and to keep all dogs, cats, and other pets indoors.

All street and highway lighting must be extinguished. This includes all business and residential districts, as well as parks, beaches, playgrounds, and athletic fields.

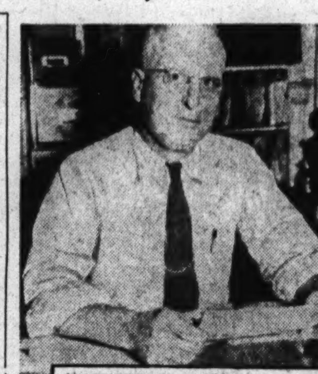
All industries, except as provided for, shall participate in the black-out and shall extinguish all lights visible from the outside. The only exceptions are in the cases where vital industries have been instructed by proper military authorities to continue production, but at the same time, participate in the black-out to the utmost of their ability. Emergency lights must be properly shielded.

MILLS TO KEEP BUSY

Black-outs on the industrial south side are not new. The Carnegie-Illinois Steel company has experimented with daylight "black-outs" using smoke screens, which may be used in the event of an air raid to cover the mills. However, the mills this week will only black-out so far as it does not interfere with production. Office and other lights not essential to the work being carried out will be extinguished.

It was on the south side that the city's first black-out was staged. The scene was block 5, zone 12 of the Woodlawn community which blacked out for a 10 minute interval July 10. Dim-outs also have been experimented with on the south side. The partial black-outs have been held in the area enclosed by 47th and 79th streets, Halsted street and the lake in early morning hours in order that civilian defense officials might gain experience in the problem of a complete black-out.

While the Indiana towns are in the 5th corps area and not affected by the black-out, civilian defense officials said they expected orders to the three lake counties, La Porte, Lake, and Porter, to participate in the black-out. Practice black-outs have been held in Gary.



HEADS SCHOOL

Fred E. Benson keeps his Hammond Technical High school operating at full capacity in order to meet the demand of numerous plants in the area for skilled operators. Benson has been on the Tech staff for 22 years, married a teacher he met there in 1924.

Five Southern Cities Recruit Two Air Units

Personnel for navy flight squadrons from the steel mill section just south of Chicago, the Gary Vulcanaires and the Calumet Falcons, composed of young men from Whiting, East Chicago, Hammond, and Calumet City, will be selected within the next three weeks.

More than 450 youths have applied from the five steel cities for the two squadrons which will be made up of about 70 men each. Those chosen will be sworn in at mass induction ceremonies in their respective areas at the end of this month.

Contests to select names for the two units have been held. Miss Margery Tippy, 561 Washington street, Gary, was the winner of that city's contest when her name, the Vulcanaires, was chosen. She is a secretary in a real estate office.

Refinery Worker Submits Name.

The name Calumet Falcons, for the squadron of men from Hammond, Whiting, East Chicago, and Calumet City, was submitted by Andrew J. Susorem, 1522 Steiber road, Whiting, a refinery worker.

Each of the two units already has a man ready to go with all exams passed. Gordon Sanbach, 708 Pennsylvania street, Gary, has been accepted and will be sworn in with the squadron. Others who were among the first to apply for the Gary unit are Fred Kraft, Charles Crawford, Arnold J. Pozzo, and Arthur Feiler.

Earl J. Carroll of 927 Carroll street, Hammond, has passed the tests for the Calumet Falcons. He is a gradu-

Ensign McAtee.

Ensign Manning E. McAtee, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. S. McAtee, 8045 Kimbark avenue, has gone to Annapolis for special training. He had just completed a visit with his family, his first leave in a year, after being stationed at the naval training station at Corpus Christi, Tex. While at Northwestern university Ensign McAtee roomed with Clifford Groh of Wilmette, who, as a member of the Flying Tigers, was lost for 46 days. They were members of the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. Ensign McAtee's brother, Crane G. McAtee, is now undergoing training as a bombadier at Ellington field, Texas. One week of Ensign McAtee's leave was spent in northern Wisconsin fishing for bass and muskie.

Corp. Kaufman.

Corp. Bernard E. Kaufman, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Kaufman, 5421 Maryland avenue, is now stationed at Karachi, India. He has been in service two years. He was graduated from Tilden technical school in 1939. After he entered service he was an instructor at the mechanics' school at Chanute field, Illinois, and while there attended the University of Illinois until Pearl Harbor.

Pvt. James J. Sharkey, son of Mrs. Mae Sharkey of 1043 East 47th street, recently completed training at Fort Logan, Colorado, and has been assigned to Daniel field, Augusta, Ga. Before entering military service Pvt. Sharkey was a student at De Paul university. He is a member of Phi Pi Sigma fraternity.

Lieut. McClurg.

Richard A. McClurg, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. O. McClurg of 8220 Avalon avenue, recently was graduated from the air force advanced flying school at Luke field, Phoenix, Ariz. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the air corps reserve. He attended the University of Michigan where he was active in swimming.

Lieut. Parks.

Lieut. James W. Parks, 22, 4638 Michigan avenue, is attending the battery officers course of the field artillery school at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. He is the son of Edward E. Parks, 3727 Cottage Grove avenue. Before entering military service he was a student at Herzl college. He was formerly stationed at Fort Custer, Michigan.

Mayer Kramer, 7729 Yates avenue, recently was graduated from the Minter field, Bakersville, Cal., basic flying course.

MILITARY UNITS TO STIR CROWD NEXT SATURDAY

Several thousand south and southwest siders will take part in the 13th annual Chicago Music Festival in Soldiers' field next Saturday. Sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., the Festival is being dedicated this year to the armed forces and will be one of the greatest musical military shows ever attempted. Profits of the Festival will be turned over to army and navy relief.

More than 10,000 are expected to take part in the Festival. A thousand of these participants will be young girl dancers, many of whom will come from south and southwest side homes. They will take part in the dance pageant which is an outstanding feature of the Festival. Many more south and southwest siders will take part in the civilian defense exhibition to be given by the Commonwealth Edison company. Members of the Wheelmen of America will give a timely note to the grand entrance parade at 7 o'clock.

Wear Patriotic Garb.

Wearing red, white and blue ballet costumes, the dancers will enter the field in formations representing airplanes. Their dance routines will represent the spirit of youth. Attached to each girl's shoulders will be a knapsack from which, at the end of the dance, there will be unfurled a part of the American flag, resulting in a huge flag covering the entire field.

By a trick device this flag will suddenly disappear and the dancers will make their exit. As they leave the field they will cover their heads with blue-green scarfs and will hold seagull wings, attached to their wrists, above the scarfs, thus creating an effect of seagulls flying over rippling water.

The dancers come from the Ideal Dancing institute and the summer schools of the Young Men's Christian association. They are under the direction of Miss Mayblossom Macdonald, a dancing instructor and artistic director of the pageant, and Miss Wilhelmina Aveling, assistant program director of the YMCA schools. Assisting on the south and southwest side are Winifred Colton, Englewood YMCA; Gladys Larson, 111th street; Dorothy Ann Kidd, Hyde Park; Elizabeth Pulley and Oletha White, Wabash; Virginia Guy and Mrs. W. J. Farwell, South Chicago avenue.

Weber to Direct Orchestra.

The dancers will be accompanied by the Festival orchestra which will be directed by Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N.

One of the most spectacular features of the Festival will be the presentation of the 60 men of the Carnegie-Illinois chorus and the 85 men of the Carillco Concert band. All are employed by the Gary works of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation which includes the world's largest steel plant and the world's largest sheet and tin mill.

These two bodies of men will personify for the expected audience of 85,000 the march of wartime production. A segment of Gary's night sky showing the columns of brilliant flame geysers as they roar from the large Bessemer converter furnaces and the open hearth furnaces will be reproduced as a backdrop for the "Men of Steel" singers and instrumentalists on the vast stage at the north end of the field. The steel mill has purchased 500 seats for their employés to attend the festival.

Negro Chorus to Sing.

More than 1,000 will take part in the Festival Negro chorus. They will march in during the grand entrance parade and will sing "The Old Flag Never Touched the Ground." There will be a final rehearsal for the chorus at 8 o'clock Thursday night in the Metropolitan Community church at 41st street and South Park way.

The festival will be preceded by a luncheon Friday noon in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House. This will be the sixth annual festival luncheon and the honor guests will be Dr. Rudolph Ganz, pianist and composer, and Mara Kurenko, Russian lyric soprano.

All seats to the luncheon in the ballroom have been sold but there are still available tickets for the foyer. Those sitting in the foyer will go into the ballroom after the luncheon to hear the program. Luncheon tickets are $1.75 and may be purchased from the festival headquarters on the fourth floor of the Tribune Tower.

Maxwell to Be Toastmaster.

Philip Maxwell, director of the festival, will be toastmaster at both the luncheon and Saturday night's event. Reserved festival tickets are 55c and $1.10. Wednesday is the deadline for obtaining them by mail but they may be purchased at any time in the Tribune public service offices either in the Tribune Tower or at 1 South Dearborn street.

Events leading up to the grand finale Saturday night include several preliminary contests. The first of these this week will be a contest for instrumentalists at 7 o'clock Tuesday

196 Truck Casings Go to McLoshay-Schaffer.

Ninety individuals and firms on the south side were allotted 498 tires and 533 tubes by rationing boards during the week ending July 31.

Forty of these were given permission to buy 81 tires for passenger cars and 101 tubes. The other 50 received permits for 417 casings for trucks or buses and 432 truck tubes.

Largest single allotment—196 truck tires and 196 truck tubes—went to McLoshay-Schaffer company, 6255 Wabash avenue. This allotment was made under an emergency reserve rationing regulation which permits qualified trucking firms to purchase tires for 10 per cent of the wheels they have in use, plus spares.

To qualify the firm must operate more than 50 miles from its home office and be a common carrier. All applications for the reserve made after July 15 are charged against the rationing board's monthly quota.

South side residents sharing in the tire rationing for the week were:

SCIENCE GROUP TO DISCUSS SOCIAL ASPECTS OF WAR

Forty-one aspects of the war, ranging from the propaganda front to boom towns and war marriages, will be discussed by social scientists who will gather at the University of Chicago Friday and Saturday for the 21st annual institute of the Society for Social Research.

Reports on the adjustment of college men to army life will open the institute Friday morning. Sessions later in the day will be devoted to discussion of the problems of communities near army camps, migration of war workers, new occupational demands, and the situation of primitive peoples on whose lives the war has been imposed.

Collector Shows Unique Corn

Frank Whipple, south side barber, began collecting corn from the 48 states and foreign countries as the result of an argument in his shop seven years ago. Whipple holds two ears of pod corn, which has an individual covering for each kernel instead of one husk for the entire ear.

ate of Hammond High school and works at Lever Brothers plant. His enthusiasm is demonstrated by several bicycle trips he took to remove 14 pounds excess weight which was necessary before he was accepted.

Civic Clubs Lend Support.

Civic clubs in the five cities have been boosting the recruiting drive for the squadrons. Individuals who have been assisting in the drive for the Calumet Falcons have been R. S. Weesner of the public schools, James McNamara, mayor of Whiting, and Joseph Kovachic of East Chicago.

Last week was declared Navy week in Gary as examinations were begun for members of the Vulcanaires. To promote the drive there were more than 75 displays in business places of Gary. Men who have been active in the drive there are Mayor E. L. Schaible, who commented "Gary will have a special pride in the outfit"; Arnold Coons, Frank Helwig, Albert Fertsch, John Radigan, Alex Sax, Tom Radigan, Harold Sanbach, Les Combs Jr., and Nick Jankowitz. H. S. Jackson of the junior chamber of commerce has been coördinating the efforts of the organizations.

Contests also have been started to choose insignia for the two squadrons. These will be painted on the planes of the men if they fight as a squadron and will be on miniature wings which will be presented them.

Gary Mass Induction Aug. 30.

The mass induction ceremony for Gary is scheduled for Aug. 30. The induction for the other squadron will be on Aug. 31. Sites of the ceremonies will be announced later. Recognition will be given at the ceremonies to those who named the squadrons and designed the insignia.

Recruiting at Gary has been centered about the new service men's center in the YMCA where the examinations were held last week. Applicants for the two squadrons will be accepted up to the dates of the induction ceremonies. There is a possibility other squadrons will be formed.

A third northern Indiana squadron recently was formed in South Bend. Mayor Jesse Pavey gave the name, South Bend's Own. There are 35 men in the squadron. In all, thruout the middle west there have been about 35 units organized.

The principle of the community squadron is that the men who join will remain together, as long as is possible, thruout their training, according to Lieut. Jay Berwanger, former University of Chicago football star, who is directing recruiting for the squadrons.

The first phase of the training of the two squadrons is civilian pilot training, which will be done in groups of 20 at airports near the cities from which the men are recruited. This will last eight weeks and then the men will be sent to the preflight school at Iowa City, Ia., where they will remain three months. Primary training will be taken at a field such as Glenview. Then secondary training will be administered at such stations as Pensacola, Fla., and Corpus Christi, Tex.

Separated on Fleet Assignment.

Lieut. Berwanger pointed out that it would be impossible to keep all the men together when they were assigned to the fleet, as some will be trained to be dive bomber pilots, some as pursuit pilots, and others assigned to observation work.

The idea of community squadrons was originated by Lieut. Comm. Carl G. Olson, senior member of the Chicago naval aviation cadet selection board. Recruiting in this manner enables the board to reach places where there is no flight recruiting center.

BARBER GATHERS CORN SAMPLES FROM 48 STATES

Settles Argument About Farm Experiments.

This is the story of a collection which began with an argument in a barber shop seven years ago. The collector is Frank Whipple, who operates a barber shop and cigar store at 2604 East 79th street.

The collection comprises ears of corn from all the 48 states, 15 Indian reservations, and from Venezuela, Costa Rica, Bermuda, Canada, and Mexico. In addition he has samples of by-products of corn which have been sent him by manufacturers.

Whipple, who was born on a farm in Missouri, has a theory that there is as much or more experimentation in the field of agriculture as in the laboratories of industry. In 1935 customers in his shop challenged this theory and argued that only bona fide experimentation was carried out in industries.

Wrote State Officials.

To prove his point Whipple decided to concentrate on corn. To begin the collection he wrote letters to the departments of agriculture of the 48 states. Within five weeks he had samples of corn from 35 states.

He met a complication in the form of the quarantine laws of some states—Florida, for example. This obstacle was met by obtaining permits from the Illinois department of agriculture and the United States department of agriculture to exhibit corn.

Only for Exhibition Use.

This spring many of his neighbors wanted samples of the corn he has collected for their war gardens. But the stipulations of the permits provide that the corn he collects can only be used for "exhibition" purposes and Whipple was forced to refuse their requests. But to add to his collection he says he wants samples of corn which is being grown in war gardens in the city.

To enlarge his collection he decided upon foreign countries. Here it was necessary that he deal with the United States department of agriculture. The countries forwarded their samples to the department, which then released them to Whipple.

Sample from President's Estate.

Whipple also has ears of corn from individual farms. One of his prize exhibits is a half a dozen ears of corn from the Hyde Park estate of President Roosevelt. He also has samples of corn from the farm of Claude R. Wickard, secretary of agriculture.

"A farmer will say this is impossible," Whipple commented as he brought out an ear of yellow corn from Ohio which has 17 rows of kernels. An ear of corn, he explained, almost invariably has even rows of kernels.

He also has an ear of pod corn, which is grown in Ohio, New Mexico, and Iowa. The pod corn has a covering for each kernel instead of one husk for the whole ear. There also is an ear of doll popcorn, grown in Burbank, Cal., which is a digest of the regular edition of popcorn. And there is a dark red ear of popcorn which so closely resembles a flower it could be used as a boutonniere.

Corn from Tribune Farm.

Whipple also obtained samples of five varieties of corn from the experimental farm of THE TRIBUNE at Wheaton. Rudolpho Salazar, Mexican consul in Chicago, obtained some smoked corn from his country for Whipple. The collector explained that the corn was picked green, smoked and dried, and then parched for eating.

To illustrate experimentation and development of varieties of corn Whipple has tried to get varieties grown early in the history of the middle west as well as strains which have been developed recently. He has an ear of a variety which was first grown in Illinois in 1865.

He also has samples of hybrid corn now grown in Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Iowa, and other states which have been developed recently. Whipple explained that the variety of corn had to be developed for the area which it is grown for the best results.

He Has By-Products, Too.

To show further the development of the corn industry Whipple has samples of the many by-products made from corn. There are insulation materials, sirup, sugar, starch, breakfast foods, gluten feed—to mention a few.

Whipple was reared on a farm near Hillsboro, Mo., where his four brothers still live. He left the farm and went to St. Louis, Mo., where he became a barber. In 1917 he came to Chicago and since then has lived on the south side.

In his shop, which also contains a branch postoffice operated by Mrs. Whipple, there is a library of books on farming subjects. And to document his samples of corn Whipple has made scrapbooks of the letters which accompanied the ears of corn sent him.

Nurse Is Bride

Evelyn M. Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nels Johnson, 7825 Evans avenue, recently was married to the Rev. Samuel Walberg of Fairmont, Minn. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Walberg of Seattle, Wash. The bride formerly was a nurse at Covenant hospital.

Effingham County Picnic Set for Next Sunday

The annual Effingham county picnic for all former residents of the southern Illinois county will be held next Sunday in the Forest Hill picnic grove on Higgins road. It will be an all-day picnic with a basket dinner at noon. Forest Davis of Arlington Heights is picnic chairman and Mrs. Frances Martin, 7650 Touhy avenue, is assisting with arrangements. The picnic grove is located one and one-half miles west of the Arlington Heights road.

LAKE COUNTY FAIR TO OPEN SUNDAY AT CROWN POINT

Stock Shows and Racing at 82d Exposition.

Thousands from the Calumet region are expected to flock to the Lake county fair which opens next Sunday at Crown Point. Feature of the fair's opening will be the Brotherhood day religious service. This is the 82d annual agricultural exhibition of the county.

Gov. Henry F. Schricker of Indiana has sent fair officials his indorsement of the brotherhood services. "The world is torn asunder because of the absence of the real brotherhood spirit among the peoples of the earth," he said. The services will be at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and the speaker will be Clarence Manion of the University of Notre Dame.

4-H Members to Have Day.

The second day of the fair will be dedicated to youngsters of 4-H clubs who will hold their annual roundup. There are some 1,500 4-H members in Lake county. This year members of the clubs in Porter county will also exhibit at the Crown Point fair since their county has no exhibition. The club members will have a band and will stage a parade as part of the day's program. Chasing the greased pig will add a lighter vein.

Already the club members have been bringing live stock and agricultural products to the fair grounds to compete for the $2,300 in prizes offered for 4-H classes.

Exhibits Open Sunday.

The exhibits will be opened early Sunday. In addition to the religious service there will be a horse show Sunday afternoon which will present three and five gaited horses, stock horses, roadsters, and events in horsemanship.

Fair officials announced that service men in uniform will be admitted to the fair free of charge. The fair will continue until Saturday, Aug. 22.

Four Days of Racing.

In addition to the horse show there will be four days of racing in running, trotting, and pacing classes. Two of the feature races will be the northern Indiana trotting stake race, and the northern Indiana pacing stake race. Races have been scheduled for Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

The finale of the fair will be patriotism on parade, presented by Lake county American Legion posts. This will be in the form of a military review to be staged before a facsimile of Flanders field. There will be colored lighting effects. A drum and bugle corps contest is included on the program.

Vaudeville acts will be presented every afternoon and night, Monday thru Friday. There also will be band concerts the same days.

Jugoslav Picnic.

Jugo-Slav American Citizens' club will hold its 10th annual picnic today at Egger's grove, 114th street and Avenue G.

WIDOW WITH FOUR CHILDREN TRAINS FOR A WAR JOB

To the many accomplishments of the Hammond Technical High school one more laurel was added last week. The school, which once won the Indiana state basketball championship without a home gymnasium, has definitely shown it can turn out good machinists, welders, and shopworkers from not only vigorous young men, but from any woman who knocks at the door of the four story brick building on downtown Russell street.

Among the 420 defense program students now learning to be technicians capable of cutting a gear with perfectly aligned teeth, or milling an engine block to a minute fraction, are a widow with four children, a mother who has four sons in the armed services, a school teacher from Kentucky, and gray haired women who normally might be turning to a quieter life.

"We may have an old building, but we have good equipment, and when these women go out of here they will be ready to start working," said Fred E. Benson, director of Hammond Tech. Benson, who joined the staff soon after the school was organized in 1920, was foresighted enough to get additional training machinery before the war began. Now the school is jammed with some of the best equipment in the country.

Sidertrack New Building Plans.

"We should have had a new school building by this time," Benson explained. "Plans have been drawn for a 2 million dollar high school, and, after a tumultuous discussion by the entire city, a place has been found to build it. But, unfortunately, there won't be steel for a new building until after the war, so we are making the best of our old one."

Making the best of the old one includes running the school 24 hours a day, seven days a week, even tho several instructors have been lost to military service, and another, Harold J. Askran, science instructor, leaves this week to accept a commission in the navy. But Director Benson keeps his school running full blast with undampened enthusiasm.

"I go over to the factories for my instructors," Director Benson confided. "I can't pay them as much as they get in the factory, but I get them to come along anyway. Many of the students even start out making more than their instructors are getting, but we stay right in there teaching because we have seen the rising flood of requests for trained workers."

Another finesse by the head of the Hammond school was made last year when, with the backing of farsighted industrial leaders, he secured $100,000 from a federal fund to purchase vocational training equipment. This was more than any other school in the state received, and nearly more than all the rest together were given.

"We didn't waste that money. I scotted around until I knew where the best second hand equipment in the whole area could be had. Then we went down there with cash on the line, and got almost twice the number of machines we could have had by purchasing them new—that is, if there were new machines to be had."

Addition Built in 1926.

The four story brick building which houses the school also has a history. In 1923 it was jacked up, twisted around to face north instead of east, and then hauled 200 feet to its present location. An addition was built in 1926. The building not only has machine shops on its lower floors, but teaches the other manual arts on other levels. Its typing students have been offered a variety of positions by the neighboring firms that have learned they can depend on the girls and boys taught at Tech.

Even Director Benson's personal life has been intertwined with the vocational school. His wife is a former teacher at Tech High school, and it was there he met her. They have been married 18 years and have a daughter, Bette Ann, 16, who is a pupil in the other Hammond high school. Active in community affairs, Mr. Benson was given a testimonial dinner a year ago by fellow townsmen who expressed their feelings toward the man who has played such an important part in giving industrial training to boys and girls.

Important rôles in the Hammond Tech High school are played by a well chosen staff. Responsible for having taught machine technique and welding to hundreds of Hammondites are H. F. Kieckheafer, machine supervisor, and T. M. Flack, welding supervisor. It is their task to see the graduates are "real" and not "play" machinists. And the testimonial of industry demonstrates their success.

South Area Dancers in Music Festival

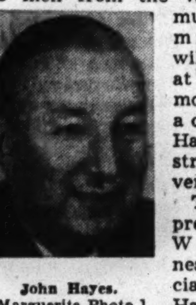
Honor 225 Men at Ceremony.

A plaque bearing the names of the 225 men from the Woodlawn community now in military service will be dedicated at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in a ceremony at the Hayes hotel, 64th street and University avenue.



John Hayes. [Marguerite Photo.]

The plaque was presented to the Woodlawn Business Men's association by John Hayes, proprietor and manager of the hotel, which has been the headquarters of the association for the last 20 years. Parents and relatives of the service men will be guests. Representatives of 39 business, cultural, civic and educational groups will attend the meeting.

Gold Star for Hero.

A gold star will be placed by the name of Sergt. Charles Auld, gunner in the Canadian air force, who was killed in the Memorial day raid over Cologne, Germany, by Auld's brother, Elmer Auld, 6407 University avenue. Taps will be sounded by Jason Bull of the Sea Scouts.

Sergt. Auld is the only Woodlawn man in service reported to the association as killed in action. He enlisted in the United States army on his 18th birthday, April 30, 1937. For three years he was stationed at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

He joined the Canadian air force in February, 1941, and was promoted to sergeant shortly before he returned to the south side for a month's furlough last Christmas. When he returned he was offered a patrol assignment on the east coast of Canada but preferred foreign service. He attended St. Adrian school and Tilden Technical school. He was graduated from the St. Charles, Ia., High school, in 1936.

Hayes to Present Plaque.

The dedication will be opened by Dr. Robert Clark, acting president of the association At that time the color guard of Woodlawn post, American Legion, will present the colors, followed by singing the Star Spangled Banner, led by Miss Jane Symons, 6505 Kenwood avenue The invocation will be pronounced by the Rev. Kieran O'Hara of St. Clara's church.

Hayes will present the plaque on behalf of the hotel. It will hang near the association's executive office. Dr. Clark will accept the plaque on behalf of the business group. Judge David Matchett of the appellate court, who has two sons in the service, will speak on behalf of the parents. Concluding the program the pledge of allegiance to the flag will be given, after which the colors will be retired.

Dr. Clark heads the program arrangements committee, assisted by Dr. G. G. Knapp, Alma Wilson McMahill and Mrs. Ida M. Headley.

Aid Letter Writers.

To facilitate letter writing to men in the armed forces the South Chicago branch of the public library has established a letter writing service for those who are unable to write in English.

Engaged to Sailor

Mr. and Mrs. Ruskin W. Nye of 7707 Champlain avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Cecelia, to Maurice Golding, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman R. Golding of Bellows Falls, Vt. Mr. Golding is now stationed at Great Lakes Training station.

ST. CLARA PARISH MAKES $150 GIFT TO MIDWAY USO

An increased supply of cakes, cookies, and other refreshments for men at the naval training school at the University of Chicago will result from the $150 gift recently received by the Midway USO center from the Rev. Urban Lager in the name of parishioners of St. Clara's church, 64th street and Woodlawn avenue. More than 1,500 sailors attend classes at the university. The Midway entertainment council was formed last April to provide recreation for the trainees. Later affiliated with the USO, it arranges family dinners, Saturday evening parties, and a Sunday afternoon club at Ida Noyes hall on the campus.

South Shore Women Voters Garden Fete Is Wednesday

The South Shore League of Women Voters will hold a garden party at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Manuel Spiegel, 6840 Euclid avenue. Eaton, member of the medical commission.

AVIATION COURSE ON CURRICULUM OF MT. CARMEL

Study Recommended by Air Corps.

Courses designed to give preaviation [illegible]ining to seniors will be given this fall in the regular curriculum at Mount Carmel High school.

Students will be taught the fundamentals [illegible] aerodynamics, meteorology, navigation, civil air regulations and flight theory. Classes also will be offered in descriptive geometry and the construction and interpretation of geographical maps used in flying. Mathematics and physics [illegible]ses will be revised to place spe[illegible] emphasis on matters pertaining to aeronautics.

Air Corps Favors Courses.

"The typical high school graduate will meet most cadet requirements," the Rev. Ambrose Casey, principal, said in announcing the courses, "but our aim is to lay the groundwork as early as possible in order to widen the range of his usefulness and enable him to arrive at maximum efficiency as early as possible." Father Casey said the additions were made at the suggestion of the air corps.

Flying Priest Is Instructor.

One of the instructors will be the Rev. Aquinas Colgan, who has ratings as power pilot, glider pilot, and [illegible]d instructor. Father Colgan for [illegible]ars was on the staff of the [illegible]chool of Aeronautics and has [illegible] hours in the air, including [illegible]d cross-country flying. Other [illegible]tors include the Rev. Claude [illegible]emann and the Rev. Edmund Welch.

Approximately 250 seniors will attend the school this fall. School officials said it is too early to determine how many will take the classes.

4 MORE BOUTS SCHEDULED ON W-G-N-MUTUAL

Four more bouts on the Cavalcade of Sports have been arranged and will be broadcast by W-G-N and Mutual. Featuring outstanding boxers in nearly all weights, the bouts will be broadcast from Madison Square Garden at 9 p. m. on their respective dates by Don Dunphy and Bill Corum.

On Thursday, Aug. 13, Bobby Ruffin and Bob Montgomery, lightweights, will meet for 10 rounds. On Sept. 10 Freddie Cochrane and Ray Robinson will meet for 10 rounds in a welterweight battle. On Friday, Sept. 25, Chalky Wright is scheduled to defend his featherweight title in a 15 round bout with Lulu Constantino. Tami Mauriello and Lee Savold will meet for 10 rounds on Friday, Oct. 30.

The principal announcing chore on the broadcasts is handled by Don Dunphy who gives the blow-by-blow description; Bill Corum provides the color sidelights.

W-G-N TO CARRY MUSIC FESTIVAL FOR TWO HOURS

Many Highlights Slated on Mutual Network.

Two hours of the Chicago Music Festival, sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., will be broadcast over W-G-N starting at 8 o'clock next Saturday night. The first hour from 8 to 9, usually occupied by America Loves a Melody, will be broadcast also over the Mutual Broadcasting system. Jack Brickhouse will be the commentator and Philip Maxwell, director of the festival, will present much of the background.

The program will be opened with the world première of "Victory," a march overture by Nathaniel Shilkret, featuring the festival symphony orchestra of 114 men under the direction of Henry Weber, general musical director of the festival. Mr. Shilkret will be on the stage with Mr. Weber during the première and will also act as one of the judges for the vocal contests. Other judges will be Mme. Maria Kurenko, soprano concert star, and Dr. Rudolph Ganz, president of the Chicago Musical college.

Plan Community Singing.

Next the 85,000 spectators will be led in community singing by Frank Bennett, choral director. They will sing "Deep in the Heart of Texas," "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree," and then to the tune of "Keep the Home Fires Burning" all voices will be raised in a pledge to the men in our armed services that "we'll keep the home fires burning till you come home." Army camps and naval stations all over the world will be notified of this pledge from the midwest and invited to listen in.

The finalists in the vocal contest will be heard next. The two best men and two best women singers will broadcast to the background of the festival symphony orchestra. The judges will select the winners from the finalists of 12 preliminary festival contests held thruout the middle west with a total of more than 1,000 contestants.

While spectators sing "Here Comes the Navy" to the tune of the "Beer Barrel Polka," 300 men from the Great Lakes Naval Training station will march on the field headed by Lieut. Comm. E. E. [Eddie] Peabody, king of the banjo and director of the naval station's orchestra. Peabody will then conduct a typical "Happy Hour" program which is a popular feature of the station. The program will include selections by the concert and dance bands, specialty numbers, a banjo solo by Peabody, and a medley by the Great Lakes choir of 130 voices directed by Chaplain H. F. Hanson.

Women's Chorus to Be Heard.

The winning women's chorus will be heard next. The winner of the trombone contest will next be announced and will be followed by the men's choral winners who will sing "Wings Over America."

The entire audience will take part in a match lighting ceremony which has been a feature of the festival for many years.

A detachment of marines under the command of Lieut. Col. Carlton Hill will stage a drill to be followed by performances by a massed plectrophonic orchestra and a massed accordion band. The plectrophonic orchestra of 1,000 fretted instruments will play "Marcheta" by Schertzinger while more than 1,000 accordionists will play an army, navy, and marine medley. A marimba orchestra of 160 marimbas directed by Clair Omar Musser will be heard playing the "Bolero" by Rosales, "Dance of the Comedians" from the "Bartered Bride," and Verdi's "Anvil Chorus" from "Il Trovatore."

Following a massed community sing led by Carl Craven, the festival's winning pianist will be introduced and will play a Saint-Saēns piano concerto accompanied by the marimba orchestra.

Men of Steel to Sing.

A highlight of the festival will be the chorus of the Men of Steel featuring 80 workers of the Carnegie Illinois company's Gary plant. They will be directed by Harry S. Walsh, musical director of W-G-N's Northerners' program. The men will be dressed in overalls and will sing before a huge replica of a portion of a steel mill. The men will be accompanied by the Carilco band when they sing the "March of the Steel Men" and "At the Ramparts We Watch."

The Radio City Music Hall on the Air will present two stars at 11:30 a. m. today over WCFL and the Blue network. Edwina Eustis, contralto, and Leonora Cortez, concert pianist, will be the soloists of the string symphony concert to be conducted by Maurice Baron. Among the orchestral selections will be the "Pastoral Suite" by Alexander Semmler.

MARION CLAIRE GUEST ON MUSIC THAT ENDURES

Marion Claire, soprano star of America Loves a Melody, will make a guest appearance on W-G-N's Music That Endures concert at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow night.

Miss Claire will sing four selections: "Tomorrow," by Strauss; "Pourquoi," from Delibes' "Lakme"; Sadero's "Fa la, Nana, Bambin," and Strauss' "Devotion."

Miss Claire will be accompanied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, and by the chorus, led by Robert Trendler. Lewis James will produce the program. The orchestra's selections will be Dvorak's "Slavonic Dance No. 10," "Debussy's "Ballade," and the first movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 10. The program will be broadcast over the Mutual network.

Sir Norman Angell on Round Table at 1:30 P. M.

Political reconstruction after the war will be considered at 1:30 p. m. today over WMAQ-NBC in the second in the series of four University of Chicago Round Table discussions on the postwar world. Sir Norman Angell, British author and winner of the Nobel Peace prize in 1933, will participate with Philip Jessup, professor of international law at Columbia university, and Avery O. Craven, University of Chicago historian.

MARINE PLANTS REAL WAR GARDEN AT PACIFIC BASE

Former South Sider's Kin Send Him Seeds.

Hungry marines soon may be eating vegetables gathered from a bona fide war garden on an island "somewhere in the Pacific," which is cultivated by a former resident of the south side who now is a member of the marine corps.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Baksic, 9135 Houston avenue, sometime ago dispatched several packages of vegetable seeds to Mrs. Baksic's brother, Technical Sergt. John J. Buron, now stationed as a marine radio operator on a Pacific island. In his last letter, in addition to the usual things a soldier requests, he asked for vegetable seeds.

Fresh Food Scarce.

He explained that they seldom got fresh food on his island and he wanted to remedy the situation with a garden. Mr. and Mrs. Baksic sent him tomato, carrot, sweet corn, radishes, watermelon, cucumber, and kohl rabi seeds.

"The reason I ask for this is that we don't get fresh foods here," he wrote, "everything is canned. We have had fresh meat twice in three weeks and that has been the only fresh food we have had. With the seeds I will do some vegetable gardening."

Sergt. Buron was graduated from the then St. Joseph Bohemian orphanage, Lisle, Ill., grammar and high school. Later he moved to the west side of Chicago where he worked in a garage. The western Pacific is not strange to Sergt. Buron. He enlisted in the marine corps in 1935 and served three and a half years at Pekin, China. He ended his four year term with six months at Parris Island, S. C.

Worked at Steel Plant.

When he left the marine corps he became a member of the marine corps reserves. He came to South Chicago where he lived with Mr. and Mrs. Baksic, and went to work in the production planning department of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel company.

He was recalled to the marines in December, 1940, and reported for duty at San Diego. He has been in the Pacific war theater since last January. Excerpts from his letter best describe his life:

"It has been some time since I have written you as we have been shifted from the island where we were stationed to another in the southwest Pacific. We arrived without a casualty.

Ill with Fever.

"Again I would like to make this letter a vivid word picture of the place and the natives but as I told you before, censorship prevents me from doing so. Perhaps I can write that I like this island more than the former.

"Received the box and all was in good condition. Have read the books you sent and am passing them around. Good reading matter. If you should have a spare minute in the loop would you get me a can of the special candied fruit which is packed for tropical shipment."

Here he made the request for the seeds. His address is U. S. M. C. unit No. 380, care of postmaster, San Francisco, Cal.

SOUTH SIDE MEN WITH 4-F RATINGS USED IN SERVICE

Ten south side residents with 4-F draft classifications, whose physical defects bar them from military service, recently were graduated from the Illinois Institute of Technology and are now contributing to the war effort as army and navy ordnance inspectors.

Two members of this group were among the first 4-F men in the nation to be utilized by the armed forces. They were trained as naval ordnance inspectors for the 9th naval district. While they are working for the navy they maintain civilian status. Those just graduated include John O'Keefe, 3743 South Wallace street, and John Roberts, 5428 Drexel avenue.

Of the south side group, eight were trained as army ordnance inspectors. There were 73 graduates of this class. They are employed by the Chicago ordnance district and are paid under civil service regulations.

The south siders are: Edward E. Bloom, 2207 East 67th street; Harmon Ginsberg, 6722 South Cornell avenue; Ezra M. Hartman, 6138 University avenue; Milton Lakin, 5244 Ingleside avenue; Joe Pierson, 9346 Muskegon avenue; Bob Stanton, 7321 South Shore drive; Mal Tatge, 7031 Wentworth avenue, and William Vollmer, 7421 Prairie avenue.

The ordnance inspectors were among 253 men who received diplomas from the institute in one of its largest war training graduation exercises. In addition to the army and navy ordnance inspectors, 158 enlisted men and officers of the United States signal corps also were graduated.

Model to Be Bride This Month

The engagement of Miss Peggy Davies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Davies of 7656 Ingleside avenue, to William J. Goldberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Goldberg, 7749 Kingston avenue, has been announced. Miss Davies, who attended Morgan Park Junior college, is a photographer's model. Mr. Goldberg attended the University of Illinois and now is a diamond merchant. They plan to be married this month. Following the ceremony they will leave for a honeymoon at Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies.

'CAMP GRANT IN REVIEW' POPULAR ON MUTUAL CHAIN

Feature Charles Victor on Soldier Show.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Charles Victor, W-G-N entertainer who joined the army after returning from Hollywood, where he made his first picture, is contributing to the weekly broadcasts of "Camp Grant in Review" over the Mutual Broadcasting system. Pvt. Victor is attached to Camp Grant's recruit reception center. Victor appears in "Sweet and Hot," starring Victor Mature and Lucille Ball.

Pvt. Charles Victor.

Camp Grant in Review, which features a variety of soldier entertainment, including musical and dramatic sketches, is broadcast at 1:30 p.m. every Wednesday over Mutual. WROK, Rockford, operating on a frequency of 1,440 kilocycles, is the nearest outlet, since W-G-N carries a local program at that hour. WROK can be heard thru sensitive and selective receivers in the metropolitan area.

Several men who as civilians were well known in radio circles appear on these reviews from time to time. Corp. Florian ZaBach, violinist, formerly of the W-G-N orchestra, is featured occasionally. Others are Corp. Bob Thomas, formerly of the Breakfast Club and Club Matinée troupes; Pvt. Doug Culver, swing pianist and vocalist; Pvt. Leonard Baylinson, Chicago novachord player.

Three of the camp musical organizations furnish the musical background, rotating in cycles of three weeks. They are the Medical Training Center band under the direction of Sergt. Fred M. Sargent, a onetime Chicagoan; the Recruit Reception Swing Cats, directed by Corp. Jack Koehne, and the Medical Training Center Dance orchestra, directed by Technical Sergt. John Wallace.

A recent Mutual network survey showed Camp Grant in Review listed as fourth in popularity among the sustaining [nonsponsored] programs on the chain. It was topped by America Loves a Melody, Letters to My Son, and A Date with Don Norman.

The camp program is under the supervision of Capt. A. E. Mealiff, public relations officer, and is produced by Corp. Martin Bouhan, who also does the announcing.

Gamma Alpha Tau Names Gertrude Salant President

Officers of Gamma Alpha Tau sorority who were recently elected at a meeting held in the home of Miss Bernice Bofman, 6927 Sangamon avenue, are: Miss Gertrude Salant, president; Miss Bernice Bofman, vice president; Miss Maxine Neiburg, secretary; Miss Edith Adler, treasurer, and Mrs. Dorothy Fishman, social chairman. Plans for several picnics and other events were made by the group.

MRS. C. S. McATEE, who has been a Red Cross volunteer since World War I., has been assisting with the organization of Red Cross first aid classes in the Avalon Park community. She also has been engaged in the drive to increase the number of nurses' aids. Mrs. McAtee resides at 8045 Kimbark avenue. Altho the community is one of the smallest in the city the success of this phase of its civilian defense program is indicated by as many as 380 participating in a single month. In addition to work with these classes Mrs. McAtee has been assisting with interviews of prospective WAAC candidates at the army recruiting office.

HERBERT LEE WARREN, 8047 Crandon avenue, has been awarded one of the Victoria Adams scholarships for 1942-'43 by the University of Chicago. Miss Adams, who died in May, 1941, made the university the beneficiary of an $81,500 fund to be used to enable Calumet High school graduates demonstrating special ability in history to continue their studies. In accord with the wishes of Miss Adams, a former teacher at the Calumet school, the university awarded the first scholarships on the basis of a competitive examination held this summer.

DEFENSE BLOCK FETE ADDS $13 TO ITS TREASURY

Members of block 7, zone 27, bounded by 78th and 79th streets and Ellis and Ingleside avenues, recently cleared $13 at a card party for the block treasury. The party was held in the St. Francis DePaula parish and more than 125 persons attended. Mrs. Myrtle Christian, 7828 Ellis avenue, was chairman of the prize committee. Others who assisted with the program were Mrs. Kathryn Joy, 7838 Ellis avenue; Mrs. Irene Veach, 7826 Ellis avenue; Miss Mary Alois, 7822 Ellis avenue, and Mrs. Edith House, 7838 Ellis avenue.

REMEMBER AUGUST 10, 1941?
On that day one of the worst heat waves in history swept the country. In Chicago, the temperature hit 98. Families swarmed to the beaches and air-conditioned theatres to get relief.
There's no need to suffer like that again. Your home can be as much as 15 degrees cooler in the Summer time if you insulate now with Gold Bond Rockwool—and you can save 30% of your fuel bill this Winter, too.

WAR TAKES STAFF OF SOUTH SIDE NEIGHBOR CLUB

Membership Doubles at Hyde Park Center.

BY CHARLES WRIGHT.

A group of 20 men and women, many of whom speak broken English, in a room at the head of the stairway learn how they may become citizens. Shouts of youngsters from the playground at the rear serve as a background for the activities.

J. C. Guinessy, club director, explained the organization worked on the theory of studying the needs of the community and meeting these needs wherever possible. Activities are planned on this basis in the recreational and educational fields. Since the war began the work of the club has almost doubled.

Give Consumer Information.

The club is the center of OCD activities for the surrounding blocks. Mr. Guinessy is block captain for the block in which the club is located, and more than a dozen first aid and nutrition classes have been held there. Meetings of various groups of civilian defense workers are held at the club. The Hyde Park community consumer information service, a branch of the OCD, has its headquarters at the club and holds weekly clinics on consumer problems.

Membership in citizenship classes held at the club has been doubled. The classes now have 80 students. Most of the persons who attend the classes are German, Guinessy said.

Staff Is Depleted.

In addition to increasing the amount of work the war has depleted its staff. When Mr. Guinessy came to the club as director in 1930 he was the only regular worker. Approximately 200 persons used the club at that time. Use of the club has increased to more than 1,100 persons, but because of the assimilation of manpower by the armed forces and war industries Guinessy is again almost alone in the work.

Not only has he lost both boys workers, one in military service and one in war industry, his gymnasium instructor, now a lieutenant in the army, but now the janitor also has departed, lured by war work. His duties have been added to the regular work of Mr. Guinessy and the three women on his staff. At times this has meant a 16 hour workday for Mr. Guinessy.

No Solution Found.

The director said so far a solution to the problem has not been found. Possible solutions are increasing the number of women on the staff and use of part time workers. He is unable to begin training young men workers as they will soon be called to military service.

Without a full regular staff, planning of the club's program will be impaired, Guinessy said. There is no shortage of volunteers to work with the groups. In the winter there are 40 students from the Chicago Teachers college who offer their services to lead group work. Other volunteers come from the University of Chicago.

"If I had been told a year ago we would have this staff shortage," he commented, "I would have said it would be impossible for us to continue. But now that we are face to face with the problem, we will find a way."

Used Empty Stores.

The organization, which is the only social agency in Hyde Park, started as a recreation club for children. Empty stores along 55th street were utilized by a group of women who decided to provide recreation for children in a community which at that time had no playground. It was incorporated in 1919 under the name of the Hyde Park Community league. The name was changed to the Hyde Park Neighborhood club in 1923 and until 1930 the empty stores were used.

In 1930 the United Church of Hyde Park gave the use of the present clubhouse. Seven years later the club gave the church building adjacent to the club which added an auditorium and game and clubrooms. Formerly the building was the University Congregational church. This church united with the Hyde Park Presbyterian church to form the United Church of Hyde Park.

All groups, ages, and classes can find a place at the club, which actually is a group of clubs. Individuals are organized into clubs according to interests and activities. No individual is told to join a specific club. The members themselves decide who will belong.

Offers Diversified Programs.

For the children there is a nursery school and groups in dancing, dramatics, stories, music, cooking, arts and crafts, library, gymnasium, play, and trips. For adults and young people there are groups for citizenship, gymnasium, cooking, language, gamerooms, workshop, social dancing, sewing and knitting, sculpture, and folk dancing.

The budget of the club, part of which is met by the Community fund, is approximately $12,000. Mr. Guinessy said there is a possibility that obtaining funds will be more difficult because of the war.

The club is governed by a board of 63 directors, many of whom represent organizations in the community. At present there is no chairman. Officers are: Mrs. William A. Thomas, vice chairman; Miss Susanne Fisher, recording secretary; Mrs. George E. Shambaugh Jr., corresponding secretary; Louis J. Harris, treasurer. The club staff now includes Mrs. Bonita Schousen, assistant director; Miss Rose Bilow and Miss Patricia Burke, girls workers.

Flickinger, reside in Homewood.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Aug. 10

Monday is yet time to sow more vegetables, such as beans, radishes, carrots, beets, and Chinese cabbage. Endive is quite hardy and not easily injured by early frost. It is tender and useful in a salad when blanched.

Blanching is a means whereby light is excluded from the center leaves which causes them to be tender and light in appearance. Simply tie up the leaves with rubber bands or twine. It takes from 10 to 20 days to be ready for use.

Tuesday, Aug. 11

Order pansy seed and sow immediately to obtain strong plants for next spring's planting. When the seedlings have made some growth they should be transplanted to a frame or permanent place in the flower garden or border. Buy only a high grade strain.

Make plans to build a new lawn this month and up to Sept. 15. By preparing the ground and sowing in fall the growth will be strong enough to withstand winter weather without injury. Some watering may be necessary because the young plants must have moisture to insure development.

Wednesday, Aug. 12

All gardeners should take good care of their equipment and especially rubber hose and spraying apparatus. Do not allowed hose to remain outdoors in full sun, but when thru using it coil it up and hang it on wall pegs to prevent pinching and subsequent leaking.

Keep the lawn mower in the best possible condition, well oiled, and keep the wheels from being clogged with grass. Roll up the garden line when not in use. Clean the hoe each time it is used and wipe with an oiled rag.

Thursday, Aug. 13

Do not pinch hardy chrysanthemums from this time on, but a good application of plant food will be beneficial and produce strong stems and abundant flower buds. Water plants in the morning to give them time to dry off before evening or mildew may attack them.

Do not cultivate vegetables too deep. The roots have had ample time to spread and many will be near the surface. These are feeding roots and should not be destroyed. It is not generally realized that trees require food to keep in good health.

Friday, Aug. 14

Food is applied at the drip or outermost branches of a tree because the feeding roots are located there. Take a 2 inch auger and bore holes about 18 inches deep at intervals of 2 feet or more and fill half way with the food and the other half with soil. Much of the food elements will soon be available.

It cannot be expected, however, that long neglected, stunted trees will ever regain their luxuriant appearance.

Saturday, Aug. 15

Madonna lily bulbs may be obtained soon and the earlier they are planted the better. Plant only 2 inches to the top of the bulb. If a considerable number are planted mulch with leafmold or peat. Old bulbs can be divided. Lift and divide the Virginia bluebells. If morning glories are cut when in bud they make fine early morning displays.

CUPID SLIGHTED BY MIDSHIPMEN AT ABBOTT HALL

The matrimonial trend of previous graduating classes at the naval reserve midshipmen's school, Abbott hall, has been reversed by the class graduated last week.

Only one of the Chicago area midshipmen was a principal in a marriage ceremony—Fred E. Hewitt Jr. of 7924 Essex avenue, who took as his bride Miss Jane Allen Bignell of 312 Sheridan road, Kenilworth, the day followingg the graduation exercises in Thorne hall.

There were two other south side residents included in the 16 from Chicagoland commissioned ensigns. They are Richard B. Wilson, 7741 Yates avenue, and John W. Young Jr., 1543 East 61st street.

CLAY TILE COMES TO THE FORE AS REPAIR MATERIAL

Not Needed for War, It's Durable and Beautiful.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

After thousands of years of use, genuine clay tile is more than ever to the fore. It has an age old reputation for enduring soundness and beauty, and it is not considered a critical war material.

If a bathroom or a kitchen in your home is in need of repair there is tile for your consideration. For some time color has played a leading part in our homes and we all know what can be accomplished with it, how it can counteract structural and architectural defects, overcome poor lighting and poorly planned exposures. Manufacturers of tile have been aware of these truths and have developed tiles to the point where color combinations are almost limitless.

One manufacturer of these clay tiles has gone to great care to enable prospective customers to see the possibilities of tile, and its harmonious color balanced combinations. Assembled and interchangeable panels of full sized tile are to be found in dealers' show rooms.

These closely approximate the appearance of a finished installation so that a home owner can experiment with endless color combinations and know with certainty that he has what he wants before he makes his final selection.

Many Patterns Available.

There's an interesting and comparatively new line of decorated tiles introduced into the tile family. Here very dainty and provocative patterns have been applied under the glaze so that the softness of the decoration cannot be marred or impaired.

A variety of all over effects is seen in this tile and each pattern is offered in 13 flower-tint color combinations. They all have the charm of the finest wall paper patterns.

In a dealer's showroom displaying these tiles you can see a certain pattern which is a copy of a delicate French wall paper, and available in 13 color combinations.

Rickrack and fluted patterns also adapt themselves to different type rooms, and under their glaze these lovely tracings are as easy to clean as china. This type tile can be grouped with plain tile to form unusual backgrounds of contrast and beauty.

Modern Mosaic Floors.

Ceramic mosaic floors can be very modern in treatment with design motifs instead of conventional all over repeat patterns. The same wide choice of color combinations is possible in floors as in walls, the colors balanced within themselves and with the wainscot.

Dealers are qualified and ready to give individual problems the study they need and to suggest smart variations of specially designed bands and insets, and all installations are guaranteed. And with floors, as with walls, you can see before you, thru the use of the interchangeable sections of full size tile panels, the floor as it will appear in your own home.

GROUP STUDIES PLAN TO BEAUTIFY SOUTH SIDE AREA

Representatives of the Flat Janitors union, No. 1, recently met with representatives of near south side improvement clubs, real estate men, and members of the Chicago Urban league to study plans for beautifying the area between 26th and 63d streets, Cottage Grove and Wentworth avenues.

The meeting was sponsored by the civic department of the Urban league. The union was represented by Davis Brown, business agent; Raymond A. Gibson, associate business agent, and A. E. Johnson, a retired janitor who has been named chairman of a subcommittee.

The South Central real estate board was represented by Alfred Wittert, president, and Melville Kolliner. Others who attended include Mrs. Elizabeth Ivy, president of the John R. Lynch model community council; Mrs. Lawrence Young, Woodlawn neighborhood improvement club, and A. L. Foster, executive secretary of the league.

Irwin Sippel Named Head of Fred Schweitzer Post

Attorney Irwin W. Sippel, recently was named commander of the Fred Schweitzer American Legion post. In World War I. he was a sergeant in the quartermaster corps. Others officers named are Merrill Collins, senior vice commander; Joseph Florek, junior vice commander; Frank Block, finance officer, and John Simpson, adjutant.

TEN GIRLS FIND A CABBY'S LIFE HAS EXCITEMENT

They Fill Hammond Jobs Successfully.

Ten girl cab drivers in Hammond, after a month's trial at their job, have decided that it is not only a good job for a woman, but a decidedly exciting life. Then, too, T. S. Gallagher, head of the Yellow Cab system in Hammond, pronounced the first month a "victory" for women drivers. None of the 10 had any accidents, no complaints were received on poor service, and nobody refused to set foot in a woman driven cab.

"What I get a kick out of," said ex-waitress Ruth Tuck, 26, clad in a bright red silk blouse and a white yachting cap as are the others, "are the women who at first don't notice us, then say, 'Oooh, a girl cab driver!' The first thing they always ask is, 'Tell me, driver, do you have much trouble with forward males?'"

Perhaps one of the rather difficult situations that have arisen from the innovation of feminine cabbies is the ancient task of bringing home the husband who has overdone an evening's celebration. Usually the driver is called upon to help the somewhat subdued passenger to the door, and to collect the fare from whoever answers the door.

An Unwelcome Duty.

"We perform this luckily rather rare duty with some reluctance," explained 22 year old Velma Bonnett, who has been driving for Yellow cab since June 1. "You can imagine a wife opening the door at 3 o'clock in the morning to find some strange woman at the door with her husband! Even after we explain, they are still a little suspicious, and we are happy to collect the cab fare and escape."

The "cabbies" have been averaging better than male drivers did in tips, tho they explain this may be a novelty and later may fall back to normal. Generally, they are earning more than they did at previous positions. Miss Tuck has been putting all of her tip money into war stamps, and living from her salary.

More Attention Out of Town.

"When we get an out-of-town call, we usually attract a lot of attention," the girls say, "but here in Hammond the people have grown accustomed to girl cab drivers, and no longer consider it unusual."

Not all of the young women driving cabs are single. Mrs. Altha Deering, 25, is the mother of two children—a boy 5 years old, and a girl 6 years old. The children stay with Mrs. Deering's sister while she is driving. Her husband is employed by Carnegie-Illinois Steel company. According to Mrs. Deering, her husband approves of her job except that he thinks it a bit risky for a young woman.

Eject Too Friendly Fares.

This thought is borne out by a recent experience Mrs. Deering had. Two men hailed the cab and asked to be driven to a nearby tavern. Once there, they decided they would like to go somewhere else. When one of them began to lean over the front seat in an all too friendly manner, Mrs. Deering shot her cab over into the town square, where, with the aid of a passer-by, she bodily ejected the would-be Romeos.

44 SOUTH SIDERS ATTENDING YWCA CAMP SESSIONS

Thirty-two south side girls are enjoying the third camp season, which began Aug. 2 at Camp Sagawau, YWCA camp for high school girls, which is located near Lemont. Among the girls who are spending a vacation of horseback riding, swimming, and craft training, are:

At the YWCA Forest Beach camp for young business women, 12 south side girls are attending camp. At the resort, which is located near New Buffalo, Mich, are:

DEDICATE CAMP TODAY IN HONOR OF G. R. ARTHUR

Camp George R. Arthur, Dowagiac, Mich., operated by the Wabash avenue YMCA, will be formally dedicated today. The camp has been in existence since 1925 as Camp Wabash.

This year the board of directors of the YMCA voted to change the name to honor the late George R. Arthur, who was at one time executive secretary at the Wabash department. Mr. Arthur was one of the leaders in establishing the camp and getting equipment for it. As a result of his efforts more than 600 boys and girls from the near south side annually get camp vacations. The camp is 160 miles from the Y building.

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, senior secretary of the colored men's department, National YMCA council, will be guest speaker. Another speaker will be W. J. Parker, former general secretary of the Wabash department, and now director of the YMCA endowment fund. City officials' of Benton Harbor, 14 miles distant, are expected to be present.

Navy Wedding

LIEUT. AND MRS. ROVNER.

Miss Sheline June Fox, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. E. Fox of 7416 Yates avenue, recently became the bride of Lieut. Millard J. Rovner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack W. Rovner of 7314 Kingston avenue. Lieut. Rovner, who was in the first graduating class of naval ensigns at Abbott hall, two years ago, saw service in the Philippine Islands. He attended Northwestern university and his bride attended George Williams college. They are making their home in Miami, Fla., where he is stationed.

FEW FIRST AID MANUALS WILL STAND WAR TEST

Professor Says Many Subjects Useless.

First aid methods have been entirely changed after two years of war, according to Dr. David Slight, professor of psychiatry at the University of Chicago. First aid courses now inclue many nonessential items and exclude many practices indispensable in any emergency, he said.

Dr. Slight illustrated his points with examples from Britain's experience with air raid casualties. According to these reports, he said, of all the subjects contained in first aid manuals only a few have survived the test of actual practice in air raids. He spoke recently at one of a series of lecture sessions on civilian defense, sponsored by the University of Chicago institute of public service.

Vital problems of the civilian first aid worker include proper usage of soap and water, razor, clippers, and scissors. One of the more important tasks of the first aid worker is the proper cleaning of wounds.

Cleansing Important.

"It has been Britain's experience," he said, "that an ever-present problem is that of cleaning the patients who have dirt, dust, and soot ground into them by the force of explosion or by falling buildings. This must be done before first aid can be administered. British doctors have estimated that cleansing of patients takes fully as much of their time as the actual operation."

"One of the subjects included in the first aid manuals which actually has proved extremely important is how to stop bleeding. Another is treatment of surgical shock," he said.

"As a matter of fact," Dr. Slight continued, "if less extraneous material has been included, shock would have been noticed more certainly and fewer shock patients would have been bundled into ambulances to die on their way to hospitals without a wound or injury on their bodies.

Overprepared for Neurosis.

"Many others were killed as first aid workers ran about on brick piles under which injured persons were buried. Also learning that care in ambulance driving is more vital than speed cost the lives of others, and more persons died because of an inadequate ambulance supply brought about because ambulances were used to carry persons with broken arms or minor injuries," he added.

"The British found themselves overprepared for neurosis—they had hospital beds to spare for neurotic patients," Dr. Slight asserted, but they were unprepared for social casualties—persons who simply were confused and who could not be trusted to go to a rest center when directed. Probably Americans will have to learn many of these things the hard way, just as the British did. Certainly our first aid handbooks contain just as much useless material.

"In England well prepared first aid workers—at least as far as learning their manuals were concerned—found themselves completely unable to deal with a badly injured man lying before them. He had something wrong with him that wasn't in the book," Dr. Slight commented.

The program for training nurses' aides, who are important cogs in medical defense machinery, is proceeding slowly in this country, he asserted. He added that the national quota of 100,000, even after strenuous campaigning, has fallen short of that mark by almost 75,000.

Lifesaving Classes.

Classes in lifesaving now are being conducted Mondays and Fridays at Trumbull park at 4:30 o'clock. Those who successfully complete the course will be awarded Red Cross certificates.

"Don't be Silly!"

That's the short of it—when you make the want ad columns in the Tribune your apartment guide. Then you are not likely to overlook any worthwhile value because the Tribune prints more Apartments to Rent want advertising than any other Chicago newspaper. You save time and energy which you otherwise would waste when you look thru buildings in which the apartments could not possibly appeal to you. To save time, energy, and make a happy choice, use the Tribune as your apartment guide.

"We're delighted with our new house!"

"John says he never expected to find such a big value."

The larger the market, the easier it is to find the best value in real estate. If you are thinking of buying a home, make the Real Estate columns in the Tribune want ad section your guide. Then you will be sure to learn about the bulk of the worthwhile values because the Tribune prints more real estate want advertising than any other Chicago newspaper. Begin today to look for your new home among the offers in the want ad section.

"Come along and see!"

"You'll be surprised how we've fixed our house!"

That's what hundreds of satisfied home owners say about their remodeling jobs using materials and equipment purchased from advertisers in the Tribune want ad section. To find outstanding values in lumber, glass, millwork, plumbing and heating equipment and other home remodeling needs, consult the Building Materials column. Watch these offerings in the Tribune want ad section.

"I can hardly believe it's washday!"

"Housework is so much easier when you have modern appliances."

Do you have the household appliances which make your work easy and give you more time for recreation? For bargains in new and used washers, ironers, vacuum cleaners, gas stoves, electric stoves, stokers, oil burners and other home appliances, follow the Household Appliances and Home Furnishings and Furniture columns in the Tribune want ad section.

For the music in little fingers

Are you developing the musical talents of your children? Authorities say it is a good idea to make an early start. To find an instrument which will inspire your child's interest, consult the Musical Instruments column in the want ad section. There you will find used pianos, accordions, violins, and many others offered at prices and on terms which will make this investment in your child's future easy to contemplate. Review the Musical Instruments column today.

SOUTH SIDERS BOOST BIG MUSIC FETE

PLAN TO SPEED VOTERS' SIGNING IN WILL COUNTY

Registration Now to Avoid Confusion.

Will county has joined in the general downstate movement to sign up voters immediately under the new permanent registration act to avoid confusion on the Nov. 3 election day, it was announced by Joseph Hartley, Will county clerk.

Hartley said he plans to confer with party leaders in the county with a view to holding special registration drives in some of the heavier Will county precincts. If this is not done it will be virtually impossible for existing staffs to handle the registration rush, Hartley declared.

The new act, which extends permanent registration thruout the state, provides for two general registration days, Sept. 19 and Oct. 6, when all regular precinct polling places will be open for the registration of voters. Meanwhile, voters can register by appearing in person at their county clerks' offices.

Nonregistrant Can Vote Once.

By the terms of the new act, a nonregistered voter can vote at one election, but the procedure is so complicated that it will put both the polls officials and the voter himself to considerable inconvenience, Hartley said.

"Either we must put on a special campaign to get people to sign early, or we'll be hopelessly swamped," he said.

"We have an estimated 75,000 potential voters in Will county, or an average of more than 750 to a precinct. On our general registration days there will be three persons on duty in each precinct. If these three persons were to work at top speed all the time, in a 10 hour day they would register about 85 persons each, or a total of 255. That does not take into account delays from answering questions and other causes.

Can Handle Only Two-thirds.

"This would mean that our registrars in the two general days allotted could sign up only about two-thirds of our voters. The other third would have to register separately or face annoying delays election day.

"Inasmuch as our voters have been registering at my office at the rate of only about 300 a week, we're headed inevitably for confusion or worse unless we hold special registration drives."

Hartley said that 18 of Will county's 98 precincts have more than 800 voters each. One has more than 1,200 and another more than 1,000. Each under the law will have only three registrars, however. Inasmuch as the proportion of foreign born families in these precincts is high, the work of registration will be greatly involved by the proving of citizenship, he pointed out.

Eligibility for Voting.

Any person 21 years old or more who is a citizen, and who has resided one year in the state, 90 days in the county and 30 days in the precinct is eligible to register.

Appearing before a registrar [the county clerk or one of his deputies] the voter is required to state his name, address, term of residence, country of birth, citizenship, and age. If he is a naturalized citizen he must tell the court, the place and the date of his naturalization. Then he must sign his name or affix his mark.

On election days he is required to sign his name or make his mark in order to obtain a ballot, and his signature must agree with that on his registration card. The registration is effective without further attention unless the voter changes his name or residence, whereupon he must notify the county clerk of such altered status to retain his voting right.

Service Men May Vote.

Will county men or women in military or naval service can vote by absentee ballot without registering, Hartley said, and they are not required to register until 30 days after their discharge.

To obtain an absentee ballot the voter writes his county clerk for a ballot application. When he returns this properly executed, the voter receives from the clerk an official ballot, which must be returned to the clerk in time for delivery to the voter's regular polling place before the polls close on election day.

Permanent registration has been in effect for several years in Cook county and in the nine downstate cities that have election boards — Aurora, Bloomington, Cairo, Danville, East St. Louis, Galesburg, Peoria, Rockford and Springfield.

In Cook county nine suburbs are under the jurisdiction of the Chicago election board. They are the cities of Chicago Heights, Berwyn and Harvey, the town of Cicero, and the villages of Summit, Stickney, Morton Grove, Elmwood Park and Skokie. All other places in the county are under the jurisdiction of the county clerk.

Novena at St. Gabriel's to Close Friday Night

The 58th annual novena commemorating the Catholic Feast of the Assumption is being held at St. Gabriel's church, 45th street and Lowe avenue. It will end Friday. This novena is said to be the oldest in the city. Services are being held daily at 5 and 7:30 o'clock in the evening. The Rev. H. S. Trainor, pastor, is sponsor. The Rev. James A. Hyland is conducting the services.

Picnics Popular as Chicago Vacationists Avoid Long Trips to Save Tires

The Chicago family that usually goes to Yellowstone park or visits Boston to show the children the old North church is staying home this year—and liking it! Typical defense worker is Henry Loichinger, 328 West 102d place, whose 20 years with Illinois Bell Telephone company has never found him as busy as he is this year rushing switchboard installations. When vacation time came this week, the Loichingers, after a rueful look at their tires, decided to stay home, read books, have picnics.

Here the Loichingers, father, mother, 9 year old Carol, 3 year old Brandt, and dark haired Joyce Johnson (left), 10 year old daughter of a neighbor, Elmer Johnson, 10205 Princeton avenue, go thru the well loved routine of that typically American institution—a picnic. Dad carries the lunch (hot dogs and buns), mother has the lemonade, Brandt the ever present camera, while Joyce and Carol have their dolls. Carol recently purchased her doll, Gail, from Joyce for a nickel and had the doll's broken arm repaired by her dad as part of his vacation activities.

Site of the picnic is a YMCA cabin in the Palos Hills forest preserve. This cabin is one of several erected in the area by YMCAs. The one visited by the Loichingers is called the 111 Ranchhouse and was built this spring by the 111th street branch of the YMCA and the Roseland Lions club. Both Mr. and Mrs. Loichinger are on the cabin committee. The log building has cement floors, two fireplaces, and bunks to take care of 12 people overnight.

Here the women of the family get ready to broil the meat for the sandwiches over a cherry-red heap of coals in the fireplace. Mrs. Loichinger shares her husband's reading. A major portion of the vacation will be used to catch up on some of the best sellers that the Loichingers missed last winter. They have just finished Maj. Seversky's "Victory Through Airpower," are now engrossed in "Young Man of Caracas," and have "Dragon Seed" laid by for an alternative or supplement.

BY JEANNE McCARTHY.

When the Lemont Knights of Columbus donated a vacant store in their building for the use of the village's rationing board, Walter Bush, the ration chairman, hustled around to get some furniture. He borrowed a desk from the village hall. That was easy. Bush is the village's commissioner of public works. He got a typewriter from the Lemont Township High school. That was easy, too, because Bush is president of the high school board. The Knights of Columbus came thru with the chairs. Bush is an active member of the council.

Before the Knights of Columbus donated their vacant store, the ration board operated in the First National bank of Lemont. Bush is vice president and cashier. It made the bank pretty congested. "It looked like we had a picket line," Bush said.

Not Enough Tires.

He and his board are having quite a time with the tire situation. "We've got twice as many bona fide applications as we have tires," he said. "I don't know what we're going to do." He thinks, tho, that he'll go see about getting Lemont's quota increased. For July, the board was able to issue certificates for 14 recaps and two new tires.

Bush pointed out that Lemont villagers work at the Elwood Ordnance plant, and other defense plants scattered far from the village.

"Irene Virtel, who works at the Elwood plant," Bush recalled, "got three flat tires in Lockport one night on her way home from work. She had three other Elwood workers with her. Her brother had to go tow her home." The Lemont village police have had their troubles, too. One of the two police cars—until it received new ones piecemeal—was operating on tires stuffed with old pieces of rubber boot.

Peaches Take Sugar.

Miss Catherine Ray, a civil service employé, is clerk at the ration office at 310 Canal street. She registered a total of 4,280 persons for sugar. There's not much of a sugar problem in the township, because most of the housewives were given the allotments they applied for during the cherry and strawberry canning season. Bush says he doesn't know how they'll work it when they start applying for sugar to can peaches. There's a tremendous amount of peaches canned each year in Lemont.

Also on the ration board are Peter W. Dean, a bond and insurance salesman who is a trustee of the township high school, and Peter A. Mirkes. Mirkes is a Lemont merchant, and formerly a supervisor of the township. They were named to the board by Lemont's civilian defense coordinator, E. R. Tessem, the village clerk.

Picture of a Busy Many.

Bush is a young, blond man, very civic and very occupied. He describes himself as being as busy as a "hen in a griddle." His sister-in-law, Mrs. George Ed Walker, spent a few days at his home one week and left with the observation that trying to sleep there was like trying to sleep in the village hall around noon. The village hall is a busy place, usually, around noon. It was one noon, anyway, when Mrs. Walker was there.

Besides being occupied with the bank, the school, the commissioning of public works, and the ration board, Bush is chairman of the Back Our Boys organization, a unit which has attracted nation-wide attention for its organized efforts in behalf of Lemont's warriors. He also has a public address system with three complete units, which takes up a little more time.

BLOCK TO UNVEIL SERVICE PLAQUE IN TUESDAY RITE

Block 2 in civilian defense zone 4 will dedicate a service plaque and raise its new flag at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening at 1913 West 59th street. Block 2 is bounded by 59th and 60th streets, and Sangamon and Peoria streets. Irving Wilson, zone captain, will be the master of ceremonies. The block's captain is Mrs. R. E. Thurston. Sixteen of the boys in the block are now in the country's service. A brief program, participated in by block residents, will precede the flag raising. The flag was purchased with funds contributed by block residents. The plaque was made by Anton Beato.

PICK 4 STUDENTS TO BENEFIT BY TEACHER'S WILL

Four June graduates of Calumet high school will enter the University of Chicago this autumn on scholarships provided by the estate of Miss Victoria Anna Adams, a former teacher at Calumet. Miss Adams died in May, 1941, in a Washington, D. C., hospital at the age of 80.

The terms of her gift provided that the fund be used for scholarships to Calumet high graduates demonstrating proficiency in history. Probate of the estate has been completed, and the university has received $81,500, subject to certain annuities.

The first scholarships were awarded on the basis of competetive scholarships held this summer. Twenty Calumet high school graduates competed. The winners were James B. Inskeep, 7419 Perry avenue; Shirlee Jane Lowry, 8037 Sangamon street; Patricia M. Prindiville, 8219 Emerald avenue, and Herbert Lee Warren, 8047 Crandon avenue. Inskeep, who ranked highest in the examination, received an additional $100 cash award, as directed by Miss Adams' will.

Miss Adams was born in Brookfield, Mass., March 26, 1861. She was the daughter of Henry Harrison Adams, a descendant of the Henry Adams whose family gave the United States two presidents.

RIDGE ROAD PAVING IN HOMEWOOD WILL BE DEDICATED ON AUG. 20

The village of Homewood will dedicate its newly paved and widened Ridge road in a ceremony at 7:45 o'clock Thursday evening, Aug. 20. The village waged a three year fight for the project, which increases the road between Halsted street and the Dixie highway from a two lane to a four lane highway. The improvement, which extends a mile and a half, was made by the county. The Chatham Construction company was awarded the contract on a bid of $122,594.98, and work was begun last May 22.

The dedicatory program is being sponsored by the village and the Homewood Business association. The board of trustees is headed by Mayor Fred Borgwardt. Members are Paul Cooke, George Moecker, Edward O'Brien, Joe Rapp, David Frazier, and Elmer Norlander. John C. Kurtz heads the business association.

A parade down the newly paved thorofare will start festivities. Village associations, the Homewood community band, the village and county police, the town's fire department and auxiliaries will participate.

A concert will be given by the Homewood band, and motion pictures of the town's July 4 homecoming will be shown.

Communities' Staffs Prepare for Black-Out

Community commanders and their staffs have been asked to familiarize themselves with the contents of the recently issued manual for practice black-out covering the test for Wednesday night when it will be the goal of the Office of Civilian Defense, Chicago metropolitan area, to darken the landscape as deeply, between 10 and 10:30 p. m., as it was before the first settler lit his cabin lamp.

Offices of the division chiefs will be in operation during the first area black-out in the middle west and will act as a clearing house for instructions to and questions from community commanders. Reports immediately after the all-clear signal has sounded shall include ground observation from each block and reports of any accidents.

Community commanders have been instructed to be on duty to see that zone captains and block captains are properly instructed and prepared for the test. The community office will act as a clearing house for all questions that occur in the community, except such occurrences as require action by the central control.

Zone Captains' Duties.

Zone captains are instructed that it shall be their duty to see that all block captains under their jurisdiction understand instructions before the black-out occurs, and that they are completely staffed and ready for the test. Zone captains shall see that all orders are transmitted to zone organizations and shall supervise the operations of block organizations to the extent necessary to see that they are functioning.

Each block captain [or senior air warden as he is called in the suburban areas] will be responsible for all Civilian Defense activities within the territory assigned to him.

It shall be the duty of the captain or warden to so station his staff as to control the public in the observation of the rules and regulations enforced during the test period, and to make report of ground observations and accidents, if any occur. If violations are observed his organization is advised to make corrections where possible and obtain the coöperation of the public.

No Forcible Compliance.

If violations of the rules occur, the OCD is not to attempt a forcible compliance, but report the matter to the central room for action by the proper local enforcement officers. They are to resort to calls to the central room only when diplomacy and persuasion have failed.

Block captains are advised to use discretion to avoid any unnecessary interference with the movement of vehicles which are, in fact, on emergency operations under the rules. Also, they are directed to the fact that during a test black-out an opportunity may exist for sabotage or other subversive or unlawful action.

Householders are instructed to turn out all exterior and interior lights. Interior lights may be used when properly obscured from the outside. Lights must be checked in such places as basements, porches, attics, garages, barns, and other structures, as well as automobiles parked on the premises. Home owners who find it necessary to be away from home on the night of the practice must extinguish all lights before leaving.

People to Stay Indoors.

Persons in their homes are instructed to remain indoors until the all-clear signal is sounded, not to use the telephone unless absolutely necessary for emergency purposes, and to keep all dogs, cats, and other pets indoors.

The management or operators of hotels, apartment buildings, and rooming houses are instructed to notify all tenants so that they may be cognizant of the test and turn out all lights visible from the outside. Fire escape lights must be properly shielded.

Cemeteries to Be Dark.

In cemeteries, all lights must be extinguished. All exterior or interior lights in lodge and meeting halls which may be visible from the outside must be extinguished or properly shielded.

All street and highway lighting must be extinguished. This includes all business and residential districts, as well as parks, beaches, playgrounds, and athletic fields.

All industries, except as provided for, shall participate in the black-out and shall extinguish all lights visible from the outside. The only exceptions are in the cases where vital industries have been instructed by proper military authorities to continue production, but at the same time, participate in the black-out to the utmost of their ability. Emergency lights must be properly shielded.

NO STOP TO PRODUCTION

Industrial plants southwest of Chicago will black-out wherever it can be done without interfering with production or creating safety hazards. All plants have been directed to conform so far as possible. In Joliet, this would include the Carnegie Illinois Steel corporation's coke ovens, where coal is coked for the blast furnaces of South Chicago and Gary, the American Steel and Wire, and other of the area's big plants. It would include, too, army spokesmen said, the vast Elwood ordnance plant.

Drexel Park Lecture.

The Rev. Clinton C. Cox, pastor of Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue, will lecture on "Man's Extremity Is God's Opportunity" at 8 o'clock this evening at the church. Music will be provided by the senior choir and special soloists.

MILITARY UNITS TO STIR CROWD NEXT SATURDAY

Several thousand south and southwest siders will take part in the 13th annual Chicago Music Festival in Soldiers' field next Saturday. Sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., the Festival is being dedicated this year to the armed forces and will be one of the greatest musical military shows ever attempted. Profits of the Festival will be turned over to army and navy relief.

More than 10,000 are expected to take part in the Festival. A thousand of these participants will be young girl dancers, many of whom will come from south and southwest side homes. They will take part in the dance pageant which is an outstanding feature of the Festival. Many more south and southwest siders will take part in the civilian defense exhibition to be given by the Commonwealth Edison company. Members of the Wheelmen of America will give a timely note to the grand entrance parade at 7 o'clock.

Wear Patriotic Garb.

Wearing red, white and blue ballet costumes, the dancers will enter the field in formations representing airplanes. Their dance routines will represent the spirit of youth. Attached to each girl's shoulders will be a knapsack from which, at the end of the dance, there will be unfurled a part of the American flag, resulting in a huge flag covering the entire field.

By a trick device this flag will suddenly disappear and the dancers will make their exit. As they leave the field they will cover their heads with blue-green scarfs and will hold seagull wings, attached to their wrists, above the scarfs, thus creating an effect of seagulls flying over rippling water.

The dancers come from the Ideal Dancing institute and the summer schools of the Young Men's Christian association. They are under the direction of Miss Mayblossom Macdonald, a dancing instructor and artistic director of the pageant, and Miss Wilhelmina Aveling, assistant program director of the YMCA schools. Assisting on the south and southwest side are Winifred Colton, Englewood YMCA; Gladys Larson, 111th street; Dorothy Ann Kidd, Hyde Park; Elizabeth Pulley and Oletha White, Wabash; Virginia Guy and Mrs. W. J. Farwell, South Chicago avenue.

Weber to Direct Orchestra.

The dancers will be accompanied by the Festival orchestra which will be directed by Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N.

One of the most spectacular features of the Festival will be the presentation of the 60 men of the Carnegie-Illinois chorus and the 85 men of the Carillco Concert band. All are employed by the Gary works of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation which includes the world's largest steel plant and the world's largest sheet and tin mill.

These two bodies of men will personify for the expected audience of 85,000 the march of wartime production. A segment of Gary's night sky showing the columns of brilliant flame geysers as they roar from the large Bessemer converter furnaces and the open hearth furnaces will be reproduced as a backdrop for the "Men of Steel" singers and instrumentalists on the vast stage at the north end of the field. The steel mill has purchased 500 seats for their employés to attend the festival.

Negro Chorus to Sing.

More than 1,000 will take part in the Festival Negro chorus. They will march in during the grand entrance parade and will sing "The Old Flag Never Touched the Ground." There will be a final rehearsal for the chorus at 8 o'clock Thursday night in the Metropolitan Community church at 41st street and South Park way.

The festival will be preceded by a luncheon Friday noon in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House. This will be the sixth annual festival luncheon and the honor guests will be Dr. Rudolph Ganz, pianist and composer, and Mara Kurenko, Russian lyric soprano.

All seats to the luncheon in the ballroom have been sold but there are still available tickets for the foyer. Those sitting in the foyer will go into the ballroom after the luncheon to hear the program. Luncheon tickets are $1.75 and may be purchased from the festival headquarters on the fourth floor of the Tribune Tower.

Maxwell to Be Toastmaster.

Philip Maxwell, director of the festival, will be toastmaster at both the luncheon and Saturday night's event. Reserved festival tickets are 55c and $1.10. Wednesday is the deadline for obtaining them by mail but they may be purchased at any time in the Tribune public service offices either in the Tribune Tower or at 1 South Dearborn street.

Events leading up to the grand finale Saturday night include several preliminary contests. The first of these this week will be a contest for instrumentalists at 7 o'clock Tuesday

304 NEW TIRES ARE GRANTED TO SOUTHWEST SIDE

Acme Truck Rentals Get 46 Truck Casings.

Tire rationing boards during the week ending July 31 allotted 304 tires and 264 tubes to 126 southwest side individuals and firms. Forty-six motorists got permission to buy 56 tires and 66 tubes for passenger cars, while 80 others were granted 248 truck tires and 198 tubes.

Southwest siders sharing in the week's tire rationing were:

First Aid Course.

An advanced course in first aid, now in progress at Fellowship house, 831 West 33d place, is being conducted by Miss Susan Mack, assistant training director of civilian defense division 3.

Blocks Dedicate War Memorials

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The residents of the block bounded by 77th and 78th streets, and Peoria and Green streets, dedicated four flag poles and honor rolls, one at each of the block's four corners. Four ceremonies were held. Seventeen mothers of men in service from the block and 17 service men, recruited from service centers to represent the absent sons, participated in the program. Michael J. O'Reilly, block captain, was in charge.

OUR TOWN

TWO brothers from an Argo family were married recently in a double wedding ceremony. They are Peter and George Metskas, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Metskas, 6305 Archer road. Peter, who is a service man, married Miss Sophie Pappas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Pappas, 914 Oakley boulevard. George and his bride, Della Belluci, 6539 27th street, Berwyn, left after the wedding party for a two week honeymoon in Canada.

A reception and dinner were held after the wedding for 350 guests at the Graemere hotel. Peter Metskas attended Argo Community High school, while George attended the University of Chicago after finishing the Argo school. Mrs. Peter Metskas was a student at De Paul business college, and Mrs. George Metskas studied at Morton Junior college.

Miss Nonie Heffernan, 6311 Lakewood avenue, has been appointed assistant Red Cross field director at the Jefferson Barracks Station hospital, attached to the army air force training school near Lincoln, Neb., it has been announced by the American Red Cross headquarters at St. Louis. Miss Heffernan, a graduate of Loyola university and a former Chicago social worker, joined the Red Cross staff last February, and has been stationed at Jefferson Barracks since then.

HERBERT LEE WARREN, 8047 Crandon avenue, has been awarded one of the Victoria Adams scholarships for 1942-'43 by the University of Chicago. Miss Adams, who died in May, 1941, made the university the beneficiary of an $81,500 fund to be used to enable Calumet High school graduates demonstrating special ability in history to continue their studies. In accord with the wishes of Miss Adams, a former teacher at the Calumet school, the university awarded the first scholarships on the basis of a competitive examination held this summer.

ORPHANS' HOME IN JOLIET PLANS GOLDEN JUBILEE

Lutheran Institution Will Have Program Today.

Fifty years ago today a small band of Lutheran ministers and laymen gathered on Rowell street, at the southeastern end of Joliet, and laid with ceremony the corner stone for a Lutheran orphanage. Today, the children's home is celebrating its 50th anniversary. It's marking the event with a program at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Joliet's mayor, George T. Jones, will speak. So will Dr. C. O. Bengtson, pastor of the Immanuel Lutheran church of Chicago and vice president of the Illinois Augustana Lutheran conference, and the Rev. Fred Andree, pastor of Bethlehem Lutheran church of Joliet. The Rev. Mr. Andree will give a history of the home.

The home is controled by the board of charities of the Illinois conference of the Augustana Lutheran synod. It serves needy Protestant children in the Will, Kane and Cook county areas. During its 50 years, between 1,500 and 2,000 children have been cared for. Some have lived there only a few months while others have remained more than 17 years. There are now 64 children there, most of them from broken homes.

Attend Joliet Schools.

The children attend the Joliet public schools, and attend church services and Sunday school at the Rev. Mr. Andree's Bethlehem church. The orphanage owns a bus, which transports them to school and church. Last year, 16 children from the Lutheran home attended the Joliet High school, and two were graduated. One boy was graduated from the Joliet Junior college. He is now in the marines, stationed at the base in San Diego, Cal.

Frequently the home permits boys and girls with special interests in studies to continue at the junior college. The home's records show that 23 boys who formerly resided there are now in the country's armed forces.

The four story building is built of limestone, quarried in Joliet. It is surrounded by grounds and gardens, and has a tennis court. In October, the home will launch a drive for $40,000 to build an addition. This will provide an isolation ward and gymnasium after the war.

Former Residents Invited.

Invitations to attend the homecoming have been sent to former residents of the home, now scattered thruout the United States, and to friends. There will be music on the program, provided by the choir of the Bethlehem church. The Orphans' Aid society of the church will serve refreshments after the program.

Dr. J. E. Rydback, a Lutheran minister for 49 years, is superintendent of the home. He has been assigned there for the last seven years. Previously, he was assistant at Messiah Lutheran church, Chicago, where his son, the Rev. Theodore Rydback, is pastor. Miss Alfhild Rydbeck is matron of the home. Another Lutheran home for children, in Andover, McHenry county, will celebrate an anniversary next month. It will be 75 years old.

SUPPLY RECORD DEVICE TO SEND FIGHTERS WORD

The 14th ward Democratic organization has established a recording device in its headquarters at 4713 South Halsted street, where persons may record a message to be sent to men in the service. It is operating under the direction of Ald. James J. McDermott [14th] and Judge John J. Sullivan of the Superior court. No charge is made for the service.

Bake Bread at Flossmoor Street Fair

Flossmoor villagers and friends who turned out last night for the town's street fair were fed ham and bread baked in this mobile field baker. It is owned and was developed by Mark C. Bates of Flossmoor. The result of the baker's operations were passed on by Chef Duke Wallingford, above. The fair was held to raise funds to convert a 1934 Cadillac into an ambulance. The Flossmoor Red Cross working unit and other groups sponsored the affair. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

Thaddeus Gorny, 5526 South Wood street, a corporal in the armed forces, is stationed at an army camp at Bremerton, Wash., not far from Seattle. He has been in the service a year and a half, and prior to that was a predental student at the Illinois Institute of Technology. His parents are Dr. and Mrs. Stephen S. Gorny. He was surprised recently by a visit from his mother.

Corp. Thaddeus Gorny.

Dr. Frank W. Fenzel, a dentist at 7401 South Halsted street, has been commissioned a major in the army. He reported for duty last week at Camp Grant. During World War I. he served overseas for 18 months with the 2d division. His home is in Midlothian, where his family will remain for the summer.

Thomas A. Powers, 6150 South Kolmar avenue, was promoted recently from private first class to corporal. Until he was inducted into the army, he was employed as a clerk by the Grand Trunk railroad.

Pvt. Joseph J. Mlynarski, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Mlynarski, 5247 South Carpenter street, recently began the airplane mechanics course at the army air base, Lincoln, Neb. With its completion, he will be rated an airplane mechanic and will be assigned to a permanent air force squadron for active duty.

Three young men from southwest Chicago enlisted recently for flight training as aviation cadets with the navy air force. They are Joseph Keller, 2120 South Millard avenue, a graduate of Crane Technical school; Charles Pribyl, 2528 South Millard avenue, a Farragut alumnus, and Joseph McElvogue, 3307 West 59th place, a graduate of Lindblom High school.

Leland L. Eckart, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Eckart, 3859 South Springfield avenue, recently was graduated from the United States naval air station at Corpus Christi, Tex., where he was given his navy wings.

22 IN 4-F DRAFT CLASS INDUCTED INTO WAR JOBS

The nation's first 4-F draft registrants to be utilized by the armed forces completed training recently at the Illinois Institute of Technology. Twenty-two of the men whom physicians classified as "unfit for military service" are now naval ordnance inspectors for the 9th naval district. Four of these men are southwest side residents.

They received diplomas in one of the Illinois Tech's largest war training graduation exercises. A total of 253 men were graduated. Besides the naval ordnance inspectors, 158 enlisted men and officers of the signal corps and 73 army ordnance inspectors of the Chicago ordnance district received diplomas.

The southwest siders who are now ordnance inspectors took a ten week intensive course. During their study and now, they are employés of the Chicago ordnance district and paid under civil service regulations.

The four southwest residents finishing the naval ordnance inspection course are Leno Furlan, 2943 South Wells street; Gilbert Mishkin, 1317 South Springfield avenue; Herbert Peterson, 7025 Justine street, and Fred Jarosz, 2955 South Loomis street.

EXPECT OLD TIME PIANO MAKERS AT STEGER REUNION

Parade Today Features Homecoming.

Many of Steger's old timers will come home today as the village in Cook and Will counties holds its fourth annual homecoming. The program will begin with a parade at 2 o'clock this afternoon, thru the business district. The American Legion band, units, and Steger musical groups will participate. Visitors will be welcomed by Paul Priebe, president of the Firemen's association, and Eugene Smith, president of the village council.

Between 4:30 and 7:30 o'clock, a musical program, including dancing and singing, will be staged. A band concert and vaudeville acts will be given between 7 and 11:30 o'clock tonight. Among the entertainers will be Edward Wieks, Dorothy Ratkowski, Bille and Bonnie Roe, and the Joliet Jug band.

Affair Jointly Sponsored.

The homecoming is sponsored by the fire department, village council, and business men of the community. The village is located at a point 32 miles southwest of Chicago, on the Dixie highway.

Its history goes back to 1891 when James Keeney laid out the village. He named it Columbia Heights, a name it retained until its incorporation in Feb., 1897. At that time it was christened in honor of the village's first president, John V. Steger, later the owner of one of the nation's largest manufacturing companies.

Expect Many Oldtimers.

Several piano factories were opened in Steger, which attracted hundreds of families, many of whom stayed on to work in cabinet making plants, furniture factories, radio, and macaroni companies after the vast piano works dwindled. Many of the original piano makers are expected to return today. Special tribute will be paid to Steger's 146 men in service.

UNITED FREEDOM FETE IS PLANNED BY CIVIC LEAGUE

The Bridgeport Civic league is sponsoring a "Day of United Freedom," Sunday, Aug. 30, at Mark White square. Mayor Kelly and Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Barzynski, commanding officer of the Chicago Quartermaster depot, have been invited to speak.

A parade composed of American Legion posts and units and Bridgeport societies will precede the program. The Bridgeport Office of Civilian Defense will present a display of air raid measures. Proceeds of the affair will go to the United Service Organizations.

BENTON HOUSE OPENS NEW VISTA TO POOR YOUTHS

Flowers or Camp Trips Brighten Lives.

[This is one of a series of stories on how the city's charitable institutions are meeting their problems during the war.]

BY JOHN WILHELM.

Near the junction of the drainage canal and the Chicago river on the southwest side, there is a patch of streets that run at variance with the orderly criscross elsewhere. In this district, where lawns and trees have long since given way to cement and wedged brick buildings, where three public schools and a few churches serve a neighborhood that has 50 taverns and liquor stores, there is a place where little fingers can grasp the stems of real flowers—and what is more, take them home.

This is Benton house—known to the neighborhood as the House of Happiness — whose two buildings at 3052 Gratten street contain play schools, gymnasium, and meeting rooms. Big attraction at the center is an occasional issuance of small bouquets to the children, for flowers are almost unknown to them.

Job for the Future.

"As we face 1942 with our country and the world at war, we are more than ever certain of the job that is ours," wrote Isabel Pifer, head resident at Benton house, in her annual report. "In the homes, morale is strengthened or broken for the country. Today's children will determine the world of tomorrow." Children given a bouquet of flowers are apt to be better children, and later, better citizens, she believes.

How the daily routine at Benton house is having its effect upon the world of tomorrow can be seen in the reports filed periodically by workers. Mrs. Ruth Abbot, staff member, writes:

"Bridgeport is basking in the sun of midsummer. Egypt may be about to fall. The coasts may be in for a bombing. But in Bridgeport in front of the Yards things go on much the same. This afternoon I took three little girls to the station for a two week camping period to Holiday home. They were 8 and 9 years old. They live in basement rooms. Their heads have just undergone strenuous treatment for nits.

Great Adventure Ahead.

"They have never been anywhere. They have never ridden on a train. They carried handkerchiefs with their nickels and dimes for spending tied in the corner. Arrayed as never before, they were set for a great adventure. There are not many things which give me quite the same feeling as taking those three small girls to the train.

"All of my work this month, or at least the latter half of it, has been punctuated generously with interruptions. Just when I think this is the morning to get caught up, in comes Mrs. S., who is looking for camp clothes for Shirley, or a bathing suit, or underwear, or something for Johnny, who is all out of his pants. The most heartbreaking job I have is to look vainly thru our pitiful supply of worn out children's clothes.

"This year there have been some places available at camps where children must supply extra sheets and blankets. Most families have neither. There are often no tooth brushes. There is usually one comb to a family. My absorption in the hair of prospective guests is so complete that I often lose the thread of conversation. This is what camping season means to Benton house."

30 Years of Service.

The neighborhood of Bridgeport is chiefly brick and wooden structures built for one but often housing several families.

From a $2,154.22 budget and one small cottage in 1912, Benton house has grown to two large brick buildings with an annual budget of $23,236. A daily attendance of more than 400 men, women, and children fills the settlement house. A staff of six full time and four part time staff members handle the work. They are trained social workers who find their duties heavier now that the federal government no longer provides assistance.

Miss Pifer, the head resident, came to Benton house four years ago after extensive YWCA work in the east. She is young [only 36], slim, and energetic.

Boxes to Crawl In.

Keystone of activity at Benton house is middle aged, genial Louis Crane, who does much of the all-important work with the boys. "Out in the play yard we have gym equipment, but I have found that youngsters have more fun with an old packing box," Crane explains. "Nothing gives a little boy or girl more fun than to crawl into a box. I know, because I used to crawl into boxes when I was a kid."

Head of the summer school is Mrs. Helen May, daughter of Cary Johnson, missionary long identified with Christian training in Japan, and even now a prisoner of war there. Mrs. May was born in Japan.

Mrs. Martha Johnson, young enough to feel a member of the older girls' groups, is in charge of the primary department and play school. Other staff members fit equally well into the busy, varied life of the settlement house.

Funds for support of Benton house come from the community fund and United Charities. Since 1940, previous to which time it was under the jurisdiction of the Episcopal diocese, the settlement house has been operated under a charter from the state of Illinois. The charter well summarizes its activities. It reads:

"A social settlement for administering to the mental, physical, and spiritual needs, and for all other educational and charitable purposes."

The new fine arts director of the Southtown Woman's club is Mrs. William F. Crouch, 8019 Prairie avenue. As such she has charge of the four departments within the fine arts sphere. They are the drama department, headed by Mrs. O. Irvin Fox; art and music, Mrs. Carl G. Lohr; American home, Mrs. Arnold H. Bachmann; literature, Mrs. Milton H. McCormick.

IRISH TO GATHER IN PARK FOR 'LADY IN HARVEST' FETE

The annual Irish celebration, "Lady Day in Harvest," will be held Saturday at Harms park, 4207 North Western avenue. More than 10,000 Chicagoans of Irish birth and descent are expected to attend. Speakers will include prominent Irish Chicagoans. Among them will be Bishop Sheil and Mayor Kelly.

John J. Hurley, general program chairman, said that the feast of "Lady Day in Harvest" has been celebrated in Ireland for more than a century. "It ranks with St. Patrick's day among the Irish," he said. Leading Chicago clans will compete to be known as the greatest Irish name in Chicago. Contests in Irish music and dancing will be held at 3 o'clock.

Special honors will be given to the oldest Irish man or woman attending the outing. Similar awards will be given to the largest Irish family and the family with the greatest number of sons in the army.

CLAY TILE COMES TO THE FORE AS REPAIR MATERIAL

It Has No War Use and Proves Durable.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

After thousands of years of use, genuine clay tile is more than ever to the fore. It has an age old reputation for enduring soundness and beauty, and it is not considered a critical war material.

If a bathroom or a kitchen in your home is in need of repair there is tile for your consideration. For some time color has played a leading part in our homes and we all know what can be accomplished with it, how it can counteract structural and architectural defects, overcome poor lighting and poorly planned exposures. Manufacturers of tile have been aware of these truths and have developed tiles to the point where color combinations are almost limitless.

One manufacturer of these clay tiles has gone to great care to enable prospective customers to see the possibilities of tile, and its harmonious color balanced combinations. Assembled and interchangeable panels of full sized tile are to be found in dealers' show rooms.

These closely approximate the appearance of a finished installation so that a home owner can experiment with endless color combinations and know with certainty that he has what he wants before he makes his final selection.

Many Patterns Available.

There's an interesting and comparatively new line of decorated tiles introduced into the tile family. Here very dainty and provocative patterns have been applied under the glaze so that the softness of the decoration cannot be marred or impaired.

In a dealer's showroom displaying these tiles you can see a certain pattern which is a copy of a delicate French wall paper, and available in 13 color combinations.

Rickrack and fluted patterns also adapt themselves to different type rooms, and under their glaze these lovely tracings are as easy to clean as china. This type tile can be grouped with plain tile to form unusual backgrounds of contrast and beauty.

Modern Mosaic Floors.

Ceramic mosaic floors can be very modern in treatment with design motifs instead of conventional all over repeat patterns. The same wide choice of color combinations is possible in floors as in walls, the colors balanced within themselves and with the wainscot.

Dealers are qualified and ready to give individual problems the study they need and to suggest smart variations of specially designed bands and insets, and all installations are guaranteed. And with floors, as with walls, you can see before you, thru the use of the interchangeable sections of full size tile panels, the floor as it will appear in your own home.

MRS. H. R. BARRATT HEADS GRESHAM WOMAN'S GROUP

Club Completes Officers' Slate for New Year.

The Gresham Woman's club recently completed its slate of officers for the new year. Mrs. Henry R. Barratt, 8106 South Throop street, became president; Mrs. Edwin W. Roland, 8718 Racine avenue, and Mrs. Emil Mezek, 911 West 86th place, vice presidents; Mrs. George Fitterer, 8625 Carpenter street, recording secretary; Mrs. Albert Stapelton, 8923 Emerald avenue, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Russell O'Hara, 6510 Artesian avenue, treasurer.

Committee chairmen include Mrs. Aaron Hutchinson, Mrs. Lillian Carey, Mrs. Willis Ranker, Mrs. Edwin N. Rowland, Mrs. Charles Ranker, Mrs. Fred Ahner, Mrs. Joseph Varnes, Miss Marie O'Hara, Mrs. Russell O'Hara, Mrs. Emil Mezek, Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mrs. Harlan Sorenson, Mrs. Fred McClelland, and Mrs. Floyd Pedone.

Fernwood Woman's Club.

Plans for musical programs for the Fernwood Woman's club have been completed by Mrs. Charles Bigel, 10342 Lowe avenue, music chairman and her committee. One of these will be the Christmas program on Friday, Dec. 11, when the Morgan Park Woman's club chorus will sing.

On the committee are Mrs. Howard Hall, Mrs. H. T. Mear, Mrs. Sam Systma, Mrs. Fenton Phelps, Mrs. James Todd, Mrs. J. C. Penn.

Southtown Woman's Club.

The war service department of the Southtown Woman's club will meet with Mrs. Milton F. Carr, war service chairman, at 10:00 o'clock tomorrow at the Red Cross headquarters, 5949 South Halsted street. A new order of yarn to be knitted into scarfs for America's soldiers has arrived and the club women will spend the day working on it.

Beverly Hills Woman's Club.

Palos Woman's Club.

A dessert bridge party will be staged by the Palos Woman's club at 1 o'clock Thursday, Aug. 20, at the village hall. This will be the club's first fund raising party to maintain the village library since the WPA discontinued its support and the woman's club took over.

On the committee are Mrs. J. W. Mahaffay, chairman, Mrs. Lee Lauderback, Mrs. Joel L. Collins, Mrs. Logan S. Furry, Mrs. Warren Thomas, and Mrs. Charlotte B. Smith.

Blue Island Junior Woman's Club.

Mrs. Justin Boyd, program chairman for the Blue Island Junior Woman's club, announced that a tea for new members will be given today at the home of Mrs. Irving King, 12955 Highland avenue, Blue Island, president. Assisting Mrs. King will be Mrs. Boyd, Mrs. Kenneth Rust, Mrs. Clifford Beckman, Mrs. Russell Beedy, and Miss Gladys Sowl.

47 TO GRADUATE AT TILDEN HIGH IN AUG. 20 RITES

Forty-seven boys and girls will be graduated from Tilden Technical High school at 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning, Aug. 20. The graduation follows completion of summer courses at the school, which made the students eligible for high school diplomas.

Frederick E. Price, principal, will award the diplomas, after a radio address by Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of public schools. Thomas Davis will give the address of welcome. He is president of the graduating class. The address of the day will be given by the class vice president, Robert L. Jackson, on "Democracy at War."

Colors will be posted by the ROTC, and entertainment will be provided by Talmadge Ireland and Andrew Kimbrough, who will give piano solos. The school is at 4747 South Union avenue.

Wed to Air School Non-Com

Mrs. Gertrude Corkery, 12156 Princeton avenue, announces the recent marriage of her daughter, Mary, to Sergt. Edward J. Flickinger of the Enid army flying school, Enid, Okla. Mrs. Flickinger is a physiotherapist with the army at Shepley field, Texas. She was graduated last year from St. Xavier's college. Sergt. Flickinger's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Flickinger, reside in Homewood.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Aug. 10

Monday is yet time to sow more vegetables, such as beans, radishes, carrots, beets, and Chinese cabbage. Endive is quite hardy and not easily injured by early frost. It is tender and useful in a salad when blanched.

Blanching is a means whereby light is excluded from the center leaves which causes them to be tender and light in appearance. Simply tie up the leaves with rubber bands or twine. It takes from 10 to 20 days to be ready for use.

Tuesday, Aug. 11

Order pansy seed and sow immediately to obtain strong plants for next spring's planting. When the seedlings have made some growth they should be transplanted to a frame or permanent place in the flower garden or border. Buy only a high grade strain.

Make plans to build a new lawn this month and up to Sept. 15. By preparing the ground and sowing in fall the growth will be strong enough to withstand winter weather without injury. Some watering may be necessary because the young plants must have moisture to insure development.

Wednesday, Aug. 12

All gardeners should take good care of their equipment and especially rubber hose and spraying apparatus. Do not allowed hose to remain outdoors in full sun, but when thru using it coil it up and hang it on wall pegs to prevent pinching and subsequent leaking.

Keep the lawn mower in the best possible condition, well oiled, and keep the wheels from being clogged with grass. Roll up the garden line when not in use. Clean the hoe each time it is used and wipe with an oiled rag.

Thursday, Aug. 13

Do not pinch hardy chrysanthemums from this time on, but a good application of plant food will be beneficial and produce strong stems and abundant flower buds. Water plants in the morning to give them time to dry off before evening or mildew may attack them.

Do not cultivate vegetables too deep. The roots have had ample time to spread and many will be near the surface. These are feeding roots and should not be destroyed. It is not generally realized that trees require food to keep in good health.

Friday, Aug. 14

Food is applied at the drip or outermost branches of a tree because the feeding roots are located there. Take a 2 inch auger and bore holes about 18 inches deep at intervals of 2 feet or more and fill half way with the food and the other half with soil. Much of the food elements will soon be available.

It cannot be expected, however, that long neglected, stunted trees will ever regain their luxuriant appearance.

Saturday, Aug. 15

Madonna lily bulbs may be obtained soon and the earlier they are planted the better. Plant only 2 inches to the top of the bulb. If a considerable number are planted mulch with leafmold or peat. Old bulbs can be divided. Lift and divide the Virginia bluebells. If morning glories are cut when in bud they make fine early morning displays.

[Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.]

4 MORE BOUTS SCHEDULED ON W-G-N-MUTUAL

Four more bouts on the Cavalcade of Sports have been arranged and will be broadcast by W-G-N and Mutual. Featuring outstanding boxers in nearly all weights, the bouts will be broadcast from Madison Square Garden at 9 p. m. on their respective dates by Don Dunphy and Bill Corum.

On Thursday, Aug. 13, Bobby Ruffin and Bob Montgomery, lightweights, will meet for 10 rounds. On Sept. 10 Freddie Cochrane and Ray Robinson will meet for 10 rounds in a welterweight battle. On Friday, Sept. 25, Chalky Wright is scheduled to defend his featherweight title in a 15 round bout with Lulu Constantino. Tami Mauriello and Lee Savold will meet for 10 rounds on Friday, Oct. 30.

The principal announcing chore on the broadcasts is handled by Don Dunphy who gives the blow-by-blow description; Bill Corum provides the color sidelights.

W-G-N TO CARRY MUSIC FESTIVAL FOR TWO HOURS

Many Highlights Slated on Mutual Network.

Two hours of the Chicago Music Festival, sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., will be broadcast over W-G-N starting at 8 o'clock next Saturday night. The first hour from 8 to 9, usually occupied by America Loves a Melody, will be broadcast also over the Mutual Broadcasting system. Jack Brickhouse will be the commentator and Philip Maxwell, director of the festival, will present much of the background.

The program will be opened with the world première of "Victory," a march overture by Nathaniel Shilkret, featuring the festival symphony orchestra of 114 men under the direction of Henry Weber, general musical director of the festival. Mr. Shilkret will be on the stage with Mr. Weber during the première and will also act as one of the judges for the vocal contests. Other judges will be Mme. Maria Kurenko, soprano concert star, and Dr. Rudolph Ganz, president of the Chicago Musical college.

Plan Community Singing.

Next the 85,000 spectators will be led in community singing by Frank Bennett, choral director. They will sing "Deep in the Heart of Texas," "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree," and then to the tune of "Keep the Home Fires Burning" all voices will be raised in a pledge to the men in our armed services that "we'll keep the home fires burning till you come home." Army camps and naval stations all over the world will be notified of this pledge from the midwest and invited to listen in.

The finalists in the vocal contest will be heard next. The two best men and two best women singers will broadcast to the background of the festival symphony orchestra. The judges will select the winners from the finalists of 12 preliminary festival contests held thruout the middle west with a total of more than 1,000 contestants.

While spectators sing "Here Comes the Navy" to the tune of the "Beer Barrel Polka," 300 men from the Great Lakes Naval Training station will march on the field headed by Lieut. Comm. E. E. [Eddie] Peabody, king of the banjo and director of the naval station's orchestra. Peabody will then conduct a typical "Happy Hour" program which is a popular feature of the station. The program will include selections by the concert and dance bands, specialty numbers, a banjo solo by Peabody, and a medley by the Great Lakes choir of 130 voices directed by Chaplain H. F. Hanson.

Women's Chorus to Be Heard.

The winning women's chorus will be heard next. The winner of the trombone contest will next be announced and will be followed by the men's choral winners who will sing "Wings Over America."

The entire audience will take part in a match lighting ceremony which has been a feature of the festival for many years.

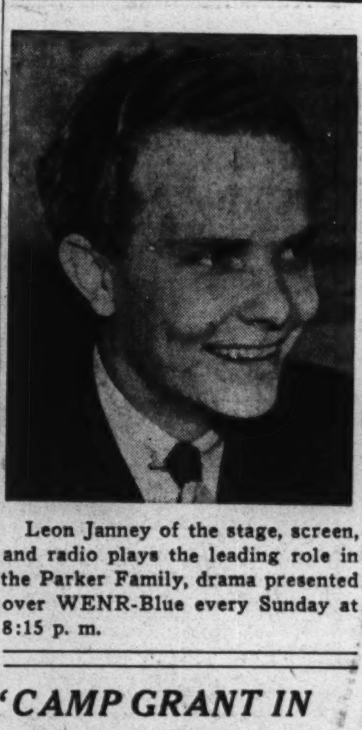
A detachment of marines under the command of Lieut. Col. Carlton Hill will stage a drill to be followed by performances by a massed plectrophonic orchestra and a massed accordion band. The plectrophonic orchestra of 1,000 fretted instruments will play "Marcheta" by Schertzinger while more than 1,000 accordionists will play an army, navy, and marine medley. A marimba orchestra of 160 marimbas directed by Clair Omar Musser will be heard playing the "Bolero" by Rosales, "Dance of the Comedians" from the "Bartered Bride," and Verdi's "Anvil Chorus" from "Il Trovatore."

Following a massed community sing led by Carl Craven, the festival's winning pianist will be introduced and will play a Saint-Saëns piano concerto accompanied by the marimba orchestra.

Men of Steel to Sing.

A highlight of the festival will be the chorus of the Men of Steel featuring 80 workers of the Carnegie Illinois company's Gary plant. They will be directed by Harry S. Walsh, musical director of W-G-N's Northerners' program. The men will be dressed in overalls and will sing before a huge replica of a portion of a steel mill. The men will be accompanied by the Carilco band when they sing the "March of the Steel Men" and "At the Ramparts We Watch."

Juvenile Actor



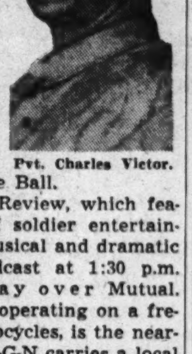
Leon Janney of the stage, screen, and radio plays the leading role in the Parker Family, drama presented over WENR-Blue every Sunday at 8:15 p. m.

'CAMP GRANT IN REVIEW' POPULAR ON MUTUAL CHAIN

Feature Charles Victor on Soldier Show.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Charles Victor, W-G-N entertainer who joined the army after returning from Hollywood, where he made his first picture, is contributing to the weekly broadcasts of "Camp Grant in Review" over the Mutual Broadcasting system. Pvt. Victor is attached to Camp Grant's recruit reception center. Victor appears in "Sweet and Hot," starring Victor Mature and Lucille Ball.



Pvt. Charles Victor.

Camp Grant in Review, which features a variety of soldier entertainment, including musical and dramatic sketches, is broadcast at 1:30 p.m. every Wednesday over Mutual. WROK, Rockford, operating on a frequency of 1,440 kilocycles, is the nearest outlet, since W-G-N carries a local program at that hour. WROK can be heard thru sensitive and selective receivers in the metropolitan area.

Several men who as civilians were well known in radio circles appear on these reviews from time to time. Corp. Florian ZaBach, violinist, formerly of the W-G-N orchestra, is featured occasionally. Others are Corp. Bob Thomas, formerly of the Breakfast Club and Club Matinée troupes; Pvt. Doug Culver, swing pianist and vocalist; Pvt. Leonard Baylinson, Chicago novachord player.

Three of the camp musical organizations furnish the musical background, rotating in cycles of three weeks. They are the Medical Training Center band under the direction of Sergt. Fred M. Sargent, a onetime Chicagoan; the Recruit Reception Swing Cats, directed by Corp. Jack Koehne, and the Medical Training Center Dance orchestra, directed by Technical Sergt. John Wallace.

A recent Mutual network survey showed Camp Grant in Review listed as fourth in popularity among the sustaining [nonsponsored] programs on the chain. It was topped by America Loves a Melody, Letters to My Son, and A Date with Don Norman.

The camp program is under the supervision of Capt. A. E. Mealiff, public relations officer, and is produced by Corp. Martin Bouhah, who also does the announcing.

MARION CLAIRE GUEST ON MUSIC THAT ENDURES

Marion Claire, soprano star of America Loves a Melody, will make a guest appearance on W-G-N's Music That Endures concert at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow night.

Miss Claire will sing four selections: "Tomorrow," by Strauss; "Pourquoi," from Delibes' "Lakme"; Sadero's "Fa la, Nana, Bambin," and Strauss' "Devotion."

Miss Claire will be accompanied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, and by the chorus, led by Robert Trendler. Lewis James will produce the program. The orchestra's selections will be Dvorak's "Slavonic Dance No. 10," "Debussy's "Ballade," and the first movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 10. The program will be broadcast over the Mutual network.

Rise Stevens Will Sing on Kostelanetz Program

Rise Stevens, Metropolitan Opera mezzo-soprano, will make a guest appearance with André Kostelanetz' orchestra at 3:30 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS. She will sing "Falling in Love With Some One" and "Why Do I Love You?" Albert Spalding will play "Indian Summer."

FOUR COUNTIES PLAN TO SPEED VOTERS' SIGNING

Move to Avoid Rush of Registrants.

Efforts to induce voters to sign up early under the new downstate permanent registration law and thus avoid a rush later are under way in four counties that include northwestern suburbs. This was disclosed in a Tribune survey. The four counties are McHenry, Lake, Du Page, and Kane.

They are among the 101 counties outside of Cook that were brought under compulsory permanent registration of voters by an act passed last year extending this method of franchise control to counties of less than 500,000 population.

Previously permanent registration had been in effect thruout Cook county and nine downstate cities that have election boards. The nine are Aurora, Bloomington, Cairo, Danville, East St. Louis, Galesburg, Peoria, Rockford, and Springfield.

Can Vote Once Without Signing.

Under the new act voters in the downstate counties are expected to sign the permanent registration cards before the Nov. 3 election. If they do not, they will be permitted to vote, but the procedure is involved enough to cause considerable inconvenience on election day. After voting once without registering, the voter must sign under the permanent system before he can vote again.

The voter will have plenty of opportunity to register between now and the deadline Oct. 6, but the county officials warn that unless large numbers register immediately the last minute rush will deprive many voters of their franchise. For this reason the four counties are holding early registration drives to bring at least 50 per cent of the eligible voters under the new system before the two general registration days, Sept. 19 and Oct. 6.

All Polls to Be Open.

On those two days every polling place in the counties affected will be open for registrations. The law provides for three registrars to be on duty in each precinct on those two days. Registration officials say it will be impossible for these staffs to handle the registrants applying, so they are establishing outside registration points for the convenience of voters.

Raymond D. Woods, McHenry county clerk, announced that from now until Oct. 6 he will have deputies at central points to register voters. In the larger centers these places will be open two days a week, and in the smaller ones one day a week. In most cases the registering spots will be city, village, and town halls. The places and days for each locality will be announced by posters and thru other publicity media, he said.

Places where two-days-a-week schedules will prevail include Huntley, Harvard, Crystal Lake, Marengo, McHenry, Cary, Fox River Grove, Algonquin, Hebron, Richmond, Greenwood, and Hartland.

Only 2,500 Sign in McHenry.

Woods estimated there are 27,000 eligible voters in McHenry county. Of these, only 2,500 had signed up by last week, and an intensive drive was under way to increase early registrations.

In Lake county a similar campaign is well started, County Clerk J. D. Morse said. Registrations have already been held in several cities, villages, and townships, and a series of others are to be held in the next few weeks.

Tomorrow and Tuesday deputies will register voters in Lake Villa and Wauconda. On Wednesday they will be in Grayslake, Round Lake, and Lake Zurich [for Ela township]. Later, probably the last week of this month, there will be additional one day registrations in Highland Park, Deerfield, Lake Forest, Lake Bluff, Winthrop Harbor, Newport, Cuba, and Libertyville. The dates and places of these registrations will be made known thru posters and by other means, Morse said.

80,000 Eligible in Lake.

The clerk said that by last week about one-fifth of the 80,000 eligible voters in Lake county's 101 precincts had already registered. He expressed hope that this percentage will be more than doubled thru the campaign, which is being assisted by such organizations as the League of Women Voters, political party groups, and civic organizations.

Kane county has five deputies on tour to get as many of the 50,000 potential voters as possible registered, according to Theodore Larson Jr., chief deputy of County Clerk Charles Lowry. Before the drive ends, every city, village, and township in the county will have been visited at least once, Larson said.

He announced this schedule for special registrations for the rest of August: 18th, Burlington, Hampshire, Plato, and Rutland townships; 20th, Dundee township [including East Dundee, West Dundee, and Carpentersville]; 24th, Elburn [for Blackberry township] and Maple Park [for Virgil township]; 28th, Campton, Big Rock, and Kaneville townships.

Du Page Registers Half.

Du Page township has already registered about half the voters in each of the localities thus far covered, it was announced by Clarence V. Wagemann, county clerk.

Wagemann said that he expects a registration this year of nearly 600

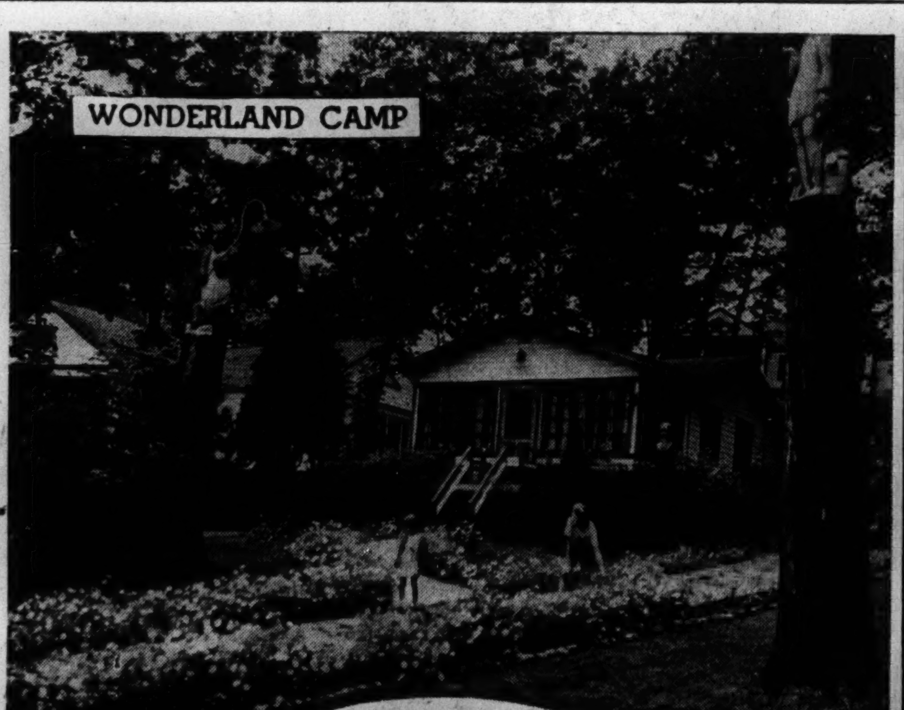
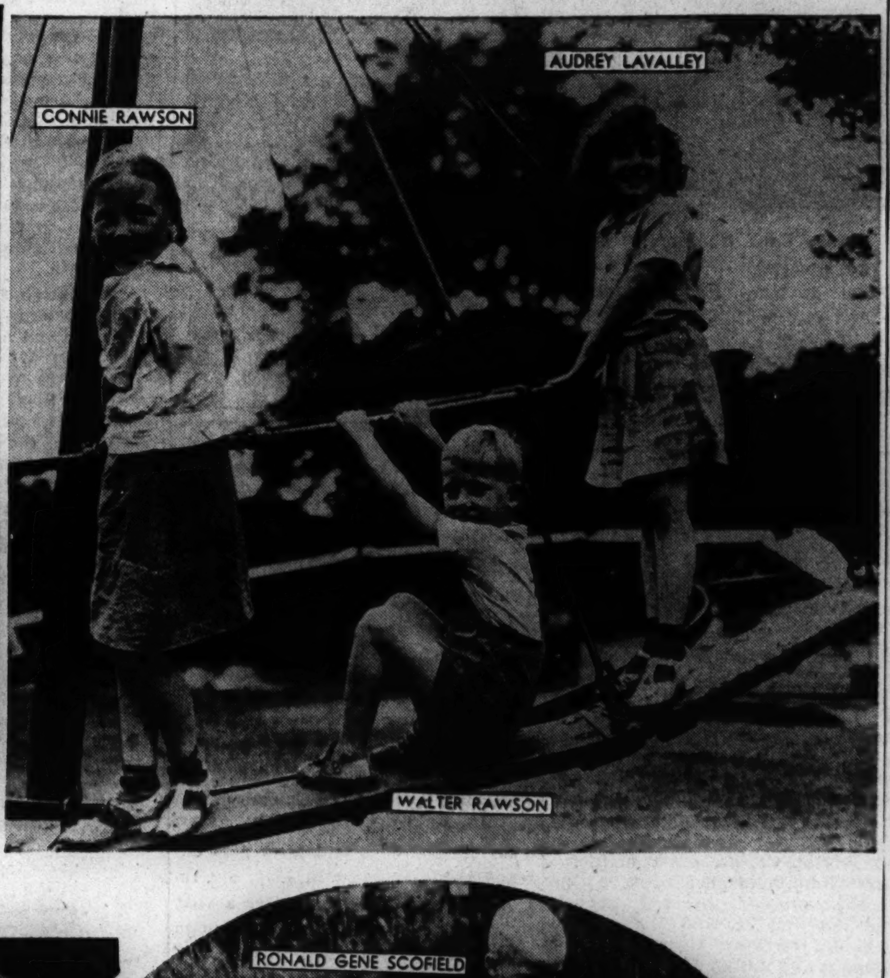
Salvation Army's Wonderland Camp Is a Picture of America at Play





Wonderland for Chicago children is just an hour's drive from the sun baked streets, the honking horns of the city and narrow alleys. Bought with the nickels and dimes contributed to the Salvation Army are acres of green edged with purple petunias, tree shaded cottages, sliding boards, a lake, a zoo and hours of silent sleep. Far from cares and conflict of nations or races, Wonderland is the place where colored Roosevelt Green gets an equal turn on the merry-go-round with the Irish boy who wears freckles. The names of the children in the free fresh air camp at Wonderland, just north of Antioch, read like a lesson in international relations. Wonderland camp is America at play.

Communities' Staffs Prepare for Black-Out

Community commanders and their staffs have been asked to familiarize themselves with the contents of the recently issued manual for practice black-out covering the test for Wednesday night when it will be the goal of the Office of Civilian Defense, Chicago metropolitan area, to darken the landscape as deeply, between 10 and 10:30 p. m., as it was before the first settler lit his cabin lamp.

Offices of the division chiefs will be in operation during the first area black-out in the middle west and will act as a clearing house for instructions to and questions from community commanders. Reports immediately after the all-clear signal has sounded shall include ground observation from each block and reports of any accidents.

Community commanders have been instructed to be on duty to see that zone captains and block captains are properly instructed and prepared for the test. The community office will act as a clearing house for all questions that occur in the community, except such occurrences as require action by the central control.

Zone Captains' Duties.

Zone captains are instructed that it shall be their duty to see that all block captains under their jurisdiction understand instructions before the black-out occurs, and that they are completely staffed and ready for the test. Zone captains shall see that all orders are transmitted to zone organizations and shall supervise the operations of block organizations to the extent necessary to see that they are functioning.

Each block captain [or senior air warden as he is called in the suburban areas] will be responsible for all Civilian Defense activities within the territory assigned to him.

It shall be the duty of the captain or warden to so station his staff as to control the public in the observation of the rules and regulations enforced during the test period, and to make report of ground observations and accidents, if any occur. If violations are observed his organization is advised to make corrections where possible and obtain the coöperation of the public.

No Forcible Compliance.

If violations of the rules occur, the OCD is not to attempt a forcible compliance, but report the matter to the central room for action by the proper local enforcement officers. They are to resort to calls to the central room only when diplomacy and persuasion have failed.

Block captains are advised to use discretion to avoid any unnecessary interference with the movement of vehicles which are, in fact, on emer-

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

Four youths from the northwest area enlisted recently as naval aviation cadets. They are Seymour Marshall, 3300 Pensacola avenue, a graduate of Roosevelt High school and a student at Wright City college; Max Durachta, 5833 Cornelia avenue, Steinmetz graduate; Rowland Roth of Buckley road, Barrington, where he was active in high school football and track, and Edward Plank, 4423 Roscoe street, Schurz graduate.

Second Lieut. Alfred L. Dibella, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Dibella, 1609 North Central avenue, is attached to the 31st armored regiment at Camp Polk, Louisiana. Lieut. Dibella attended Oberlin college and received his basic army training at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

Pvt. Raymond J. Hudak, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Hudak, 5121 Montana street, has been graduated from the radio university of the army air forces at Scott field, Illinois. He expects soon to be assigned to duty with one of the air forces' tactical units.

Howard W. Lewand, 3248 Lincoln avenue, was graduated recently from the officers' candidate school of Fort Sill, Oklahoma, where he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the field artillery. He wil be stationed at Camp Atterbury, Indiana.

Thomas C. Bruns, a member of the marine corps for the last four years, has been commissioned a second lieutenant. He has been stationed at Camp Elliott, San Diego, Cal. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Bruns, reside at 4945 North Kilpatrick avenue.

Three northwest siders, Corp. John F. Kreissl, Corp. Fred V. Kersey, and Corp. Albert Christian Petersen, have been admitted to the air force officer candidate school at Miami Beach, Fla. Corp. Kreissl is the son of Mrs. May C. Kreissl, 4921 North Keeler avenue. Corp. Kersey is the son of Michael Kersey, 9716 Schiller boulevard, Franklin Park, and Corp. Petersen is the son of Mrs. Agatha J. Andersen, 4823 Drummond place.

John E. Frizen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl J. Frizen, 5003 Berwyn avenue, has been promoted to a captain in the army air force, according to announcement from headquarters of the sixth air force. Capt. Frizen received civilian pilot training at Wheaton college from which he was graduated in June, 1940. He won his wings at Maxwell field, Nebraska, in February.

After a short tour of duty in Washington he was ordered to the Caribbean on foreign duty last March. He is serving as a communications officer on the special staff of Maj. Gen. Davenport Johnson, commanding general of the sixth air force.

In civilian life Capt. Frizen was employed by the James B. Clow company, 201 North Talman avenue. He was an amateur radio operator, having his own station at his home, and was a member of the American Radio Relay league.

Corp. Elton Hedstrom, 4322 North Mozart street, recently was selected as the soldier of the week at Camp Grant. Formerly a battalion plans and training clerk, Corp. Hedstrom has been promoted to acting supply sergeant, Brig. Gen. John A. Willis, camp commander, announced.

OCD CALLS FOR TACT IN HANDLING TRANSPORTATION

Block captains on the northwest side have been asked by division five of the Office of Civilian Defense to nominate as transportation wardens men and women whose outstanding qualification is tact. They will need the tact to suggest to automobile owners that they give rides to people without autos in a community-wide group riding project.

The captains and air raid wardens of the division are now analyzing civilian defense roster cards to find out the number of passenger automobiles available in the blocks and the routes of the riders.

The transportation wardens, when they are appointed, will distribute group riders' registration cards to residents for group riding clubs which will consist of workers and neighbors going in the same direction.

Irving Park Club to Have Garden Party Wednesday

A garden party will be held for members of the Irving Park Catholic Woman's club at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. E. M. Donohue, 3933 Eddy street, chairman of the garden department. Mrs. B. J. Cramer is co-chairman assisted by Mrs. E. G. Bristow, Mrs. Edward Fels, Mrs. E. E. Holmberg, Mrs. Joseph Hurley, Mrs. Joseph Schowalter, and Mrs. Charles F. Strubbe.

India Unready for Self Rule, Observer Says

"Most of India's natives have no idea of the responsibilities involved in self-government," says Dr. Norbert Leckband who with his family has returned to his home in Arlington Heights after six years as a medical missionary in the interior.

"They are poorly informed about themselves as well as the world at large," Dr. Leckband continued. "They distrust themselves and therefore distrust any foreigner. They believe that the Japs can't be any worse than the British."

Dr. Leckband operated a Lutheran hospital in the village of Ambur which is 125 miles west of Madras, recently exposed to Japanese invasion. He handled on an average of 20,000 cases a year, the usual diseases being malaria, typhoid fever, leprosy, hookworm, and cholera.

Respect White Men.

Altho they resent foreigners, the Indians have much respect for white men, explained Dr. Leckband, who had an Indian pharmicist, two doctors, and several nurses working under him in the hospital.

"The very fact that they want self-rule is a compliment to the British," he believes. "Except for military affairs, the Indians have control over everything including their school systems. The British have been so liberal that the natives have too much confidence in themselves."

Dr. Leckband says it is hard to explain the tremendous amount of good the British have done for India. They have brought peace and a sense of coöperation to the natives who before constantly were fighting among themselves and were subjected to the rule of despots who obtained their wealth by pillaging.

There are a great many wealthy Indians but few of them leave the country for their education. They are similar to the Japs in their skill in copying, Dr. Leckband observed.

Picture Guides Instrument Making.

"I never lacked any surgical instruments," he said. "I simply would show a native a picture of what I wanted and he would fashion it for me. It would be a little bit cruder perhaps than the American made tools but it always would be an exact copy. The natives also made furniture for the Leckbands' cottage near the hospital.

The patients were fed by their families who prepared the food either at home or in a kitchen at the hos-

MILITARY UNITS TO STIR CROWD NEXT SATURDAY

Several thousand west and northwest siders well take part in the 13th annual Chicago Music Festival in Soldiers' field, next Saturday. Sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., the festival is dedicated this year to the armed forces and will be one of the greatest musical military shows ever attempted. Profits of the festival will be turned over to army and navy relief.

More than 10,000 will take part in the festival. A thousand of these participants will be young girl dancers, many of whom will come from west and northwest side homes. They will take part in the dance pageant which will be an outstanding feature. Many more west and northwest siders will take part in the civilian defense exhibition to be given by the Commonwealth Edison company.

Members of the Wheelmen of America will give a timely note to the grand entrance parade at 7 o'clock by riding into the field.

Wear Patriotic Garb.

Wearing red, white, and blue ballet costumes, the dancers will enter the field in formations representing airplanes. Their dance routines will represent the spirit of youth. Attached to each girl's shoulders will be a knapsack from which, at the end of the pageant, will be unfurled a part of the American flag, resulting in a huge flag covering the entire field.

By a trick device this flag will suddenly disappear and the dancers will make their exit. As they leave the field, they will cover their heads with blue-green scarfs and will hold seagull wings, attached to their wrists, above the scarfs, creating an effect of seagulls flying over rippling water.

The dancers will come from the Ideal Dancing institute and the summer schools of the Young Men's Christian association. They are under direction of Miss Mayblossom Macdonald, a dancing instructor, and artistic director of the pageant, and Miss Wilhelmina Aveling, assistant program director of the YMCA schools. Assisting on the west and northwest sides are Eleanir Shanahan, Irving Park YMCA, Virginia Tenney, and Roberta Moore, Austin

Festival Orchestra to Play.

The dancers will be accompanied by the festival orchestra which will be directed by Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N.

Other west and northwest siders taking prominent parts in the festival will be Carl Craven of Wheaton and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bennett, 5438 Ferdinand street, who will lead community singing. Ina May Jones, 2838 North McVicker avenue, grand champion baton twirler, will lead the grand entrance parade.

The festival will be preceded by a luncheon Friday noon in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House. This will be the sixth annual festival luncheon and the honor guests will be Dr. Rudolph Ganz, pianist and composer, and Mara Kurenko, Russian lyric soprano.

Aurora Girl to Be Queen.

Polly Potteiger, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Potteiger of Aurora, will be crowned queen of the festival at the luncheon. Her mother, Mrs. Helen Burt Potteiger, formerly of Wheaton, was a winner in the vocal contest in 1936.

All seats to the luncheon in the ballroom have been sold but there are still seats available in the foyer. Those sitting in the foyer will go into the ballroom after the luncheon to hear the program. Luncheon tickets at $1.75 may be bought from the festival headquarters on the fourth floor of the Tribune Tower.

Philip Maxwell, director of the festival, will be toastmaster at both the luncheon and Saturday night's event. Reserved festival tickets are 55 cents and $1.10. Wednesday is the deadline for obtaining them by mail but they may be purchased at any time in the Tribune Public Service Offices either at the Tribune Tower or at 1 South Dearborn street.

Schedule Preliminary Contests.

Events leading up to the grand finale Saturday night include several preliminary contests. The first of these this week will be a contest for instrumentalists at 7 o'clock Tuesday night in the grand ballroom in the Drake hotel. The contest is open to players on the trombone, accordion, Hawaiian guitar, marimba, piano, Spanish guitar and tenor banjo. It will be supervised by Howard Stube, chairman of instrumental participation. It will be open to the public and the admission price will be 30 cents.

Another contest open to the public will be the preliminary contest for baton twirlers at 5 o'clock Thursday night in the north end of Soldiers' field. The baton twirlers will be featured in the grand entrance parade Saturday night. It is being directed by Fred Miller, field supervisor. The preliminary contest will be free to the public.

The preliminary vocal contest for participants outside Cook county will be held at 7 o'clock Friday night in the Drake hotel grand ballroom. The admission price for spectators will be 30 cents.

374 NEW TIRES ARE GRANTED TO NORTHWEST SIDE

251 Users Qualify During Week of Rationing.

Two hundred fifty-one residents of the northwest side qualified during the week ending July 31 for new tires and tubes, rationing board figures disclosed.

A total of 374 tires and 489 tubes were allotted to the northwest area. One hundred forty-five motorists secured 101 tires and 194 tubes for passenger vehicles, while 106 individuals and firms were allowed to purchase 273 truck tires and 295 tubes.

Those receiving tires and tubes from the northwest side were:

Oriole Park to Dedicate Honor Roll

Oriole Park Community club next Friday will dedicate an honor roll to 10 boys in the forces. The committee in charge of the scroll are, left to right, Mrs. Warren Norton, Mrs. J. Werner Schield, Mrs. Elmer Drewes, Mrs. Wesley Suman, Mrs. James MacDonald, chairman; Mrs. Edward Bauer, and Mrs. John J. O'Connell. Mrs. Bauer's son, Edward, is helping to hold the honor roll, which will be placed under a glass case and left in the park.

Program Friday

An honor roll bearing names of the 10 boys in service from Oriole park will be dedicated by the Community club at 8 o'clock Friday night in the park. The boys' names have been painted on heavy scroll paper by Herbert Russell, 7555 Bryn Mawr avenue. The scroll will be placed under glass and left in the park. William N. Martin, president of the club, will preside. A dance will follow the dedication.

Oriole park boys on the roll are Eric Funk and Wallace Roehl, army engineer corps; Kenneth Gilbertson and Robert Cairns, coast artillery; Harold Kanning, signal corps; Wayne Lindahl, officers' training school; Fred Sperling Jr. and Walter Walinski Jr., marines; George Wagner Jr., navy, and Alfred H. Russell, first musician, navy.

Mrs. James McDonald, 5456 North Oriole avenue, and Mrs. Elmer Drewes, 5249 North Oriole avenue, are in charge of the dedication. The club has been sending gifts of money to the boys each month.

NORTHWEST SIDE GARDEN CONTEST WINNERS NAMED

Makes Food Producers of 100 Youngsters.

At least 100 youngsters in Edison Park and Norwood Park have done their bit toward defense this year as a result of the gardening contest sponsored by the Kiwanis club of the two communities.

Of the 100 boys and girls who entered the contest in May, six received top score ratings after a visit by the judges recently. First prize winner in Edison Park was Donald Schwarz, 14 years old, of 7035 Olcott avenue, who won $10 in defense stamps. The Norwood Park winner was Donald Brokaw, 13, of 5847 North Harlem avenue. Out of a possible score of 300, Donald Schwarz received 260 points for his vegetables and Donald Brokaw got 263.

Other Winners Named.

Other winners in Edison Park were John Moderl, 13, of 7041 Ozark avenue, who won $5 in stamps, and Helen Frye, 12, of 7010 Olcott avenue, $2. Second prize winner in Norwood Park was James Luecke, 13, of 5984 Imlay avenue, who with three other brothers entered a garden. Third prize winner was Daniel Vrabeck, 14, of 6207 Milwaukee avenue.

The contest was set up like a flower contest for juniors which the Kiwanis club started several years ago but discontinued recently. Produce from the winners' gardens was on display at the offices of civilian defense in Edison Park and Norwood Park last Thursday.

These Were Judges.

The judges for Edison Park were Mrs. Malcolm Unseth of 6615 Ottawa avenue, victory garden chairman of the Edison Park civilian defense office; Mrs. Ralph Jacquith of 6647 Onargo avenue, who has had three years' experience judging farms and flowers in 10 Illinois counties, and R. J. Mohr, horticulturist from the Garfield park conservatory.

Norwood Park judges were Mrs. Lee Bisdorf of 5819 North Harlem avenue, past president of the Norwood Park Garden club; Mrs. Edward Polivka of 5852 Nina avenue, president of the Garden club, and Mr. Mohr.

BELMONT-CRAGIN BLOCK CAPTAINS WILL HOLD RALLY

Purpose of the civilian defense program will be explained to 550 block captains composing the Belmont-Cragin community who will hold a neighborhood rally at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Aug. 23, in Hanson Park stadium, Diversey boulevard and Fullerton avenue.

A unit of the Boy Scouts led by T. E. Smith will present colors and there will be a welcome by Mayor Kelly, coördinator of civilian defense.

Roy Levinson, commander of the 5th district will address some 2,000 men and women who will be presented with their certificates for completing their four basic courses in civilian defense. The training has been completed under the direction of Harold E. Thomsen and Jack Landes. Joseph Fox is rally chairman.

PARISH SPONSORS BENEFIT FETE FOR ITS NEW EDIFICE

St. Wenceslaus Festival Is This Week.

A summer festival in honor of the recent dedication of the $350,000 St. Wenceslaus church is being sponsored this week by the parish at the festival grounds at Milwaukee, Avers and Belmont avenues. The festival will close a week from tonight when $1,500 in war savings bonds will be given in prizes.

The new church, to which proceeds from the festival will be given, was dedicated June 10 by Archibishop Stritch. The Gothic structure replaces the former church and school building at Roscoe street and Lawndale avenue.

Church Has 5 Altars.

The new church has five altars, an organ loft and a choir gallery. The vestibule is finished in Notre Dame and Oriental marble. The sanctuary walls are lined with black walnut. The 37 foot cross at the main altar is of bluish black marble and is placed against a background of 25 different kinds of inlaid wood. The church has a seating capacity of 1,200.

List Festival Committee.

The committee in charge of the festival are the Rev. Msgr. Theodore Czastka, pastor, honorary chairman; the Rev. Stanley L. Ryzner, and the Rev. Steven Bialas. Assisting them are Henry Zmich, 3234 North Hamlin avenue; Mrs. Estelle Czaja, 3440 North Harding avenue; Mrs. Anna Polek, 3436 North Springfield avenue; Miss Mae Wolinski, 3319 North Harding avenue, and Miss Virginia Fryrmark, 3453 North Ridgeway avenue.

OUR TOWN

JON RAY LEHMANN did much in the way of spreading American patriotism recently when he celebrated his eighth birthday with a "Victory" party. After greeting his guests, he escorted them to the basement of his home, where the recreation room was decorated in red, white, and blue ballons and American flags.

Jon Ray Lehmann.

Prizes in games were war savings stamps and the book, "How to Be an American." A cake decorated with a huge "V" for victory centered the refreshment table, at which were served individual ice cream molds of American flags and eagles. Favors of miniature ships and airplanes, Uncle Sam balloons and tricolor jump ropes and tops were distributed to each guest.

Jon's guests, many of whom were dressed in military costumes, were Doris Anderson, Betty Ann Briney, Carole Christensen, Rita Greskeiv, Georgia Lewis, Patricia Moore, Glendora Sandell, Mary Spellane, Evelyn Stamos, Nancy Thellgard, Marvin Anderson, William Boettcher, William Godin, Richard Egler, Jordan Fredricksen, Ronald Fredricksen, Jerry Graham, Herman Hacher, John Herd, Herbert Johnson, Russell Johnson, William Larocca, Donald Marshall, Alan Martens, Ronald Pratser, Richard Rademacher, Walter Roose, Edgar Sutton, Richard Uhnavy, and Bruce Chelberg.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH JACOBS, 1945 Schiller street, were surprised recently when 90 friends gathered to help them celebrate their silver wedding. A fried chicken supper was served in Oaza hall, where later there was dancing and a home talent show.

Walter Jacobs of Arlington Heights, a brother of Joseph Jacobs, acted as master of ceremonies, and Mrs. Helen Helder, 1937 Schiller street, was hostess.

Congratulations were extended by several of the guests, including Shirley Jacobs, youngest daughter of the couple, who recited a poem; her brother and sister, Leonard and Dolores Jacobs, and Mrs. and Mrs. John Jacobs, parents of Mr. Jacobs. Among the many gifts was a silver spray corsage of 25 silver dollars.

Gerald K. Anderson of Des Plaines received word last week that he won a scholarship award at the University of Illinois. William Lahvic Jr., 1820 South Prospect street, Park Ridge, also received an agriculture scholarship.

Extend Bus Route

Regular bus service will be extended on North Austin boulevard from North avenue to Higgins road, a distance of four miles, thru an order received by the Chicago Surface Lines recently from the Illinois Commerce Commission.

NORTHWEST PAIR OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING TODAY

Mr. and Mrs. Sigmund Jass, 4740 North Sawyer avenue, will celebrate their golden wedding tonight with a 6 o'clock dinner for their five children and families and a reception for friends at 8:30 in the Hotel La Salle.

Mr. and Mrs. Jass were married in Chicago and have lived most of the 50 years on the northwest side. Until his retirement a few years ago, Mr. Jass was in the grocery and marketing business.

The five children and their families who will attend the dinner are Samuel Jass, 4855 North Bernard avenue; Emanuel Jass, 2646 West Winnemac avenue; Sylvan Joss, 5004 North California avenue; Louis Joss, 5044 North Marine drive; and Miss Ruth Jass who lives at home. There also will be seven grandchildren and one great grandchild present. A grandson, Pvt. Melvin Jass, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jass, is stationed in Australia.

Northwest Lions to Hear Talks by Cherokee Indians

Two Cherokee Indians, Chief Lone West and Princess Georgette, will address the Northwest Lions' club at a guest luncheon Tuesday in the club building, 4300 West North avenue. Guests at the luncheon will be members of the North Austin and Belpark Lions' clubs. The Indians are living in a trailer camp near Park Ridge.

POOR FOLK REAP HEALTH HARVEST AT WONDERLAND

Personnel and Food Prices Reflect War.

[This is the fifth in a series of stories on northwest side philanthropies describing how they are meeting financial and personnel problems during the war.]

BY MILDRED WILDS.

In June a Chicago neighbor dropped a dime in a box and got a Salvation Army paper doughnut to tie on his coat. Thousands of Chicagoans dropped in a dime or a quarter as a matter of course and forgot about it, but it all added up at the end of a day to $48,000 and made wonderland come true this summer for 2,800 mothers and children.

The Salvation Army's Wonderland camp just over the Wisconsin border, north of Antioch, is in full swing. Petunias border the stone walks and the swings, the merry-go-rounds and the sliding boards groan with their constant loads of laughing children. Mothers from crowded city flats lean back against the solid tree trunks and kick off their shoes.

Rest and Fun for All.

Every 10 days 218 mothers and children move into the shaded screened cottages of the fresh air section of the camp where robins and cardinals whistle at them from the window sills. Every 10 days 20 crippled children throw their crutches on the sandy beach and stretch their fingers and toes into the cool clean lake water. Just as many thin children suffering with heart diseases move into the cardiac cottage to rest.

For all of them it is Wonderland. Huge totem poles stretch intriguingly into the sky. Great iron teddy bears hold up electric lights which are turned on at dusk. Capt. Gladys Boozer is in charge of a nursery where tiny babies are bathed and fed their formulas by trained nurses while their mothers sit along the beach and soak up the sun. There is a zoo in one corner of the camp where peacocks strut, where a donkey brays and monkeys turn somersaults all day long for their audience.

Down a road, thru a ravine, is Shagbark camp for teen age boys and girls, given by Will Rogers, motion picture comedian, a short time before his death. The cabins are made of logs and have Indian names. There are stretches of pine woods and a wild flower refuge where boys who are used to alley noises and the monotonous roar of elevated trains listen to the still voice of the night and trace the silver pattern of stars in the sky.

Camp 18 Years Old.

Shut off from all worry for 10 exciting days are the children that fill the camp. The problems of buying the meat, the vegetables and the milk for the table, the problems of finding counselors to teach sports and crafts are up to Maj. and Mrs. Albert E. Ramsdale, directors. This is their second year at Wonderland camp which was started 18 years ago under the leadership of Maj. Zellous Wiles who stayed at Wonderland all year round, saw the cabins built and added bit by bit the things that make for a home in the woods.

So far the only effect the war has had on Wonderland was to cut by 50 per cent the amount of sugar used in the meals, to raise by 30 per cent the cost of meat and to increase the price of milk seven cents a gallon. Younger men are being recruited for the program which includes swimming, boating, crafts, pioneering, fishing, games and camp fire assemblies. The shortage of personnel is also being met by a permanent house mother system.

Costs $40,000 a Year.

It costs $40,000 per summer to run Wonderland camp. About $17,000 is received from the teen age boys and girls who pay to attend the youth section and by the staff members of the Salvation Army who vacation at Hillside camp, a section of Wonderland. The remainder of the money is raised thru Doughnut day and from the general treasury of the Army. This year in spite of higher costs of living, high taxes, and the numerous appeals of fund raising drives, Doughnut day was an unexpected success.

Many families who have had free vacations at Wonderland, get on their feet again and send money to the Salvation Army, saying, "Use this to give some one else a vacation like you gave me." One man has donated from $400 to $500 to the camp each year but the majority of the money comes into the Salvation Army buckets in nickels, dimes and quarters.

Dr. Przygocki. [Maurice Photo.]

Orders to report for active duty at Camp Grant were received recently by Dr. Stanley Francis Przygocki, 4868 West Warner avenue, who has practiced medicine in Chicago for 24 years. He received his medical degree from Loyola university. Dr. Przygocki holds the rank of captain in the officers reserve, a commission he has held for 15 years. He will leave for his assignment on Tuesday.

The physician is a director of the Belmont hospital, holds the fourth degree in the Knights of Columbus, is a member of the Holy Name society of Our Lady of Victory branch, the Polish Republican club and the American Legion.

Northwest Siders in Music Festival Pageant

pital. In addition to the nurses the patient almost always was attended by a member of the family who slept on the floor or under the patient's bed.

Attend Mountain School.

The children attend either their government schools or mission schools from January to October. Dr. Leckband's children attended a Lutheran missionary school with those of other missionaries in the Palni and Nilgiri mountains. Their parents would join them during the hot months of July and August and the children would be home during the cool rainy season from October to January.

Dr. and Mrs. Leckband's family numbers four, Joan, 12, Norbert Jr., 8, Garwood, 7, and Richard 2.

Dr. Leckband and his wife, who had been a missionary nurse in India before she was married, left the hospital one or two days a week to attend patients in the surrounding villages. They used a traveling dispensary and ambulance which had been equipped thru a cash gift in 1938 by the Northern Illinois Ladies' Mission Endeavor of the Lutheran church.

Dr. Leckband will resume practice in Arlington Heights He will be associated with Dr. Walter A. Schimmel. Dr. Schimmel bought Dr. Leckband's practice in 1936 when the latter and his family left for India.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Aug. 10

Monday is yet time to sow more vegetables, such as beans, radishes, carrots, beets, and Chinese cabbage. Endive is quite hardy and not easily injured by early frost. It is tender and useful in a salad when blanched.

Blanching is a means whereby light is excluded from the center leaves which causes them to be tender and light in appearance. Simply tie up the leaves with rubber bands or twine. It takes from 10 to 20 days to be ready for use.

Tuesday, Aug. 11

Order pansy seed and sow immediately to obtain strong plants for next spring's planting. When the seedlings have made some growth they should be transplanted to a frame or permanent place in the flower garden or border. Buy only a high grade strain.

Wednesday, Aug. 12

All gardeners should take good care of their equipment and especially rubber hose and spraying apparatus. Do not allowed hose to remain outdoors in full sun, but when thru using it coil it up and hang it on wall pegs to prevent pinching and subsequent leaking.

Thursday, Aug. 13

Do not pinch hardy chrysanthemums from this time on, but a good application of plant food will be beneficial and produce strong stems and abundant flower buds. Water plants in the morning to give them time to dry off before evening or mildew may attack them.

Do not cultivate vegetables too deep. The roots have had ample time to spread and many will be near the surface. These are feeding roots and should not be destroyed.

Friday, Aug. 14

Food is applied at the drip or outermost branches of a tree because the feeding roots are located there. Take a 2 inch auger and bore holes about 18 inches deep at intervals of 2 feet or more and fill half way with the food and the other half with soil. Much of the food elements will soon be available.

It cannot be expected, however, that long neglected, stunted trees will ever regain their luxuriant appearance.

Saturday, Aug. 15

Madonna lily bulbs may be obtained soon and the earlier they are planted the better. Plant only 2 inches to the top of the bulb. If a considerable number are planted mulch with leafmold or peat. Old bulbs can be divided. Lift and divide the Virginia bluebells. If morning glories are cut when in bud they make fine early morning displays.

FOUR COUNTIES PLAN TO SPEED VOTERS' SIGNING

In all of the counties affected, voters may register any time during office hours with their county clerks. Registration usually takes less than 10 minutes.

The voter is first sworn. Then he gives the deputy information concerning his address; length of residence in state, county, and precinct; nation of birth, citizenship status, and age. Finally he signs his name to the permanent registration cards. When he votes he signs a card before he is given a ballot, and this signature is compared with the one on file. He need never register again unless he changes his name or address.

Under the new act, a man in service need not register in order to vote by absentee ballot. To secure an absentee ballot, the man in service may secure an application from his county clerk and fill out and return the affidavit he will be sent. The county clerk will then send him an official ballot, which he can mark and return in time to reach his regular polling place before the polls close on election day.

Hold Picnic Thursday.

Members of the junior division of the Larrabee review, Woman's Benefit association, will sponsor a picnic Thursday afternoon in Caldwell woods of the forest preserves, Milwaukee and Devon avenues.

CLAY TILE COMES TO THE FORE AS REPAIR MATERIAL

Not Needed for War, It's Durable and Beautiful.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

After thousands of years of use, genuine clay tile is more than ever to the fore. It has an age old reputation for enduring soundness and beauty, and it is not considered a critical war material.

If a bathroom or a kitchen in your home is in need of repair there is tile for your consideration. For some time color has played a leading part in our homes and we all know what can be accomplished with it, how it can counteract structural and architectural defects, overcome poor lighting and poorly planned exposures. Manufacturers of tile have been aware of these truths and have developed tiles to the point where color combinations are almost limitless.

One manufacturer of these clay tiles has gone to great care to enable prospective customers to see the possibilities of tile, and its harmonious color balanced combinations. Assembled and interchangeable panels of full sized tile are to be found in dealers' show rooms.

These closely approximate the appearance of a finished installation so that a home owner can experiment with endless color combinations and know with certainty that he has what he wants before he makes his final selection.

Many Patterns Available.

There's an interesting and comparatively new line of decorated tiles introduced into the tile family. Here very dainty and provocative patterns have been applied under the glaze so that the softness of the decoration cannot be marred or impaired.

A variety of all over effects is seen in this tile and each pattern is offered in 13 flower-tint color combinations. They all have the charm of the finest wall paper patterns.

In a dealer's showroom displaying these tiles you can see a certain pattern which is a copy of a delicate French wall paper, and available in 13 color combinations.

Rickrack and fluted patterns also adapt themselves to different type rooms, and under their glaze these lovely tracings are as easy to clean as china. This type tile can be grouped with plain tile to form unusual backgrounds of contrast and beauty.

Modern Mosaic Floors.

Ceramic mosaic floors can be very modern in treatment with design motifs instead of conventional all over repeat patterns. The same wide choice of color combinations is possible in floors as in walls, the colors balanced within themselves and with the wainscot.

Dealers are qualified and ready to give individual problems the study they need and to suggest smart variations of specially designed bands and insets, and all installations are guaranteed. And with floors, as with walls, you can see before you, thru the use of the interchangeable sections of full size tile panels, the floor as it will appear in your own home.

STAFFS PREPARE FOR BLACK-OUTS IN COMMUNITIES

Study Rules for Test on Wednesday Night.

gency operations under the rules. Also, they are directed to the fact that during a test black-out an opportunity may exist for sabotage or other subversive or unlawful action.

Householders are instructed to turn out all exterior and interior lights. Interior lights may be used when properly obscured from the outside. Lights must be checked in such places as basements, porches, attics, garages, barns, and other structures, as well as automobiles parked on the premises. Home owners who find it necessary to be away from home on the night of the practice must extinguish all lights before leaving.

People to Stay Indoors.

Persons in their homes are instructed to remain indoors until the all-clear signal is sounded, not to use the telephone unless absolutely necessary for emergency purposes, and to keep all dogs, cats, and other pets indoors.

The management or operators of hotels, apartment buildings, and rooming houses are instructed to notify all tenants so that they may be cognizant of the test and turn out all lights visible from the outside. Fire escape lights must be properly shielded.

SMALLER WISCONSIN SPOTS TO HAVE ONLY DIM-OUTS WEDNESDAY

The middle west general black-out Wednesday will be only gray in some towns in Wisconsin, according to black-out instructions issued last week by the Wisconsin civilian defense office.

Milwaukee and other large industrial cities which have already had practice black-outs will be completely blacked out, while the smaller towns will experience their first dim-outs. In general the large cities will follow the regional black-out instructions.

War industries will not stop during the black-out, and in the smaller towns they have already made black-out preparations, no attempt will be made to extinguish the industrial lights. Railroad lights necessary for operation will not be extinguished and the interurban lines as well as the trains will continue to operate at a safe rate of speed. Buses and street cars in all towns will proceed to the nearest corner and stop, turning out their lights. Black-out curtains are optional in hospitals in the small towns.

In the smaller towns, street lights will not be extinguished and stop and go signs will operate as usual. Car drivers, tho, must draw over to the curb at once and put out their lights.

Emergency vehicles, such as ambulances or fire engines, have been instructed to cover their lights with an opaque material which may have a three inch slit a half inch wide. However, in many of the small towns, the emergency vehicles have been unable to obtain any such material.

Hanson Park Club

The Hanson Park Woman's Social club will meet at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in its club room, 5639 Grand avenue. Mrs. Anna Rizzo will preside.

4 MORE BOUTS SCHEDULED ON W-G-N-MUTUAL

Four more bouts on the Cavalcade of Sports have been arranged and will be broadcast by W-G-N and Mutual. Featuring outstanding boxers in nearly all weights, the bouts will be broadcast from Madison Square Garden at 9 p. m. on their respective dates by Don Dunphy and Bill Corum.

On Thursday, Aug. 13, Bobby Ruffin and Bob Montgomery, lightweights, will meet for 10 rounds. On Sept. 10 Freddie Cochrane and Ray Robinson will meet for 10 rounds in a welterweight battle. On Friday, Sept. 25, Chalky Wright is scheduled to defend his featherweight title in a 15 round bout with Lulu Constantino. Tami Mauriello and Lee Savold will meet for 10 rounds on Friday, Oct. 30.

The principal announcing chore on the broadcasts is handled by Don Dunphy who gives the blow-by-blow description; Bill Corum provides the color sidelights.

W-G-N TO CARRY MUSIC FESTIVAL FOR TWO HOURS

Many Highlights Slated on Mutual Network.

Two hours of the Chicago Music Festival, sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., will be broadcast over W-G-N starting at 8 o'clock next Saturday night. The first hour from 8 to 9, usually occupied by America Loves a Melody, will be broadcast also over the Mutual Broadcasting system. Jack Brickhouse will be the commentator and Philip Maxwell, director of the festival, will present much of the background.

The program will be opened with the world première of "Victory," a march overture by Nathaniel Shilkret, featuring the festival symphony orchestra of 114 men under the direction of Henry Weber, general musical director of the festival. Mr. Shilkret will be on the stage with Mr. Weber during the première and will also act as one of the judges for the vocal contests. Other judges will be Mme. Maria Kurenko, soprano concert star, and Dr. Rudolph Ganz, president of the Chicago Musical college.

Plan Community Singing.

Next the 85,000 spectators will be led in community singing by Frank Bennett, choral director. They will sing "Deep in the Heart of Texas," "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree," and then to the tune of "Keep the Home Fires Burning" all voices will be raised in a pledge to the men in our armed services that "we'll keep the home fires burning till you come home." Army camps and naval stations all over the world will be notified of this pledge from the midwest and invited to listen in.

The finalists in the vocal contest will be heard next. The two best men and two best women singers will broadcast to the background of the festival symphony orchestra. The judges will select the winners from the finalists of 12 preliminary festival contests held thruout the middle west with a total of more than 1,000 contestants.

While spectators sing "Here Comes the Navy" to the tune of the "Beer Barrel Polka," 300 men from the Great Lakes Naval Training station will march on the field headed by Lieut. Comm. E. E. [Eddie] Peabody, king of the banjo and director of the naval station's orchestra. Peabody will then conduct a typical "Happy Hour" program which is a popular feature of the station. The program will include selections by the concert and dance bands, specialty numbers, a banjo solo by Peabody, and a medley by the Great Lakes choir of 130 voices directed by Chaplain H. F. Hanson.

Women's Chorus to Be Heard.

The winning women's chorus will be heard next. The winner of the trombone contest will next be announced and will be followed by the men's choral winners who will sing "Wings Over America."

The entire audience will take part in a match lighting ceremony which has been a feature of the festival for many years.

A detachment of marines under the command of Lieut. Col. Carlton Hill will stage a drill to be followed by performances by a massed plectrophonic orchestra and a massed accordion band. The plectrophonic orchestra of 1,000 fretted instruments will play "Marcheta" by Schertzinger, while more than 1,000 accordionists will play an army, navy, and marine medley. A marimba orchestra of 160 marimbas directed by Clair Omar Musser will be heard playing the "Bolero" by Rosales, "Dance of the Comedians" from the "Bartered Bride," and Verdi's "Anvil Chorus" from "Il Trovatore."

Following a massed community sing led by Carl Craven, the festival's winning pianist will be introduced and will play a Saint-Saëns piano concerto accompanied by the marimba orchestra.

Men of Steel to Sing.

A highlight of the festival will be the chorus of the Men of Steel featuring 80 workers of the Carnegie Illinois company's Gary plant. They will be directed by Harry S. Walsh, musical director of W-G-N's Northerners' program. The men will be dressed in overalls and will sing before a huge replica of a portion of a steel mill. The men will be accompanied by the Carilco band when they sing the "March of the Steel Men" and "At the Ramparts We Watch."

Rise Stevens Will Sing on Kostelanetz Program

Rise Stevens, Metropolitan Opera mezzo-soprano, will make a guest appearance with André Kostelanetz' orchestra at 3:30 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS. She will sing "Falling in Love With Some One" and "Why Do I Love You?" Albert Spalding will play "Indian Summer."

HUMBOLDT PARK DRIVE UNDER WAY FOR MUSIC DISCS

Youths Gather Them for Fighters' Aid.

A drive to collect phonograph records for the men in the armed forces has been started in the Humboldt Park community by the American Youth reserves under the direction of Mrs. Helen L. Gordon, youth activities director for the Humboldt Park civilian defense community. Bulletins have been circulated thru the neighborhood announcing the theme of the drive, "Can you spare a tune for a man in uniform?"

A house to house collection of records will be made thru this month by the members. On Saturday the youth of zone 21, headed by Evelyn Lazar, will hold a street dance on Artesian avenue between Hirsch street and Le Moyne avenue. Admittance will be the purchase of a 10 cent defense stamp or the presentation of a record.

High Point Aug. 26.

The drive will be climaxed on Wednesday, Aug. 26, at a community youth dance and floor show in Humboldt park, 1400 North Sacramento boulevard. Again records will be the price of admittance.

Seventy-five boys and girls met recently for the opening program in an August sport event for young people in the reserves from 12 to 15 years old. Placing first in the 90 yard swim was Douglas Rucker of the Humboldt Park boys' club. Winnifred Dizonno, 916 North Kedzie avenue, was first in the 60 yard event and her sister, Ydanda Dizonno was first in the girls' 30 yard event. Eugene Majka, 2536 Augusta boulevard, a member of the Deborah Boys' club, placed first in the boys' 30 yard event.

Caps as Prizes.

Individual prizes are awarded to the prize winners and runners-up in the relays are awarded sailor caps which bear the emblem of the American Youth reserves.

The American Youth reserves was organized this spring by the Office of Civilian Defense to give boys and girls in each community an opportunity to serve in war activities.

MARION CLAIRE GUEST ON MUSIC THAT ENDURES

Marion Claire, soprano star of America Loves a Melody, will make a guest appearance on W-G-N's Music That Endures concert at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow night.

Miss Claire will sing four selections: "Tomorrow," by Strauss; "Pourquoi," from Delibes' "Lakme"; Sadero's "Fa la, Nana, Bambin," and Strauss' "Devotion."

Miss Claire will be accompanied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, and by the chorus, led by Robert Trendler. Lewis James will produce the program. The orchestra's selections will be Dvorak's "Slavonic Dance No. 10," "Debussy's "Ballade," and the first movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 10. The program will be broadcast over the Mutual network.

'CAMP GRANT IN REVIEW' POPULAR ON MUTUAL CHAIN

Charles Victor Featured on Soldier Show.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Charles Victor, W-G-N entertainer who joined the army after returning from Hollywood, where he made his first picture, is contributing to the weekly broadcasts of "Camp Grant in Review" over the Mutual Broadcasting system. Pvt. Victor is attached to Camp Grant's recruit reception center. Victor appears in "Sweet and Hot," starring Victor Mature and Lucille Ball.

Pvt. Charles Victor.

Camp Grant in Review, which features a variety of soldier entertainment, including musical and dramatic sketches, is broadcast at 1:30 p.m. every Wednesday over Mutual. WROK, Rockford, operating on a frequency of 1,440 kilocycles, is the nearest outlet, since W-G-N carries a local program at that hour. WROK can be heard thru sensitive and selective receivers in the metropolitan area.

Several men who as civilians were well known in radio circles appear on these reviews from time to time. Corp. Florian ZaBach, violinist, formerly of the W-G-N orchestra, is featured occasionally. Others are Corp. Bob Thomas, formerly of the Breakfast Club and Club Matinée troupes; Pvt. Doug Culver, swing pianist and vocalist; Pvt. Leonard Baylinson, Chicago novachord player.

Three of the camp musical organizations furnish the musical background, rotating in cycles of three weeks. They are the Medical Training Center band under the direction of Sergt. Fred M. Sargent, a onetime Chicagoan; the Recruit Reception Swing Cats, directed by Corp. Jack Koehne, and the Medical Training Center Dance orchestra, directed by Technical Sergt. John Wallace.

A recent Mutual network survey showed Camp Grant in Review listed as fourth in popularity among the sustaining [nonsponsored] programs on the chain. It was topped by America Loves a Melody, Letters to My Son, and A Date with Don Norman.

The camp program is under the supervision of Capt. A. E. Mealiff, public relations officer, and is produced by Corp. Martin Bouhan, who also does the announcing.

Church Card Party.

St. Peter's church of Antioch will hold its annual card party at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the church hall.

LAKE, M'HENRY COUNTIES SPEED VOTERS' SIGNING

Move to Avoid Last Minute Rush.

Lake and McHenry counties have joined in the general movement to get voters to register early under the new permanent registration system now being inaugurated in counties of less than 500,000 population. This will avoid a last minute rush that might swamp the machinery set up by the new act for getting all eligible electors permanently registered.

Voters may register at any time between now and Oct. 6 by appearing in person at their county clerk's office. There will be two general registration days, when every regular polling place will be open to sign up the voters.

Because the combined methods are inadequate to handle the volume of applicants expected, special registrations are being held in all localities thruout the two counties.

Lake County Registrations.

Lake county has already held special registrations in several of the larger centers, it was announced by County Clerk J. D. Morse. Next Tuesday and Wednesday the special deputies will visit Lake Villa and Wauconda. On Wednesday special registrations will also be held in Grayslake, Round Lake, and Lake Zurich [for Ela township].

Later, probably the last week of August, additional one day registrations will be held in Highland Park, Deerfield, Lake Forest, Lake Bluff, Winthrop Harbor, Newport, Cuba, and Libertyville. The time and places for these registrations will be made known thru posters and otherwise, Morse said.

He said that by last week about one-fifth of the estimated 80,000 voters in the county had been registered. He added that this proportion should be more than doubled before the present campaign ends. It is being assisted by such organizations as the League of Women Voters, political party groups, and individuals.

Plan McHenry Registrations.

County Clerk Raymond D. Woods of McHenry county announced that special registrations are being held in every city, village, and township in the county at least one day each week. Deputies are on hand two days a week in such larger centers as Harvard, Huntley, Crystal Lake, Marengo, McHenry, Cary, Fox River Grove, Algonquin, Hebron, Richmond, Greenwood, and Hartland.

Because only 2,500 of an estimated 27,000 potential voters have thus far registered, large numbers must avail themselves of the special arrangements if a disastrous last minute rush is to be avoided, Woods said.

When the smaller counties have complied with the new act, the entire state will be under permanent registration. Previously this form of franchise qualification was adopted by all of Cook county and by nine downstate cities which operate under election boards. These nine are Aurora, Bloomington, Cairo, Danville, East St. Louis, Galesburg, Peoria, Rockford, and Springfield.

A Simple Procedure.

Registration is simple, officials said. To register, a voter is first sworn. Then he answers questions concerning his name, address, length of residence in state, county, and precinct, his birthplace, citizenship status, and age.

He then signs his name for the permanent registration files. When he votes he must sign his name in the presence of election officials, who will compare the signature with the one on file before giving him his ballot. The one registration is effective indefinitely, so long as the voter does not change his name or address, whereupon he must notify the county clerk.

The act provides that those in military service need not register to vote by absentee ballot. To secure such ballot the soldier, sailor, marine, nurse, or other service man or woman makes application to his county clerk, by mail or in person, for an affidavit, which he must fill out and return.

The county clerk then will send him an official ballot, which the voter is expected to mark and return in time to be delivered to his regular polling place before the polls close on election day.

Importance of Personnel Placement Is OCD Topic

"The Importance of Proper Personnel Placement" will be the subject of Herbert P. Cole, chairman of the volunteer recruiting division of the East Lakeview office of civilian defense, at 8 o'clock Friday evening in OCD headquarters, 3133 North Clark street. This is the second in a series of lectures on "Personnel and Civilian Defense" which are open to all residents in the district.

Mrs. Charles Melvoin New Head of Hadassah District

Mrs. Charles Melvoin has been elected president of the North Shore district of Hadassah for the coming year. Other new officers include Mrs. Mortimer Weiss, recording secretary; Mrs. Jack Behn, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Leon Segil, financial secretary. Mrs. Charles Levitetz, Mrs. Joseph Rosen, and Mrs. Josephine Becker will serve as vice presidents.

Communities' Staffs Prepare for Black-Out

Community commanders and their staffs have been asked to familiarize themselves with the contents of the recently issued manual for practice black-out covering the test for Wednesday night when it will be the goal of the Office of Civilian Defense, Chicago metropolitan area, to darken the landscape as deeply, between 10 and 10:30 p. m., as it was before the first settler lit his cabin lamp.

Offices of the division chiefs will be in operation during the first area black-out in the middle west and will act as a clearing house for instructions to and questions from community commanders. Reports immediately after the all-clear signal has sounded shall include ground observation from each block and reports of any accidents.

Community commanders have been instructed to be on duty to see that zone captains and block captains are properly instructed and prepared for the test. The community office will act as a clearing house for all questions that occur in the community, except such occurrences as require action by the central control.

Zone Captains' Duties.

Zone captains are instructed that it shall be their duty to see that all block captains under their jurisdiction understand instructions before the black-out occurs, and that they are completely staffed and ready for the test. Zone captains shall see that all orders are transmitted to zone organizations and shall supervise the operations of block organizations to the extent necessary to see that they are functioning.

Each block captain [or senior air warden as he is called in the suburban areas] will be responsible for all Civilian Defense activities within the territory assigned to him.

It shall be the duty of the captain or warden to so station his staff as to control the public in the observation of the rules and regulations enforced during the test period, and to make report of ground observations and accidents, if any occur. If violations are observed his organization is advised to make corrections where possible and obtain the coöperation of the public.

No Forcible Compliance.

If violations of the rules occur, the OCD is not to attempt a forcible compliance, but report the matter to the central room for action by the proper local enforcement officers. They are to resort to calls to the central room only when diplomacy and persuasion have failed.

Block captains are advised to use discretion to avoid any unnecessary interference with the movement of vehicles which are, in fact, on emergency operations under the rules. Also, they are directed to the fact that during a test black-out an opportunity may exist for sabotage or other subversive or unlawful action.

Householders are instructed to turn out all exterior and interior lights. Interior lights may be used when properly obscured from the outside. Lights must be checked in such places as basements, porches, attics, garages, barns, and other structures, as well as automobiles parked on the premises. Home owners who find it necessary to be away from home on the night of the practice must extinguish all lights before leaving.

People to Stay Indoors.

Persons in their homes are instructed to remain indoors until the all-clear signal is sounded, not to use the telephone unless absolutely necessary for emergency purposes, and to keep all dogs, cats, and other pets indoors.

The management or operators of hotels, apartment buildings, and rooming houses are instructed to notify all tenants so that they may be cognizant of the test and turn out all lights visible from the outside. Fire escape lights must be properly shielded.

All industries, except as provided for, shall participate in the black-out and shall extinguish all lights visible from the outside. The only exceptions are in the cases where vital industries have been instructed by proper military authorities to continue production, but at the same time, participate in the black-out to the utmost of their ability. Emergency lights must be properly shielded.

DIM-OUT IN WISCONSIN

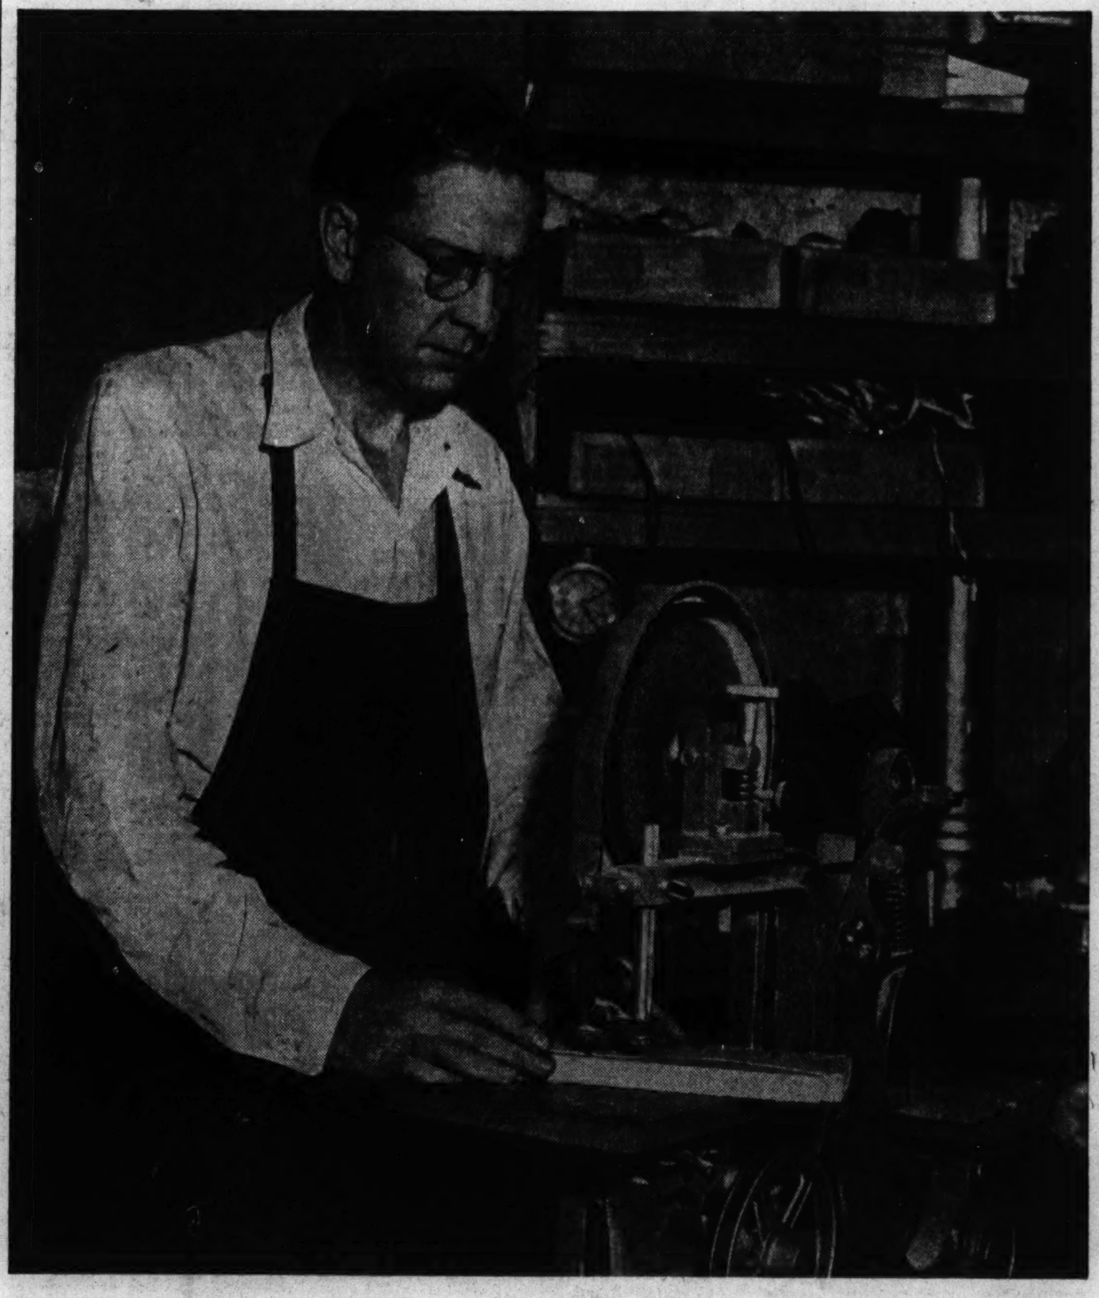
The middle west general black-out Wednesday will be only gray in some towns in Wisconsin, according to black-out instructions issued last week by the Wisconsin civilian defense office.

Milwaukee and other large industrial cities which have already had practice black-outs will be completely blacked out, while the smaller towns will experience their first dim-outs. In general the large cities will follow the regional black-out instructions.

War industries will not stop during the black-out, and in the smaller towns they have already made black-out preparations, no attempt will be made to extinguish the industrial lights. Railroad lights necessary for operation will not be extinguished and the interurban lines as well as the trains will continue to operate at a safe rate of speed. Buses and street cars in all towns will proceed to the nearest corner and stop, turning out their lights. Black-out curtains are optional in hospitals in the small towns.

In the smaller towns, street lights will not be extinguished and stop and go signs will operate as usual. Car drivers, tho, must draw over to the curb at once and put out their lights.

Builds Model Ships for Navy Classes



Manufacturing ship models for the navy is the hobby of Warner M. Washburn, Highland Park. In his basement workshop he operates a band saw to shape the hull of a new model. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Builds Models of Ships for Naval School

Manufacturing ship models with lighting systems that are completely accurate is one of Warner M. Washburn's talents which the navy has found to its advantage.

The Highland Park man, who resides at 494 Fairview road, has created three ships, each 36 inches long and 27 inches high, which are serving today in classrooms of the naval training school [signals and diesel] at the University of Illinois.

"How to signal with ship lights is hard to learn out of a book," says Lieut. Charles H. Bowman, commanding officer of the school. "That's why we find Mr. Washburn's models so helpful. Most of our boys never have been aboard a man sized boat and so it's hard for them to visualize these complicated processes."

Placed on Desks.

The ships are mounted on swivel bases and stand ready for use on the desks of three instructors in the school. When it's necessary to explain the combination of lights indicating "man overboard," they need only touch the proper buttons for the demonstration. Or, possibly they're describing running lights, anchor lights, breakdown lights, guard lights. These signals, and many more, can be shown with the 27 lights mounted on the model ships.

According to Lieut. Bowman, the instructors and the 800 trainees vie with each other in their enthusiasm for the miniature models.

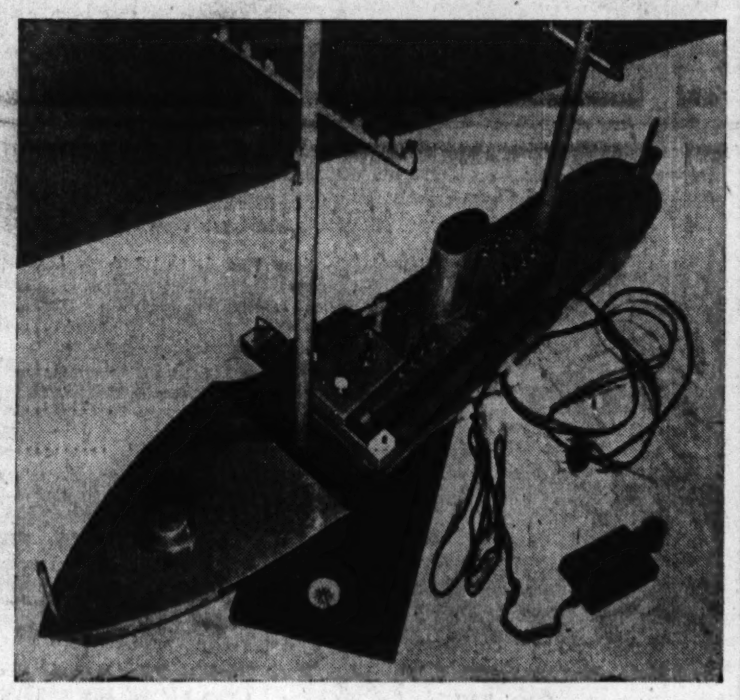
Equipped with Switches.

In addition to the 27 lights, the ships are equipped with the necessary switches and transformers. Each has a high frequency radio buzzer for demonstrating whistle signals and a telegraph key to operate both the directional blinker signal and the yardarm blinker lights. While the models represent no particular type of boat, they embody the characteristics of all, including mast, stack, bridge, and pilot house.

Washburn, who is a partner in a loop brokerage firm, went to work on the project in December. The three models were completed during his spare hours by May 1.

Perfection of plans for the ships grew out of the coöperation of navy signalmen and Lieut. Bowman, working with Washburn.

All of the actual carpentry and wiring was done in the Washburn basement workroom, which is replete with bench saw, lathes, sanders, jig saws, and even equipment for metal work.



The finished model, on a swivel base and complete with 27 miniature lights, is ready for use in the classrooms of the naval training school (signals and Diesel) at the University of Illinois.

Effingham County Picnic Set for Next Sunday

The annual Effingham county picnic for all former residents of the southern Illinois county will be held next Sunday in the Forest Hill picnic grove on Higgins road. It will be an all-day picnic with a basket dinner at noon. Forest Davis of Arlington Heights is picnic chairman and Mrs. Frances Martin, 7650 Touhy avenue, is assisting with arrangements. The picnic grove is located one and one-half miles west of the Arlington Heights road.

NEW TRIER G. O. P. GIVES VOTE AID TO SERVICE MEN

Aid in securing the military addresses of all service men and women from New Trier township, so that they may be provided with absentee ballots to vote in the Nov. 3 election, was asked last week by the New Trier Republican club.

Edmund W. Burke, president of the club, said that the club is endeavoring to make it possible for every New Travian in the service to vote. Since no one agency can furnish the present addresses of all such persons, he asked families and friends of all persons in military service to inform the club where to send the ballot applications. These names should be sent to Burke at 205 Lawndale avenue, Wilmette.

Each resident of the township now in service in the continental United States will be sent an application for the regular absentee affidavit. Upon receiving this affidavit properly filled out, the county clerk will mail the applicant an official ballot. This ballot, properly marked and returned before the polls close on election day, will then be counted exactly as though the absentee voter had visited the polls in person.

B. E. Laughead Commands Van Buren Legion Post

Warns Dog Owners.

Police Chief Theo A. Hall, Wilmette, has warned that dogs found at large without leashes will be picked up and arrest tickets issued to owners.

FAMILY IS PROUD AS BAKING EXPERT ENLISTS IN NAVY

A draft deferment, a wife, and two children did not keep Orris Hall, 6609 North Artesian avenue, from volunteering. Father of 14 year old Vivian Dolores and 9 year old Theodore, Mr. Hall gave up his job as a bakery engineer last week to enlist in the navy. He will use his old skills instructing in baking at the naval aviation base at Glenview as a chief petty officer. "I am glad he could enlist," Mrs. Hall said. To help support the children she has taken a part time selling job to supplement Mr. Hall's smaller salary in the navy.

4 Evanston Blood Donors Awarded Silver Buttons

Silver buttons for third time donations to the American Red Cross blood bank were presented to four Evanstonians recently. The donors were Joseph B. Mann, 719 Mulford street; William Beier, 1131 Madison street; Virginia Baker, 913 Monroe street, and Thomas R. King, 2950 Payne avenue.

Dante Band to Be Heard Tonight in Lincoln Park

The Dante Concert band, under direction of Forcellati Dante, will present a two hour concert beginning at 8 o'clock this evening in Lincoln park. Mildred Gerber, coloratura soprano, will be the featured soloist, and Warren Anderson will serve as commentator.

NAVY NOW HAS 87 PER CENT OF ITS ROTC GRADS

N.U. Course Pays Big Officer Dividend.

The naval ROTC unit of Northwestern university has graduated 367 men with the rank of ensign in the naval reserve since its inception in 1926, and of these commissioned men, 318, or approximately 87 per cent, are now in active service.

Northwestern university has made a survey of all who have received the military training. The survey also discloses that most of the 13 per cent not in the navy are engaged in activities deemed more essential by the navy department.

Many of Northwestern's ROTC graduates already have distinguished themselves in action. Because of officer-like qualities displayed by Ensign Herbert Spencer Calvin while under fire at Pearl Harbor, he has been advanced in rank to lieutenant junior grade.

Lieut. Dillon Cited.

Lieut. Charles R. Dillon, 7745 North Hermitage avenue, 1939 graduate, has received citations from Washington for heroism. Some months ago, while flying a patrol bomber, he sighted and sank a Jap submarine.

Another Northwestern ensign, promoted to lieutenant junior grade since the outbreak of war, is Theodore F. Grefe, former football player. He was made chief gun pointer and athletic director on the U. S. S. ward.

Cliff Groh, son of Mr. and Mrs. George V. Groh, Wilmette, a 1940 ROTC graduate, has been writing history in the skies over China as the youngest member of the American volunteer group. After leaving Northwestern, he continued his naval training in the air corps in Pensacola.

William Nugent McMillen has been made commanding officer of Mine Sweeper U. S. S. Paramount.

Get Places of Responsibility.

These are the records of only a few of the recent naval ROTC graduates. One by one they're taking their places in command of sub chasers, on armed freighters, in submarine crews, on patrol duty. They're manning battleships and destroyers. They're line officers on aircraft carriers.

How is it they are able to assume responsible positions immediately after they report for active duty? In their four year course of study lies the answer to this question.

As college freshmen they enroll in the naval ROTC and begin their classes in naval science and tactics. This training so supplements the academic course of the university that upon graduation ROTC members possess the essential qualifications of a junior officer of the naval or marine corps reserve. These are listed as a good general education; a practical working knowledge of essential naval subjects; a well disciplined mind and body; ability to assume responsibility and initiative, and a well developed sense of naval ideals, customs and traditions.

Naval Officers Are Instructors.

The four year course, which is under the control of the navy department, includes a basic course in seamanship, ordnance, gunnery, and communications. The advanced course takes up marine, steam and electrical engineering, navigation and nautical astronomy, fire control, and military law.

To gain practical as well as theoretical knowledge, cadets are required to spend part of one summer cruising on a navy boat. Until 1941 this cruise took them into the Atlantic or Pacific oceans. Last summer 128 cadets spent several weeks aboard the U. S. S. Wilmette cruising in northern Lake Michigan. The Great Lakes will continue to be the scene of the practice cruises until the end of the war.

The staff of the Northwestern naval ROTC consists of six officers in active service of the navy, headed by Commander S. D. A. Cobb, who has had many years of active naval experience. They are assisted by four chief petty officers who have retired after from 16 to 20 years' active service.

Former heads of the unit are Capt. Norman C. Gillette, who is now at sea, Capt. E. D. Washburne and Capt. E. A. Wolleson, now commanding officer at Navy Pier.

One of First in Country.

Organized in 1926, Northwestern's Naval ROTC was one of the first three established in the country. Others followed within the year, and by the end of 1926 units were operating at Harvard, Yale, Georgia Tech, University of Washington and the University of California, as well as at Northwestern. Today there are 27 such units.

Originally, the units were limited to 200 members. The war has expanded the number permitted to enlist in the corps, and this last semester's unit included 313 members, 48 of whom won athletic letters at the university.

The naval ROTC corps at Northwestern was housed in campus buildings in the beginning, but quickly outgrew these quarters. In 1927 it was provided with its own building, and in 1939 the building was doubled in size.

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

Sergt. Christian A. Walter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Walter, 1802 Juneway terrace, has been selected for officer training at Fort Benning, Georgia. While on furlough before reporting for his new duty, Christian visited his family and former ROTC mates of Waller High school. He is a former commander of the unit, and in 1937 won a CHICAGO TRIBUNE medal for being an outstanding cadet.

Sergt. C. A. Walter.

Five north siders were among the men inducted last week into the navy air force. Included in the quintet was Louis Byrne Jr., 6710 Lakewood avenue. A football standout in high school, Byrne completed his education at Loyola university. Others sworn in were Donald Taylor, 2844 Clybourn avenue; Eugene Conrad, 820 Webster avenue; Thomas Boylan, 833 South boulevard, Evanston, and Thomas Shields, 4114 Fletcher street. The cadets took the navy oath of allegiance in the offices of the navy cadet selection board in the Board of Trade building.

Sergt. Emanuel J. Krinner, formerly stationed at the Columbus army flying school in Mississippi, began classes last Thursday in the air force officer candidate school at Miami Beach, Fla. The son of Mrs. and Mrs. E. A. Krinner of Zion, he enlisted in the service a year ago and was sent to Barksdale field, Louisiana, where he received his basic training. He was transferred to Mississippi in January and promoted to sergeant in February. Krinner attended Zion college.

Pvt. Robert V. Wilcox of Evanston has begun basic training in the finance replacement training center at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana. Pvt. Wilcox was an accountant before entering the army.

From Fort Sill, Oklahoma, comes word that Wilbur P. Brown, 5321 North Ashland avenue, was graduated from the officer candidate school there and commissioned a second lieutenant. He will be stationed at Camp Roberts, Cal.

Corp. W. J. Fillatreault, 2607 Eastwood avenue, is home on a 10 day furlough from Camp Robinson, Ark., before leaving for Officers' Candidate school at the Aberdeen proving grounds, Maryland.

Corp. W. J. Fillatreault.

A graduate of the Officer Candidate school at Fort Sill, Okla., Lieut. Howard W. Lewand, son of Mrs. Anna Lewand, 1415 Foster avenue, will take up new duties shortly in Camp Atterbury, Indiana.

The navy preflight school in Iowa City announces the appointment of Howard Redd Hinrichs, son of the Karl H. Hinrichs, 363 Sunset road, Winnetka, and Samuel P. Carson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Carson, 455 Washington avenue, Glencoe, as cadet officers. Young Hinrichs is now a cadet lieutenant, while Carson is a cadet second class petty officer.

Announcement was made this week of the promotion of John T. Waidner, son of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Waidner, 1046 Greenwood avenue, Wilmette, to corporal at the signal corps replacement training center in Camp Crowder, Missouri.

Maj. Karl E. Voelter, son of Mrs. L. L. Voelter, 919 Leland avenue, has been placed in charge of flight training for the marines in Peru, Ind. Maj. Voelter, a graduate of Crane Technical High school, was former commanding officer of the marine corps aviation unit in Miami, and one of the first reserve officers of the marine corps to be called to active duty.

Maj. Karl Voelter.

Albert A. Goldstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Goldstein, 745 Gordon terrace, is now a first sergeant at Barksdale field, Louisiana. He is with a chemical warfare unit.

Two Chicagoland boys received their navy wings of gold and ensign commissions last week from the naval air station at Corpus Christi, Tex. The flyers are William J. Marshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Marshall Jr., 1140 Hinman avenue, Evanston, and Robert O. Zimmerman, son of the Fred W. Zimmermans, 2548 West Leland avenue, Chicago.

Louis Baylen, 4842 North Talman avenue, now in training with the Wildcat infantry division at Camp Rucker, Alabama, has just been promoted to corporal.

MILITARY UNITS TO STIR CROWD NEXT SATURDAY

Several thousand north siders will take part in the 13th annual Chicago Music Festival in Soldiers' field next Saturday. Sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., the festival is being dedicated this year to the armed forces and will be one of the greatest musical military shows ever attempted. Profits of the festival will be turned over to army and navy relief.

More than 10,000 will take part in the festival. A thousand of these participants will be young girl dancers, many of whom will come from north side homes. They will take part in the dance pageant which will be an outstanding feature. Many more north siders will take part in the civilian defense exhibition to be given by the Commonwealth Edison company. Members of the Wheelmen of America will give a timely note to the grand entrance parade at 7 o'clock by riding into the field.

Dancers to Form Flag.

Wearing red, white, and blue ballet costumes, the dancers will enter the field in formations representing airplanes. Their dance routines will represent the spirit of youth. Attached to each girl's shoulders will be a knapsack from which, at the end of the dance, there will be unfurled a part of the American flag, resulting in a huge flag covering the entire field.

This flag suddenly will disappear and the dancers will make a hasty exit. As they leave the field they will cover their heads with blue-green scarfs and will hold seagulls, attached to their wrists, above the scarfs, thus creating an effect of seagulls flying over rippling water.

The dancers will come from the Ideal Dancing institute and the summer schools of the Young Men's Christian association. They are under the direction of Miss Mayblossom Macdonald, dancing instructor and artistic director of the pageant, and Miss Wilhelmina Aveling, assistant program director of the Y. M. C. A. schools. Assisting on the north side are Ardis Higgins and Eleanor Bender of the Wilson avenue Y. M. C. A., Kay Hough, North avenue, and Carole Hass.

The dancers will be accompanied by the festival orchestra which will be directed by Henry Weber of W-G-N.

Other North Side Leaders.

North siders taking prominent parts in the festival include Dr. Edgar Nelson, 1510 Cullom avenue, general choral director; Fred Miller, 601 Deming place, field supervisor; Howard Stube, 1413 Jonquil terrace, chairman of the instrumental participation, and Mrs. Edmund J. Tyler, 2104 Giddings street, chairman of the vocal and choral contests.

The Evanston American Legion drum and bugle corps will take part in the grand entrance parade and more than 300 sailors from the Great Lakes naval station will give a choir number under the direction of Lieut. Comm. E. E. Peabody and Chaplain Hjalmar Hansen.

The festival will be preceded by a luncheon Friday noon in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House. This will be the sixth annual festival luncheon and the honor guests will be Dr. Rudolph Ganz, pianist and composer, and Mara Kurenko, Russian lyric soprano. All seats to the luncheon in the ballroom have been sold but foyer seats still are available. Those sitting in the foyer will be brought into the ballroom after the luncheon to hear the program. Tickets are $1.75 and may be purchased from the festival headquarters on the fourth floor of the Tribune Tower.

Program at Luncheon.

Philip Maxwell, festival director, will be festival toastmaster at the luncheon. Clair Omar Musser, 4518 North Hermitage avenue, will play the marimba and vibraharp at the luncheon. He also will direct 160 marimbas at the festival. Another luncheon feature will be a vocal solo by Nancy Rose Zeller, 215 East Chestnut street. Another north sider, Porter Heaps, 2308 Central street, Evanston, will play organ preludes at both the luncheon and festival.

Reserved festival tickets are 55 cents and $1.10. Wednesday is the deadline for obtaining them by mail but they may be purchased any time at the Tribune public service offices, either in the Tribune Tower or at 1 South Dearborn street.

Events leading up to the grand finale on Saturday night include several preliminary contests. There will be a contest for instrumentalists at 7 o'clock Tuesday night in the grand ballroom in the Drake hotel.

Evanston Girl on Duty at California Air Base

An Evanston girl is doing her part in the war effort by working for the army air force at Gardner field, California. She is the former Elise Green, 812 Dobson street, who was married last February to Sergt. Gale Johnson of Chicago. While her husband is on duty, she is serving as secretary to the officer in charge of special services and athletic events at the field.

150 NORTH SIDERS SHARE IN WEEK'S TIRE RATIONING

'rewery and Dairy Given Largest Allotments.

One hundred fifty north side residents were granted permits for 283 tires and 298 tubes for week ending July 31, rationing board figures disclosed.

Eighty-five motorists obtained permission to buy 55 tires and 128 tubes for passenger vehicles, while the 65 others were allotted 228 truck tires and 170 truck tubes.

Schlitz Brewing company, 966 Ogden avenue, and the Bowman Dairy company, 140 North Ontario street, were granted the largest number of tires—17 truck casings each.

Festival Dancers from North Side

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Aug. 10

Monday is yet time to sow more vegetables, such as beans, radishes, carrots, beets, and Chinese cabbage. Endive is quite hardy and not easily injured by early frost. It is tender and useful in a salad when blanched.

Blanching is a means whereby light is excluded from the center leaves which causes them to be tender and light in appearance. Simply tie up the leaves with rubber bands or twine. It takes from 10 to 20 days to be ready for use.

Tuesday, Aug. 11

Order pansy seed and sow immediately to obtain strong plants for next spring's planting. When the seedlings have made some growth they should be transplanted to a frame or permanent place in the flower garden or border. Buy only a high grade strain.

Wednesday, Aug. 12

All gardeners should take good care of their equipment and especially rubber hose and spraying apparatus. Do not allowed hose to remain outdoors in full sun, but when thru using it coil it up and hang it on wall pegs to prevent pinching and subsequent leaking.

Thursday, Aug. 13

Do not pinch hardy chrysanthemums from this time on, but a good application of plant food will be beneficial and produce strong stems and abundant flower buds. Water plants in the morning to give them time to dry off before evening or mildew may attack them.

Do not cultivate vegetables too deep. The roots have had ample time to spread and many will be near the surface. These are feeding roots and should not be destroyed.

Friday, Aug. 14

Food is applied at the drip or outermost branches of a tree because the feeding roots are located there. Take a 2 inch auger and bore holes about 18 inches deep at intervals of 2 feet or more and fill half way with the food and the other half with soil. Much of the food elements will soon be available.

It cannot be expected, however, that long neglected, stunted trees will ever regain their luxuriant appearance.

Saturday, Aug. 15

Madonna lily bulbs may be obtained soon and the earlier they are planted the better. Plant only 2 inches to the top of the bulb. If a considerable number are planted mulch with leafmold or peat. Old bulbs can be divided. Lift and divide the Virginia bluebells. If morning glories are cut when in bud they make fine early morning displays.

Nancy Rose Zeller, 8 year old vocalist, will be among the guest artists at the Chicago Music Festival luncheon Friday in the Grand ballroom of the Palmer House. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Zeller, 215 East Chestnut street.

BLOCK PARTIES HELP RAISE FUND FOR SERVICE MEN

Block Four, bounded by Ravenswood avenue, Clark street, Estes avenut, and Greenleaf avenue, in the Rogers Park-Clark civilian defense area, has started a series of card parties and entertainments to promote aquaintance among the block residents and to raise money for gifts to men in service.

One of the smallest blocks in Rogers Park, it has sent more than a tenth of its population into the services as well as 20 more men who formerly worked in the block's stores. They include: Corp. Theodore F. Bierchen, stationed at Fort Ord, Cal., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Bierchen; Michael Krischler, P. F. C., Australia, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Louis Krischler; Tom Ennis, technician on the northern Pacific coast, son of block organizer, Thomas F. Ennis; Edward Joseph Mahoney, motorcycle department, Camp Polk, Mississippi, son of Clarence E. Mahoney who is a veteran of the first World war and recently qualified as an auxiliary defense policeman; Earl McKee, Coast Guard headquarters, Savannah, Ga., son of Mrs. Bernice Miller, who is superintendent of Block Four messengers; E. J. Laukes, naval ammunition depot, Oahu, Hawaii, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Laukes, and Francis Wemeskrich, medical department, Camp Shelby, Mississippi, son of Mrs. Rose Wemeskrich.

The committee in charge of the parties, under the direction of Mrs. Mildred Molinaro, chairman, includes Bernadette Anderson, Mrs. Anne Frisby, Phyllis Piro, Mrs. Marie Siedlak, Mrs. Barbara Eklund, and Mrs. Augusta Van Harlingen.

CLAY TILE COMES TO THE FORE AS REPAIR MATERIAL

Not Needed for War, It's Durable and Beautiful.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

After thousands of years of use, genuine clay tile is more than ever to the fore. It has an age old reputation for enduring soundness and beauty, and it is not considered a critical war material.

If a bathroom or a kitchen in your home is in need of repair there is tile for your consideration. For some time color has played a leading part in our homes and we all know what can be accomplished with it, how it can counteract structural and architectural defects, overcome poor lighting and poorly planned exposures. Manufacturers of tile have been aware of these truths and have developed tiles to the point where color combinations are almost limitless.

One manufacturer of these clay tiles has gone to great care to enable prospective customers to see the possibilities of tile, and its harmonious color balanced combinations. Assembled and interchangeable panels of full sized tile are to be found in dealers' show rooms.

These closely approximate the appearance of a finished installation so that a home owner can experiment with endless color combinations and know with certainty that he has what he wants before he makes his final selection.

Many Patterns Available.

There's an interesting and comparatively new line of decorated tiles introduced into the tile family. Here very dainty and provocative patterns have been applied under the glaze so that the softness of the decoration cannot be marred or impaired.

A variety of all over effects is seen in this tile and each pattern is offered in 13 flower-tint color combinations. They all have the charm of the finest wall paper patterns.

In a dealer's showroom displaying these tiles you can see a certain pattern which is a copy of a delicate French wall paper, and available in 13 color combinations.

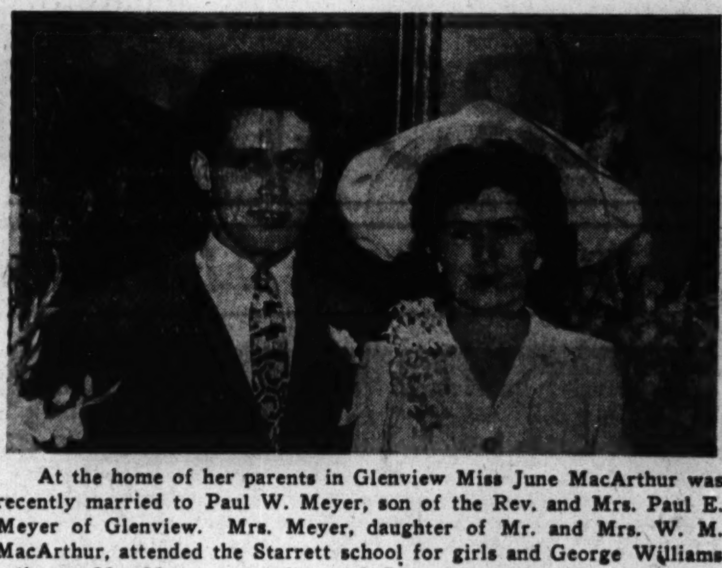
Rickrack and fluted patterns also adapt themselves to different type rooms, and under their glaze these lovely tracings are as easy to clean as china. This type tile can be grouped with plain tile to form unusua backgrounds of contrast and beauty.

Modern Mosaic Floors.

Ceramic mosaic floors can be very modern in treatment with design motifs instead of conventional all over repeat patterns. The same wide choice of color combinations is possible in floors as in walls, the colors balanced within themselves and with the wainscot.

Dealers are qualified and ready to give individual problems the study they need and to suggest smart variations of specially designed bands and insets, and all installations are guaranteed. And with floors, as with walls, you can see before you, thru the use of the interchangeable sections of full size tile panels, the floor as it will appear in your own home.

Married at Home in Glenview



At the home of her parents in Glenview Miss June MacArthur was recently married to Paul W. Meyer, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Paul E. Meyer of Glenview. Mrs. Meyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. MacArthur, attended the Starrett school for girls and George Williams college. Mr. Meyer, a graduate of Concordia college in Milwaukee, expects to enter the navy soon. [Koehne Photo.]

Junior Minutemen.

The Junior Minutemen corps of Glencoe will meet at 10 o'clock Saturday morning in the Glencoe theater to discuss progress in its war bond campaign.

GUEST PASTORS OCCUPY PULPITS ON NORTH SHORE

Methodist Executive Talks in Evanston.

The Rev. Edward D. Kohlstedt, an executive secretary of the board of missions and church extension of the Methodist church, will speak on "Certainties and Uncertainties" at the 11 o'clock service this morning in the First Methodist church of Evanston. Assisting minister will be the Rev. Arthur T. Clark, who has just returned to Evanston after a three months' absence because of illness.

Union services for the Evanston congregations of Covenant Methodist and Northminster Presbyterian churches will be held again today in the Covenant church. Church school at Northminster will meet as usual at 9:45 o'clock this morning during the union services.

The Rev. W. Edward Stokesberry, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church, St. Petersburg, Fla., will be the guest speaker at Second Presbyterian church in Evanston this morning.

At the 9 and 10 o'clock services this morning in the Trinity Lutheran church, Glencoe, the Rev. Paul A. Mundinger will preach on "The Requisites for the Christian Life."

Engineers Conduct Survey of Glencoe Sewer System

The Glencoe village board has employed a Chicago engineering firm to make a survey of both the storm water and sanitary sewer systems of the village. The report, which will be completed before Sept. 15, will be used to determine the nature and cost of necessary sewerage improvement.

SCULPTOR OPENS EVANSTON CLUB ARTS CALENDAR

Will Model Member When She Talks Oct. 20.

The Evanston Woman's club fine arts department program of classes in poetry, dramatics, creative writing, and music will be highlighted next year by leading speakers and entertainers, according to plans announced by Mrs. William H. Knapp, new chairman of the department. The entertainments are scheduled for Tuesday afternoons, while the classes will all meet on Fridays.

Suzanne Silvercruy, famous sculptor and daughter of the late Baron Silvercury, who has been decorated twice by European governments for her achievements in the field of art, will open the season Oct. 20, in a lecture and demonstration as a sculptor by modeling a subject chosen from her audience.

Maureen Whipple, author of "The Giant Joshua," will tell her experiences as an author in a talk entitled, "How Writers Get That Way" on Nov. 17. As a prelude to the Christmas season, Mrs. Richard Campbell, an authority on religious literature, will speak Dec. 15 on "The Bible as Living Literature."

The Evanston Music club will provide the entertainment Jan. 19 with a vocal selection by Mrs. Charles C. Wells, a former president both of the woman's club and the music club. Other artists who will appear are Mrs. Logan Eldredge, Mrs. William N. Forbis, Mrs. Dean McSloy, Mrs. Dwight L. Myers, Mrs. Floyd A. Owens, and Miss Arlene Walker.

Members of the club's own dramatic study group will present their annual production Feb. 16. Final feature of the year will be a presentation March 30 of "Joan of Arc," by Martin and Olga Stevens, nationally famous puppeteers who conduct the Stevens Marionette theater at Middlebury, Ind.

Evanston Catholic Women.

A series of service men's parties at the National Catholic Community Service organization's USO center in Highwood have been planned by the social service committee of the Catholic Women's club of Evanston under the direction of Mrs. H. A. Bruening.

The parties, beginning this month, will be held once a month with club members serving as hostesses and directing the festivities. Mrs. F. A. Kobler will head the committee in charge of the August party, and arrangements for later events will be directed in turn by Mrs. Neil Benedict, Mrs. Gerald J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. E. B. Craven, Mrs. Joseph A. Furey, Mrs. L. W. Brault, Mrs. R. E. Law, Mrs. C. S. O'Leary, Mrs. F. C. Lindstrom, and Mrs. W. J. Gedl.

Club members are also busy with other special projects resulting from the war. Many are giving their time to serve as hostesses at the Service Men's center on Howard street. Others are carrying on a continuous program of Red Cross work, directed by Mrs. Craven, general chairman. The unit is meeting every Monday morning at the clubhouse, and a food and nutrition course has just been completed. Mrs. Gedl is assisting Mrs. Craven with the work and serves as chairman of knitting and keeper of records.

Plans are also in the making for a series of benefit parties which the social service committee will sponsor in the early fall to raise funds for the club's expanded service program. Besides promoting a party Nov. 4 at the clubhouse, the committee also will arrange several smaller parties to be given at the homes of members of the committee.

On the social service committee are Mrs. J. R. Bent, Mrs. F. L. Borre, Mrs. Brault, Miss Mabel Brennan, Mrs. M. E. Carter, Mrs. J. J. Corcoran, Mrs. Craven, Mrs. Ed Farrell, Mrs. Arthur Fink, Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Furey, Mrs. Gedl, Mrs. T. C. Gorman, Mrs. D. M. Hubbard, Mrs. Timothy Jans, Mrs. G. N. Jenkins, Mrs. Camille Jongleux, Mrs. J. P. Kenny, Mrs. Kobler, Mrs. L. G. Lindsey, Mrs. F. C. Lindstrom, Mrs. T. P. Mack, Mrs. J. A. Maloney, Mrs. F. M. McElroy, Mrs. J. P. Murphy, Mrs. O'Leary, Mrs. L. J. O'Shea, Mrs. W. L. Pollard, Mrs. F. J. Powers, Mrs. R. D. Siragusa, Mrs. Samuel Topliff, and Mrs. L. A. Whyte.

Garden Club of Illinois.

Historical Stonegate lodge, the country estate of Mrs. Louis E. Leverone on Half Day road, Highland Park, will be the site of the monthly meeting and all day picnic of the Garden Club of Illinois tomorrow. The Highland Park Garden guild, under direction of Mrs. Dean McCormick, president, will serve as cohostess for the day.

Members not motoring will be met at the Highland Park North Western station by cars and a country wagon designated by a white flag. Members will take their own box luncheons while beverage and dessert will be served by the hostess.

The board meeting will be held at 11 o'clock, followed by the luncheon at 1:30 o'clock. Miss Jane Conrad, Winnetka, will show her floral and garden pictures. Mrs. Mahlon Ogden Bradley, Highland Park, will make flower arrangements of summer flowers on a marble table in the formal garden, while Rep. Bernice T. Van der Vries of the 7th senatorial district will give a talk on conservation. Walks and rides over the estate also are scheduled.

Return from Western Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond T. Moloney Jr. have just returned from a two weeks stay in Sun Valley, Idaho, following their recent marriage. Mrs. Moloney is the former Catherine Rutherford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Rutherford, 2015 Jarvis avenue. She is a graduate of North Park college. Her husband, son of the Raymond Moloneys of Wilmette, attended Lake Forest college and was graduated from Northwestern university. [Koehne Photo.]

Golf Balls Sought for Fort Sheridan Soldiers

The Fort Sheridan Volunteer committee, headed by Mrs. Gerald G. Grant of Glencoe, has issued a plea for new or used golf balls for soldiers at the fort. A collection box has been placed at 341 Park avenue, Glencoe, for contributions.

OCD to Offer Swimming Lessons in Highland Park

Highland Park residents may learn how to swim as part of the OCD physical fitness program. Registration blanks for classes which begin Aug. 17 may be secured at the Central Avenue or Roger Williams beaches.

MRS. E. C. LENNOX HEAD OF DELTA GAMMA AID UNIT

Group to Keep Active All Summer.

Mrs. Edwin C. Lennox has been elected president of the Delta Gamma unit of Bundles for Bluejackets, navy section of Bundles for America, for the coming year. She succeeds Miss Jane Whitacre, who will continue on the board as recording secretary but is unable to remain as president because of other work she is doing at Great Lakes.

Other new officers are: Mrs. Burr Lee, vice president; Miss Gertrude Michelet, treasurer; Mrs. W. M. Welch, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ralph E. Blanchard, chairman of layettes [made for babies of men in the service]; Mrs. Fred Raymond, knitting chairman, and Mrs. Glen Wilson, membership chairman. Mrs. W. Stanley Strong, president of the North Shore Alumnae association and Mrs. Wallace B. Behnke, president of the house board, are also serving on the bluejackets board.

Members of the unit are continuing their work on knitted garments this summer without interruption. Meetings are held the first and third Mondays of each month at the homes of various members. A yarn depot has been established at the home of Mrs. Lee at 2523 Harrison street, and members call there to obtain yarn for their knitting.

Pi Beta Phi.

The Chicago North Alumnae club of Pi Beta Phi will give a benefit bridge Wednesday at 1:15 o'clock in the Public Service building, 911 Church street, Evanston. Proceeds are to go to United China relief. Mrs. G. W. Raleigh, 735 Madison street, Evanston, is chairman.

Alpha Chi Omega.

Because of the closing of the chapter house for redecorating, the alumnae will hold the remainder of its Red Cross unit meetings at the home of Mrs. Walter T. Bell, 2501 Park place, Evanston. Work has been continuing all summer on various assignments for the Red Cross with the group meeting each Wednesday afternoon under direction of Mrs. Arne Bodholdt, chairman.

RED CROSS UNIT AT DE PAUL SELLS BONDS, STAMPS

The De Paul university unit of the American Red Cross has undertaken a new war work project. Members are selling war stamps in store booths near the university buildings at 2235 Sheffield avenue, according to Kathryn J. Miller, dean of women.

Members of the unit, which is already meeting every week to make bandages and distribute knitting and sewing materials, include students of the university, faculty members, and women of the neighborhood.

The main booth in a store at Fullerton avenue and Lincoln avenue will be staffed thruout the week by Mrs. Marie Mott, Katherine Kordenat, Gladys Cotton, Katherine Reuland, Mary Ellen Powers, Doris Scharfstein, Jean Modjeska, and Kathryn J. Miller.

Engagement Announced

Mrs. B. M. Harrison, 1032 North Dearborn street, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Lee, to Richard Clearwater, 2805 Van Buren street. Both Miss Harrison and Mr. Clearwater graduated from Wright Junior college. No date has been set for the wedding.

Air Officers' Bride

Suspend Services.

Renamed to Art Post.

Mrs. E. Royce Armstrong has been reappointed to the Evanston Art commission, it was announced at the city council meeting last week.

29 NORTH SIDE GIRLS ATTENDING 2 YWCA CAMPS

Fifteen north side high school girls are swimming and horseback riding at the YWCA Camp Sagawau for the third period which opened last week while 14 north side young business women are relaxing at the YWCA Forest Beach camp.

Carol Arnold, 3834 North Hoyne avenue, was the first camper to pull a big fish from the Camp Sagawau old stone quarry. Both she and Myra Selkow, 5953 Winthrop avenue, have earned their Red Cross life saving certificates at camp. Sonia Kramer, 6920 Sheridan road, has completed a special training course for junior camp counselors.

Kenilworth Red Cross Will Meet Twice Weekly

The Kenilworth Red Cross unit will meet twice a week, rather than once a week as formerly. Regular work will continue on Monday, and a second group will meet Thursday to make surgical dressings. Both meetings will be held in Kenilworth Union church.

Named Draft Official

Because of the resignation of Grover C. McLaren, Ralph M. Snyder of Glencoe has been appointed government appeal agent for Cook county local draft board 3.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Austin J. Fitzgerald, 2117 Arthur avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor Marie, to Raymond A. Maher, son of Mrs. Raymond Maher, 6438 North Bell avenue. Miss Fitzgerald is a graduate of St. Scholastica academy and attended Mundelein college. Mr. Maher has entered military service.

SISTER DRESSES
in Young, Crisp Faille

Some dote on Princess Dresses . . . others adore Two-piece Suit Dresses, but one thing certain, they all love young, crisp rayon faille for all-round occasions. We're proud of our twin motifs for both favorite styles . . . rayon faille in aqua at the shoulders and collar, buttonholes stitched to match. Sizes 9 to 15 Dress and Two-piecer in black or brown.

It's the smartest purchase you can make, sartorially and economically speaking—you'll work in a suit, serve in a suit, and have fun in a suit—it gives you many costumes in one, for a suit changes its personality with a change of accessories—a good suit you'll wear 'round the calendar, it'll be the mainstay of your wardrobe and you'll wear it proudly year after year.

4 MORE BOUTS SCHEDULED ON W-G-N-MUTUAL

Four more bouts on the Cavalcade of Sports have been arranged and will be broadcast by W-G-N and Mutual. Featuring outstanding boxers in nearly all weights, the bouts will be broadcast from Madison Square Garden at 9 p. m. on their respective dates by Don Dunphy and Bill Corum.

On Thursday, Aug. 13, Bobby Ruffin and Bob Montgomery, lightweights, will meet for 10 rounds. On Sept. 10 Freddie Cochrane and Ray Robinson will meet for 10 rounds in a welterweight battle. On Friday, Sept. 25, Chalky Wright is scheduled to defend his featherweight title in a 15 round bout with Lulu Constantino. Tami Mauriello and Lee Savold will meet for 10 rounds on Friday, Oct. 30.

The principal announcing chore on the broadcasts is handled by Don Dunphy who gives the blow-by-blow description; Bill Corum provides the color sidelights.

W-G-N TO CARRY MUSIC FESTIVAL FOR TWO HOURS

Many Highlights Slated on Mutual Network.

Two hours of the Chicago Music Festival, sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., will be broadcast over W-G-N starting at 8 o'clock next Saturday night. The first hour from 8 to 9, usually occupied by America Loves a Melody, will be broadcast also over the Mutual Broadcasting system. Jack Brickhouse will be the commentator and Philip Maxwell, director of the festival, will present much of the background.

The program will be opened with the world première of "Victory," a march overture by Nathaniel Shilkret, featuring the festival symphony orchestra of 114 men under the direction of Henry Weber, general musical director of the festival. Mr. Shilkret will be on the stage with Mr. Weber during the première and will also act as one of the judges for the vocal contests. Other judges will be Mme. Maria Kurenko, soprano concert star, and Dr. Rudolph Ganz, president of the Chicago Musical college.

Plan Community Singing.

Next the 85,000 spectators will be led in community singing by Frank Bennett, choral director. They will sing "Deep in the Heart of Texas," "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree," and then to the tune of "Keep the Home Fires Burning" all voices will be raised in a pledge to the men in our armed services that "we'll keep the home fires burning till you come home." Army camps and naval stations all over the world will be notified of this pledge from the midwest and invited to listen in.

The finalists in the vocal contest will be heard next. The two best men and two best women singers will broadcast to the background of the festival symphony orchestra. The judges will select the winners from the finalists of 12 preliminary festival contests held thruout the middle west with a total of more than 1,000 contestants.

While spectators sing "Here Comes the Navy" to the tune of the "Beer Barrel Polka," 300 men from the Great Lakes Naval Training station will march on the field headed by Lieut. Comm. E. E. [Eddie] Peabody, king of the banjo and director of the naval station's orchestra. Peabody will then conduct a typical "Happy Hour" program which is a popular feature of the station. The program will include selections by the concert and dance bands, specialty numbers, a banjo solo by Peabody, and a medley by the Great Lakes choir of 130 voices directed by Chaplain H. F. Hanson.

Women's Chorus to Be Heard.

The winning women's chorus will be heard next. The winner of the trombone contest will next be announced and will be followed by the men's choral winners who will sing "Wings Over America."

The entire audience will take part in a match lighting ceremony which has been a feature of the festival for many years.

A detachment of marines under the command of Lieut. Col. Carlton Hill will stage a drill to be followed by performances by a massed plectrophonic orchestra and a massed accordion band. The plectrophonic orchestra of 1,000 fretted instruments will play "Marcheta" by Schertzinger while more than 1,000 accordionists will play an army, navy, and marine medley. A marimba orchestra of 160 marimbas directed by Clair Omar Musser will be heard playing the "Bolero" by Rosales, "Dance of the Comedians" from the "Bartered Bride," and Verdi's "Anvil Chorus" from "Il Trovatore."

Following a massed community sing led by Carl Craven, the festival's winning pianist will be introduced and will play a Saint-Saëns piano concerto accompanied by the marimba orchestra.

A highlight of the festival will be the chorus of the Men of Steel featuring 80 workers of the Carnegie Illinois company's Gary plant. They will be directed by Harry S. Walsh, musical director of W-G-N's Northerners' program. The men will be dressed in overalls and will sing before a huge replica of a portion of a steel mill.

NORTHERNERS TO AIR 'PRAYER FOR PURIFICATION'

Tschaikowsky's "A Prayer for Purification," based on the finale of his Sixth symphony, will be sung by the octet as a feature of The Northerners program, to be aired from 9:30 to 10 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N.

Lois Wallner, soprano star of the program, will sing Jerome Kern's "You Are Love" from "Show Boat." The ensemble will be heard in a medley of tunes including "The Humming Bird," "Left, Right," and "Autumn Nocturne." They will also present selections from "Gulliver's Travels."

The octet will present Zatta's "Pound the Table Polka," D'Hardelot's "Because," and Polla's "Dancing Tambourine," as well as the Tschaikowsky selection.

Named Air Raid Warden.

Mary Afflick, whose Women for Victory program is heard on W-G-N at 12:15 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, has been appointed air raid warden for her block on Chicago's north side.

MARION CLAIRE GUEST ON MUSIC THAT ENDURES

Marion Claire, soprano star of America Loves a Melody, will make a guest appearance on W-G-N's Music That Endures concert at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow night.

Miss Claire will sing four selections: "Tomorrow," by Strauss; "Pourquoi," from Delibes' "Lakme"; Sadero's "Fa la, Nana, Bambin," and Strauss' "Devotion."

Miss Claire will be accompanied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, and by the chorus, led by Robert Trendler. Lewis James will produce the program. The orchestra's selections will be Dvorak's "Slavonic Dance No. 10," "Debussy's "Ballade," and the first movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 10. The program will be broadcast over the Mutual network.

FIRE AND POLICE AIDS TO TAKE OATH ON RADIO

More than 8,000 men will be given the oath of indoctrination as auxiliary firemen and policemen before the band shell in Grant park during ceremonies to be broadcast over WBBM at 3:15 p. m. today. Mayor Kelly will preside. The Mundy choir, an a capella group of 100 colored singers, will contribute to the broadcast. The auxiliary firemen and policemen, as a part of the Office of Civilian Defense, have completed their instructions and are now ready to supplement the firemen and policemen of the regular force.

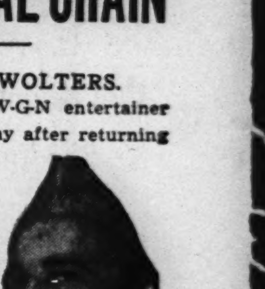
BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Charles Victor, W-G-N entertainer who joined the army after returning from Hollywood, where he made his first picture, is contributing to the weekly broadcasts of "Camp Grant in Review" over the Mutual Broadcasting system. Pvt. Victor is attached to Camp Grant's recruit reception center. Victor appears in "Sweet and Hot," starring Victor Mature and Lucille Ball.



Pvt. Charles Victor.

Camp Grant in Review, which features a variety of soldier entertainment, including musical and dramatic sketches, is broadcast at 1:30 p.m. every Wednesday over Mutual. WROK, Rockford, operating on a frequency of 1,440 kilocycles, is the nearest outlet, since W-G-N carries a local program at that hour. WROK can be heard thru sensitive and selective receivers in the metropolitan area.

Several men who as civilians were well known in radio circles appear on these reviews from time to time. Corp. Florian ZaBach, violinist, formerly of the W-G-N orchestra, is featured occasionally. Others are Corp. Bob Thomas, formerly of the Breakfast Club and Club Matinée troupes; Pvt. Doug Culver, swing pianist and vocalist; Pvt. Leonard Baylinson, Chicago novachord player.

N. U. SEMINAR TO GLANCE INTO WORLD OF 1992

Council of 26 Is Planning Study of Trends.

With the opening of the fall quarter at Northwestern university, a "Council for the Future" will begin its study of the probably character of civilization for the next 50 years.

Twenty-six faculty members, each with a student assistant, will sit in a two-hour session one night a week probing problems of the future and attempting to discover their solutions.

"Altho the council does not expect to answer these problems fully," Baker Brownell, chairman of the group, explains, "it does hope to find out what they will be."

The tentative program of research, just announced, is based on the council's belief that science, or technology, will be the dominant factor in the future of human culture. In accordance with this theory, the program is divided into four categories.

Study Power Resources.

Group I, under the chairmanship of Harry Wells, vice-president and business manager of the university, will consider the probable effect of technology on human action. Natural resources of power and production the world over will be studied. Council members will examine transportation and communication, and manufacturing and processing as affected by technology. The future of agriculture, mining, and conservation will be scrutinized.

The second broad division will concern the probable effect of technology on social structure and institutions. Under the guidance of Earl Dean Howard, former professor of sociology at the university and now rent director of the Chicago OPA, the group will study the future of labor organizations, public and private ownership, population, and the family as a unit. It will emphasize the rôle of education in a technological society.

Trends in Morals.

The probable effect of technology on human values, attitudes, and human competence will be centralized in the work of Group III, headed by Thornton W. Merriam, director of the university board of religion. This will include study of trends in morals, religion, leadership, mental hygiene, and health. It will propose social objectives for the future.

Prof. Brownell, general chairman of the seminar and professor of philosophy at Northwestern, will direct the fourth group in its research into the probable effect on ideas and ideologies. This will include discussion of tendencies in art and philosophy, changing intellectual patterns and systems.

Altho the 26 members of the council are all specialists in various fields and represent a wide variety of opinion, as little bias as possible will be injected into the discussions, Prof. Brownell said.

"The world has suffered seriously because we have attacked problems from the narrow attitude of specialists," he continued. "Problems are not going to be solved in that way. They must be approached as a whole."

Avoid Peace Plans.

"Even now universities are doing little to acquaint students with the problems of the future, and it is hoped that the findings of the council will help remedy this situation."

Brownell emphasized that the council has no intention of considering or formulating peace plans.

Members of the faculty coöperating are George Axtelle, associate professor of education; Harold T. Davis, professor of mathematics; Dean O. W. Eshbach of the Techniological institute; Dean Leon Green of the Law school; H. C. Havighurst, professor of law; Elmo Hohman, professor of economics; Mrs. Helen Fisher Hohman, lecturer in University college; G. D. Hudson, professor of geology; A. C. Ivy, professor of physiology; Clark Kuebler, assistant professor of classical languages.

Lecture and Discussion.

Others are Irving Lee, instructor in speech; Mrs. Ruth McCarn, counselor to women; Paul Meadows, instructor in sociology; Rollin B. Posey, director of summer session; Walter Dill Scott, president emeritus; Alpheus Smith, associate professor of English; Tracey Strevey, associate professor of history; Lyn Waldorf, football coach; Fred E. Clark, professor of marketing; Ernest Hahne, professor of economics; Angus Campbell, assistant professor of psychology; and Franklin D. Scott, associate professor of history and correlation.

All meetings of the council will open with a lecture presenting the problem and general discussion will follow. No effort will be made to teach. The course will be entirely exploratory, involving research, and conclusions based on careful study.

AMUNDSEN PTA NAMES OFFICERS FOR NEW SEASON

Mrs. George H. Vrooman has been elected president of the Amundsen Parent-Teacher association for the coming year. Mrs. R. C. Crehore, Mrs. Louis Kern, and Mrs. Doris S. Dillon were elected vice presidents. Other officers include Mrs. R. M. Switzer, recording secretary; Mrs. Harry Russell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Clara Williams, treasurer; Mrs. Arthur Lewand, historian; Miss Irma E. Swanson, auditor.

New committee chairmen are Mrs. Clara Williams, budget and finance; Mrs. J. R. Shirk, civilian defense coordinator; Mrs. A. R. McArthur, homemaking; Mrs. Floyd A. Reyner, hospitality; Mrs. T. G. Evans, juvenile protection; Mrs. James J. Swiskow, membership; Mrs. Henry M. Sherman, publicity; Mrs. R. C. Crehore and Mrs. A. R. McArthur, program.

Others are: Mrs. J. P. Sterling, recreation; Mrs. L. C. Royse, school education; Mrs. F. A. Carelin, social; Mrs. Arthur Lewand and Mrs. L. C. Royse, student aid, and Mrs. Louis Kern, ways and means.

Lessons by Mail Mean School Time for Claire

Claire Kahler, 10 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Kahler of the Seneca hotel, has her lessons in the mornings with her mother for teacher. Claire's father is in the entertainment field, and Claire has had to do all of her school work by correspondence because traveling with her parents has meant going thru 46 states and living in 22 of them in the last eight and one-half years. Lessons are outlined by a correspondence school. Free time Claire uses to pursue her hobby of puppetry. She writes her own scripts for shows with Little Duke, the dog, Bozo, the clown. 10,000 EXPECTED AT 'LADY DAY IN HARVEST' FEAST

Irish to Rally in Harms Park Saturday.

More than 10,000 descendants of the old Irish clans will gather to mark the feast of "Lady Day in Harvest" Saturday at Harms park, 4207 North Western avenue. The celebration will be featured by Irish music, song and dance.

Mayor Kelly is among the leading Chicago citizens of Irish birth or descent invited to speak on the patriotism of Irish-Americans. Bishop Bernard J. Sheil has been named honorary chairman of the day. The program also will include athletic contests, competition among pipers, fiddlers, flute and accordion players and an Irish Feis, or series of contests in music and dancing.

Contest for Greatest Name.

Chicago's leading clans will compete for the honor of being known as the greatest Irish name in Chicago. Among family names registered for the "Battle of the Clans" are Murphy, Sullivan, Kelly, O'Brien, Burke, Ryan, O'Connor, McCarthy, Gallagher, and O'Malley.

A special prize will be awarded to the oldest Irish man or woman attending the outing and to the largest Irish family. American war heroes of Irish extraction and their families will be honored and a prize given to the family with the greatest number of sons in the armed services.

Thomas Cook, chairman of the entertainment committee, announces that there will be both ancient and modern Irish and popular American airs for dancing. Special numbers will be played on the Irish war pipes by Eddie Mullaney.

John Hurley Chairman.

John J. Hurley is general chairman of the Chicago program, assisted by P. J. Flannery, vice president. H. Emmet McHugh is secretary, John McGinnis, treasurer; Edward B. Dwyer, John O' Shea, William B. Sheehan, and T. F. Cook, trustees. Judge John P. McGoorty and Roger Faherty are co-chairmen of the executive committee.

Elaine Gilford recently became the bride of Lieut. David Hessell, an army flyer who had just received his wings. The young couple is now in Greenville, S. C., where Lieut. Hessell is stationed. Both are graduates of the University of Illinois. Mrs. Hessell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Gilford, 508 Aldine avenue. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hessell, 133 North Central avenue.

NORTH SIDE COUPLE MARKS GOLDEN DAY IN DOOR COUNTY, WIS.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Cornell, who have resided at 1200 Addison street for 19 years, recently celebrated their golden wedding with a reception at Washington Island, Door county, Wisconsin. They were married in Door county, where both of them were reared.

Elmer Cornell.

Mrs. Cornell.

Eight of their nine children attended the reception, including a son, Merle, chief yeoman in the coast guard, who is stationed at Staten Island. Their daughter, Mrs. Berle McKenzie, married to a postal worker in the Canal Zone, was unable to return for the celebration. Their children who reside in Chicago are Mrs. Alfred Mueller, wife of a policeman; Mrs. Thomas White, and Lloyd Cornell.

Mr. Cornell is a caretaker for the Chicago Title and Trust company. For several years he also has served as sexton for the Trinity Lutheran church.

SONS OF NORWAY TO HOLD PICNIC AT HARMS PARK

The Sons of Norway lodges of Chicago and Evanston will hold their annual picnic this afternoon in Harms park, 4200 North Western avenue. This regular reunion of the 11 lodges comes as a climax to the Sons of Norway convention held in Chicago during the last three days with representatives from 14 states and Canada in attendance.

During the afternoon the Order's soccer team will compete with the Norwegian-American Athletic association team. Softball games between teams of the Bjornsterne-Bjornson, Leif Eriksen, Nora, Roald Amundsen, and Jonas Lie lodges will entertain the picnickers. The Chicago Sons of Norway drill team will pass in review, and the children's chorus will sing American and Norwegian songs.

CLAIRE'S SCHOOL KEEPS UP WITH FAMILY'S TRAVEL

She's a Child Despite Show Business.

Claire Kahler, 10 years old, is a plump little girl with hazel eyes and long, shining dark curls. She's interested in dolls. Her most absorbing activity at the moment is going to Troop 103 Girl Scout meetings at the Fourth Presbyterian church. She has just become a Scout, and she has a spanking new uniform. So, Claire seems to be like most little girls 10 years old.

Claire's lack of sophistication and her interests in little girl things are tributes to the efforts of her parents, Jerry Kahler, manager of a club at the Seneca hotel, and Mrs. Kahler. For Claire is actually far more traveled than the average adult. She's been in 46 states, [she missed Arkansas and South Dakota] and she has lived in 22 of them. At the age of 3 she played in Our Gang comedies for six months. She was a Powers model three summers ago. She's done all of her school work by correspondence.

Travels with Her Family.

Reason for all Claire's traveling is that she is the daughter of a traveling father. Jerry Kahler, who had a B. S. in engineering from the University of Ohio, used to be a kid interested in card tricks. He practiced his hobby so much that, as a college student, he earned money during vacations by doing card tricks on a Chautauqua circuit. That led to a vaudeville contract, and Kahler has been connected with the entertainment business ever since.

Claire was born 10 years ago last Dec. 29 in Fremont, O. She was a "home girl" for about 18 months, and then she went on the road with her mother and dad. As a tot, she met celebrities by the dozen. She was an expert swimmer at 2½. She spent her first movie pay checks to buy riding clothes, and among her best liked photographs are those of herself on dashing steeds which are, uniformly, shaggy, docile looking ponies.

School for Movie Youngsters.

When her baby teeth began to loosen, Daddy Kahler began to worry about going to school. "I was afraid that if I sent her away I'd lose her. She wouldn't be our little girl anymore," he says. So he took his problem to educators and finally enrolled Claire in a correspondence school in Baltimore. The school has lessons designed especially for movie youngsters and for children who travel.

So, every morning is lesson time at the Kahler apartment in the Seneca hotel. It's lesson time if the Kahlers happen to be in Denver, Seattle, New York, or Dallas.

Of course, being the only pupil means that Claire can finish her work fairly soon, but it doesn't mean that she has time on her hands. Long ago, she learned the value of hobbies. She collects jokers from playing card decks. She has more than 2,000 designs. She has two puppets, Bozo, a clown, and Little Duke, a dog. She writes shows for her puppets and produces the shows for a most appreciative audience, "Mama and daddy."

WAR OVERTAXES FAMILY WELFARE AGENCY'S BUDGET

New Cases Increase at Evanston Center.

This is one of a series of stories on the war's effects on the city's charitable institutions.

BY ANN FORD.

"Morale" was a household word at the Family Welfare association of Evanston long before it was bandied about on a national scale.

According to Mrs. Frances Schiffmann, director of the agency, morale always has been the agency's special concern. "But now," she says, "it's become even more important. We feel our work is vital to the welfare of the nation as well as to the family and individual."

Since Pearl Harbor the number of men, women, and children coming up the wooden steps of the agency's old house at 1563 Oak avenue, Evanston, has shown a marked increase. Not many of them say they've come because of the war. But the workers who talk with them can see war in the background.

Increased tension and the feeling of insecurity are magnifying family troubles, difficulties on the job, health handicaps, and worries over the budget.

Resources Are Strained.

Some of these applicants have gotten low paying full time jobs that take them off the Evanston relief rolls. Perhaps there are many children, and the pay will not stretch to cover family expenses. In an instance like this, the Family Welfare association supplements the small pay check. This, however, may have to be discontinued, Mrs. Schiffmann states, because of the increasing strain on the agency's resources. Approximately one-third of its clientele of 600 families depends upon the association for some kind of financial assistance.

A mother decides to get a job in a defense factory to augment the family budget. But she continues to carry the burdens of housewife and mother. Friction resulting from overtired nerves developes and threatens to destroy the home. The agency suggests a way out.

Adjust Family Troubles.

Broken homes call for adjustments by the children, the father, and the mother. Evidence of the strain on the children often is reflected in their school work. The association works with the school authorities until the problem is solved.

Almost all the personal difficulties known to mankind pass in review before Mrs. Schiffmann's large desk. Possibly they concern bad housing, undesirable neighborhoods, inadequate recreational facilities or bad working conditions. Maybe it's poor health.

Once the problem has been ascertained, one of the five social workers who serve at the agency is assigned to the case. If it is a matter for psychiatric treatment, a psychiatrist is called in. If legal advice is needed, a lawyer's services are supplied. Usually conferences which continue thruout the year or longer ease the situation.

Provide Children's Vacations.

Children who need vacations for physical or mental reasons are sent to camps run by various other social agencies. The Family Welfare association pays up to $35 for each of these outings.

How do people learn of the association and its work? They hear of it thru friends who have been helped, and from schools and churches. The Juvenile Probation office and the Juvenile court of Chicago send their youngsters for consultation.

They come from a variety of sources, but never thru the efforts of a worker in the agency. The association adheres to a policy of "if our service is not wanted, it will do no good."

Another of its principles is never to betray, in any way, the confidence of those who come for help.

Assisting Mrs. Schiffmann in the family welfare work are Miss Betty Meyer, case worker supervisor; Mrs. Elizabeth Keye; Miss Elizabeth Lewis; and Brewer Grant.

The agency is financed by the Evanston Community chest. Whether next year's budget will remain the same as this year's budget has not been determined. War agencies are expected to make inroads into chest funds and local agencies may be curtailed to some degree.

Agency Buys House.

Out of funds given to the association which are not earmarked for current relief expenses, the agency has bought a house at 1114 Church street which it hopes to have ready for occupancy by October 1. It will contain special rooms for case workers to interview their clients.

Members of the board of directors of the Family Welfare association are Augustus Knight, president; John Mitchell, first vice president; the Rev. John Heuss, second vice president; Jarvis Shedd, treasurer; and Mrs. F. V. Balderston, secretary. George F. Falley is chairman of the personnel committee, and E. E. Sheridan heads the finance committee.

CASE HISTORIES IN RETAILING

A Southwest Side laundry stepped up its business by 15 per cent following a schedule of 29 advertisments in the Metropolitan sections of the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Other case histories, many based on the experiences of merchants right in your own line, are yours for the asking. It costs you nothing to find out why 726 neighborhood merchants last year used the Sunday Tribune's low-cost advertising plan for retailers. For greater sales and profits, call SUPerior 0100 tomorrow and ask for Metropolitan section advertising.

OLD FIELD PIECES AT FORT TO TAKE NEW WAR ROLE

Six "old soldiers" at Fort Sheridan who have been on the retired list for a quarter of a century or more will go into battle again.

Cannons which once threw lead into enemies of the United States were collected for salvage this week in accordance with a war department order. They will be remelted into ammunition.

Field pieces, relics of 1897, a naval gun, two 7-inch howitzers, a 6-pounder, and a field gun from the Mexican war no longer stand idly on the lawn. Three guns will remain, two 3-inch field pieces, now used for salutes, and a trophy from the Philippine insurrection.

RATIONING BOARD OFFICE REVEALS QUIET WAR DRAMA

Public Eager to Make Any Sacrifice for Victory.

Birth, marriage, and death, all the milestones in a man's career, are marked in this rationing board office. In a grocery converted into a bare office, against a backdrop of home-made files, the recording angel of board 40-33 notes in indelible pencil the commonplace drama of the city from Division street north to Addison street—from Lake Michigan to the western limits. Sacrifices of the people for victory—sugar, bicycles, typewriters, tires, and cars—are quietly listed here with no flag waving.

"Junior went off to army camp last week so I guess you might as well have his sugar card." "How can I ever be a typist, if I can't buy a typewriter?" "Sure I could take the street car to work, but I'm essential to defense industry so why can't I get a tire for my car?"

Every day between 9 in the morning and 5 in the afternoon more than 200 north and northwest Chicagoans, touched by war shortages, are interviewed at the rationing board office at 2118 North Damen avenue. More than 60,000 people have registered as sugar users in the 33d ward, which this sugar rationing board serves. For other rationing the board's area includes all of the city between Division and Addison streets.

Few Want to Cheat.

According to Robert S. Ogilvy, former specifications writer for the park district and now chairman of this rationing board, only a very small minority of the people, ½ of 1 per cent, want more than their share. "It's all right with me," is the attitude of every one else, and many of them want to help the war effort so much they are afraid to ask for all they have coming to them. Altho duplicating ration cards have been issued thru errors, none of the duplicates have ever been used.

There's the small storekeeper whose allotment of 70 per cent of her usual sugar will not cover the extra canning sugar certificates this month and who is worried her customers will go elsewhere. There's the candy factory in the neighborhood which needs as much as 250,000 pounds for the next two months, but afterward will not use as much. There's the druggist who sold his fountain as a concession. Can he sell his old sugar too? Complicated situations—but Mrs. Nellie C. McDonald of the sugar rationing board, solves them all by using common sense. Mrs. MacDonald has a 20 year old daughter who can't wait until her birthday in October to join the Waac and her son-in-law is civilian defense block captain.

Families Go Berry Picking.

Many of the ration board's neighbors need extra sugar during the canning season because every Sunday they take the entire family out to the country to pick berries. The Naperville forest preserve blueberry swamps, an abandoned orchard in Indiana, Michigan farms which are letting the fruit rot because of the pickers' shortage—all these addresses and more are confided to the sugar rationing clerk. Two families have moved to Bangor, Mich., for the summer where they expect to can all the vegetables, fruit, and even poultry they use during the winter.

The pros and cons of canning receipts, in terms of the amount of sugar used, are argued in the back room of the office, while Mrs. MacDonald insists that 1 pound of sugar for 4 quarte is sufficient for any preserving. Contrary to expectations, few requests—about 5 per cent of the total—have come from the surrounding Polish neighborhood for extra sugar for canning.

Half of the requests to purchase new bicycles are caused by thievery, altho most of the remainder come from people who never rode bicycles before. Many of the women workers from the war industries in the neighborhood are buying bicycles to ride to work, while one 62 year old doctor applied for a bicycle to help him make his sick calls. A middle aged teacher requested one to help him supervise student teachers in several north side schools.

Tire Eligibility a Problem.

The greatest difficulty in alloting automobile tires is determining who is eligible for grade 2 tires. Not only must the eligible person be designated an essential defense worker by his factory but he must reside where other transportation is unavailable. A woman recently demanded a tire because she was teaching in a technical high school where machinists were being trained. She was asked if she were teaching the future machinists. No, but the school also trained electricians. No, she didn't teach the electricians. Finally it developed she taught millinery and she did not get her tire.

Thievery of automobile tires has increased since they were rationed, according to the applications the rationing board has received, but it seems to be chiefly confined to stealing spare tires from doctors who are eligible to purchase more! Several applicants have been questioned on whether they have been giving the proper amount of care to their tires. One mail delivery man whose tires melted away in a car lot bonfire brought in an affidavit to prove that it wasn't his fault.

NORTHWESTERN'S AIR RAID PLANS NOW COMPLETED

Plans have been completed for air raid defense at Northwestern university, it was announced by Morris J. Rogers, community training officer for the Evanston defense council.

All sororities, fraternities, and open houses will appoint air raid captains and lieutenants soon after the opening of school this fall.

Basements in various campus buildings have been designated as air raid shelters, and students will receive full instructions on where to go in case of emergency.

Turns Dump Into Victory Design

In an old dump back of the apartment building which he takes care of at 420 Fullerton parkway, Edmond Vervaet built this "victory" garden out of four dollars' worth of stones and three dollars' worth of paint. When the photographer suggested that Mr.Vervaet not remove his hat, he answered that he couldn't stand before the flag with his hat on.

'BUY WAR BONDS,' PROCLAIMS HIS PATRIOTIC LAWN

Belgian Native Shows Feelings About Nation.

Creeping bent grass sod cut out to spell "Buy USA War Bonds," with an extra grass horseshoe for luck, on the parkway in front of 420 Fullerton parkway expresses Edmond Vervaet's feelings about the war. In the last war, his patriotism was shown when, as a 22 year old Belgian, he captured 17 Germans and two machines guns and was awarded the croix de guerre and the chevalier de l'ordre de Leopold.

Mr. Vervaet started on a Saturday afternoon in late April to make his patriotic garden. It took him just one day to cut out the sod with scissors, transplant it in a neighbor's car, line the letters up with a yardstick, and cover the rest of the ground with top dressing. Now, it takes him only about an hour a week to keep the letters outlined clearly and the background weeded. He is fully repaid for his effort when he sees his neighbors stopping to read the slogan or when people getting out of cars refrain from walking across his parkway.

Beautiful Back Yard.

In addition to this garden in front of the apartment biulding for which he is caretaker, Mr. Vervaet has transformed the unsightly back yard into a bit of greenery which catches the eyes of tenants of the surrounding tall buildings. Here, this year, within a framework of petunias and morning glories, he has dyed stones to form an American flag above red, white, and blue wooden V's for victory. The stars in the flag are cut from old tin cans.

Because he likes "to see things nice," Mr. Vervaet's chief ambition is to make Chicago the most beautiful city in the world. He has made a beginning on his project, by winning prizes for three years in the park district's Save Lawn campaign for the finest bent grass apartment house lawn on the north side. At the apartment house be had taken care of previously, Mr. Vervaet trimmed the bushes to make a formal landscape resembling an old Belgian château garden. Before he will be content, he hopes that all the real estate owners will follow his example and every apartment house will have its name cut out of sod in the parkway in front of it.

Came Here in 1921.

Mr. Vervaet, who studied art in Belgium, came to the United States in 1921. Thru a varied career beginning with truck farming in Texas and including sausage making in Chicago, he sent money home to his parents on the first of every month. He obtained his first job taking care of apartment buildings by buying the furniture, vacuum cleaner, and bicycle of the old caretaker for $75.

In 1939 he returned to Belgium to visit his brothers and sisters and to bring back with him his sweetheart who had not been able to marry him before because her father disapproved. But he is still waiting for her, because she felt she had to stay in Belgium with her mother who was sick.

Beside having discovered a method to grow three shades of grass, and a way to keep brown patches from creeping bent grass lawns, Mr. Vervaet has invented a successful hair tonic. The formula calls for dew from creeping bent grass and some secret ingredients. The only difficulty is that it turns the new hair green!

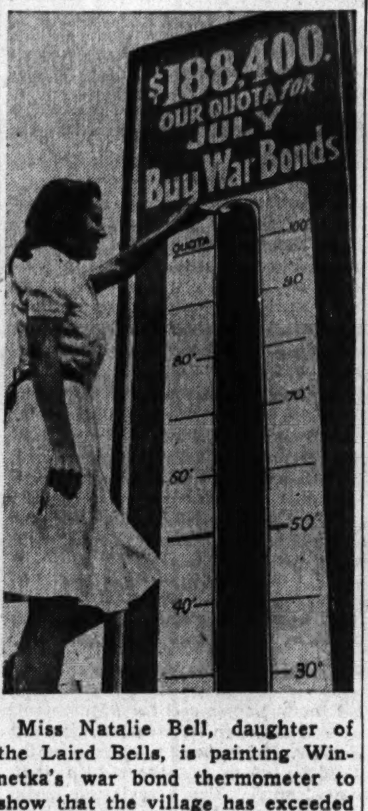
Exceed Bond Quota



Miss Natalie Bell, daughter of the Laird Bells, is painting Winnetka's war bond thermometer to show that the village has exceeded its quota. Miss Bell is one of the many young women of the town who helped make last month's drive a success.

GOLFERS TO FETE BILL ERICKSON AT NORTHBROOK

The eighth annual Bill Erickson day, a tribute to County Commissioner William N. Erickson of Evanston, will be held Thursday at Techny Fields Golf club near Northbrook.

State Representative Alan Ashcraft is chairman of the day, and the permanent officers of the group are Judge Harry H. Porter, president; Judge William MasSteven, first vice president; Andrew J. Murray, second vice president; Eugene Beck, third vice president; James M. Corcoran, secretary, and Fred A. Hertwig, treasurer.

After a day of golfing, Erickson trophies will be awarded to the winner of low gross, low net and a special women's prize. An estimated 5,000 persons from all parts of the county and state are expected to be present.

WINNETKA AGAIN GOES OVER TOP IN BOND SALES

Exceeds Quota for July of $188,400.

Hearty support of 13 organizations put Winnetka over the top in July war bond sales, Mrs. Benjamin F. Affleck, chairman of the Winnetka war savings staff, reported.

Exceeding its monthly quota of $188,400 by a good margin, the village lays claim to being one of the few suburbs maintaining a perfect record of beating its quota during each of the months of the campaign which began in May.

During the successful July campaign, each of the 13 organizations participated actively for one day, when its members took over the war bond booth at Elm street and Green Bay road in the center of the town. On this day, too, young women connected with the group were at Winnetka stations by 7:30 o'clock in the morning selling war stamp corsages and boutonnieres to loopbound commuters.

Jeep Gives Rides.

On Rotary day at the booth, a Fort Sheridan jeep stood ready to give rides to children belonging to the purchasers of bonds. The soldiers had a busy day. The Lions' club had a bugler who blew his bugle for sales. On all days a phonograph blared forth the popular "Any Bonds Today?".

Organizations taking part in the drive, in addition to the Rotary and Lions' clubs, were the Winnetka Woman's club, the Winnetka Weeders, Friendship Circle, the Winnetka Music club, the young people's group of the Congregational church, the woman's society of the Congregational church, the Woman's Guild of Christ church, the League of Women Voters, the Catholic Women's league, the Winnetka Garden club, and the Women's Defense corps.

58 Minuteman Flags.

The end of the month found 58 merchants in the village flying the treasury's minuteman flag, signifying that more than 90% of their employés have joined the pay roll savings plan.

Vice chairmen of Mrs. Affleck's committee, which includes 400 Winnetka women, are Mrs. Edward B. Hall, 335 White Oak lane; Mrs. John P. Hooker, 600 Berkely avenue; Mrs. Ernest S. Ballard, 6 Kent road; Mrs. Walter Straub, 1250 Westmoor road, and Mrs. Mitchell Dawson, 795 Lincoln avenue.

Mrs. Hall's special responsibility is the coöperation of block workers. Mrs. Hooker, with an advisory committee of business men, worked out the pay roll plan with the local merchants.

Engaged to Soldier

Mr. and Mrs. Maximillian Joseph Eberhart, Evanston, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Katherine, to Corp. Richard Erwin Dougherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Dougherty, Evanston. Miss Eberhart attended the University of Miami. Her fiance, who was graduated from Peddie Preparatory school and Duke university, is at Fort Sill, Okla., where he is in the officers' training school.

WEST SIDERS BOOST BIG MUSIC FETE

WEST SUBURBS PLAN TO SIGN VOTERS EARLY

Move to Avoid Rush of Registrants.

Campaigns to sign up voters under permanent registration are under way or planned in the three counties outside of Cook that include west side suburbs, a survey by THE TRIBUNE revealed last week. These three counties are Du Page, Kane, and Will.

Active drives to induce men and women to register early are in progress in Du Page and Kane counties. A similar effort is being considered in Will county, where the problem is complicated by the presence of numerous industrial workers, many of whom are of foreign birth.

Permanent registration will take effect thruout the state this year, under an act passed last year extending this method of franchise qualification to counties of less than 500,000 population. Previously permanent registration had been inaugurated only in Cook county and in nine downstate cities that have election commissions. These are Aurora, Bloomington, Cairo, Danville, East St. Louis, Galesburg, Peoria, Rockford, and Springfield.

Register Before Oct. 6.

The law provides that voters in the downstate counties can register for the Nov. 3 election any time between now and Oct. 6 by appearing in their county clerk's office.

It also sets up two general registration days, when every regular precinct polling place in each of the 101 counties outside of Cook will be open for the registration of voters. These days are Sept. 19 and Oct. 6. After Oct. 6 permanent registration will be suspended until two days after the Nov. 3 election.

Unregistered voters are entitled to vote at one election before they register permanently, but the procedure is far more complicated and time consuming than casting one's ballot in the regular manner. County clerks in all cases are urging voters to register before they vote.

Late Voters to Swamp Clerks.

They also emphasize the importance of registering before the two general registration days, when the three men allowed by law for each precinct are expected to be swamped with work.

Clarence V. Wagemann, Du Page county clerk, said that it is a physical impossibility to register all eligible voters in his county on the two general registration days. So few voters are finding it possible to visit his office beforehand, he said, that it has been necessary to establish outside registration points thruout the county.

"In Du Page county we had 60,702 votes in the last Presidential election, or an average of nearly 600 votes in each of the 102 precincts," Wagemann said.

"A registrar can sign up a voter in about seven minutes. If he works at top speed all day, he can register about 70 persons.

Try to Avoid Confusion.

"The law allows three registrars a precinct on the general registration days, or a total of 306 workers for the entire county. At average speed these registrars could sign up not more than 42,840 voters on the two days, and the result would probably be utter confusion.

"I am sending deputies to 27 outlying localities for the convenience of voters. In the 19 areas where these deputies have already functioned, we have brought in nearly 50 per cent of the eligible voters. That will cut our job down to the size that will enable us to handle it in the time remaining."

Here is the remaining Du Page county schedule: Hinsdale, Aug. 10 to 15; Westmont, Aug. 10 to 13; Elmhurst, Aug. 17 to 22; Lombard, Aug. 24 to 29; Westmore, Aug. 26; Villa Park, Aug. 24 to 29; Glen Ellyn, Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, and Wheaton, Aug. 31 to Sept. 5. In most cases the registration places will be open from 1:30 to 9 each day, and the place will be announced by placards.

Kane County Plans.

Theodore Larson Jr., chief deputy of County Clerk Charles Lowry, said that outside registrations are planned for every Kane county township and municipality. He estimated that about 25 per cent of the 50,000 potential registration of Kane county will be in before the first general registration day.

Five deputies are ranging the county in the current drive for early registrations, Larson said. This is their remaining schedule:

Aug. 18—Burlington, Hampshire, Plato, and Rutland townships.

Aug. 20—Dundee township, including East Dundee, West Dundee, and Carpentersville.

Aug. 24—Aurora township, including the city of Batavia [the city of Aurora has had permanent registration since 1936].

Aug. 26—Elburn [for Blackberry township] and Maple Park [for Virgil township].

Aug. 28—Campton, Big Rock, and Kaneville townships.

Party Leaders Aid.

County Clerk Joseph Hartley of Will county said that while no early registration campaign is under way there, party leaders are to be asked to coöperate in a plan to sign up voters ahead of time in at least the largest of the county's 98 precincts.

Seventeen of the precincts have 800 or more voters, Hartley said. One of-

Communities' Staffs Prepare for Black-Out

Community commanders and their staffs have been asked to familiarize themselves with the contents of the recently issued manual for practice black-out covering the test for Wednesday night when it will be the goal of the Office of Civilian Defense, Chicago metropolitan area, to darken the landscape as deeply, between 10 and 10:30 p. m., as it was before the first settler lit his cabin lamp.

Offices of the division chiefs will be in operation during the first area black-out in the middle west and will act as a clearing house for instructions to and questions from community commanders. Reports immediately after the all-clear signal has sounded shall include ground observation from each block and reports of any accidents.

Community commanders have been instructed to be on duty to see that zone captains and block captains are properly instructed and prepared for the test. The community office will act as a clearing house for all questions that occur in the community, except such occurrences as require action by the central control.

Zone Captains' Duties.

Zone captains are instructed that it shall be their duty to see that all block captains under their jurisdiction understand instructions before the black-out occurs, and that they are completely staffed and ready for the test. Zone captains shall see that all orders are transmitted to zone organizations and shall supervise the operations of block organizations to the extent necessary to see that they are functioning.

Each block captain [or senior air warden as he is called in the suburban areas] will be responsible for all Civilian Defense activities within the territory assigned to him.

It shall be the duty of the captain or warden to so station his staff as to control the public in the observation of the rules and regulations enforced during the test period, and to make report of ground observations and accidents, if any occur. If violations are observed his organization is advised to make corrections where possible and obtain the coöperation of the public.

No Forcible Compliance.

If violations of the rules occur, the OCD is not to attempt a forcible compliance, but report the matter to the central room for action by the proper local enforcement officers. They are to resort to calls to the central room only when diplomacy and persuasion have failed.

Block captains are advised to use discretion to avoid any unnecessary interference with the movement of vehicles which are, in fact, on emergency operations under the rules. Also, they are directed to the fact that during a test black-out an opportunity may exist for sabotage or other subversive or unlawful action.

Householders are instructed to turn out all exterior and interior lights. Interior lights may be used when properly obscured from the outside. Lights must be checked in such places as basements, porches, attics, garages, barns, and other structures, as well as automobiles parked on the premises. Home owners who find it necessary to be away from home on the night of the practice must extinguish all lights before leaving.

People to Stay Indoors.

Persons in their homes are instructed to remain indoors until the all-clear signal is sounded, not to use the telephone unless absolutely necessary for emergency purposes, and to keep all dogs, cats, and other pets indoors.

The management or operators of hotels, apartment buildings, and rooming houses are instructed to notify all tenants so that they may be cognizant of the test and turn out all lights visible from the outside. Fire escape lights must be properly shielded.

ELMHURST OCD PLANS SERIES OF EXPERTS' TALKS

An Elmhurst chapter of the "Talk of the Hour club" which brings authoritative speakers on current issues to communities thruout the nation will be sponsored this fall and winter by the forum committee of the Elmhurst Civilian Defense council. Decision to continue the talks which met with enthusiasm in the community last spring was made at a joint meeting of the forum committee and the public relations and education committee of the OCD.

Programs will be held, starting the first week in October, every third week at the Hawthorne school.

Procedure of the club meetings calls for a discussion by persons well qualified to deal with subjects of current interest. These talks will be followed by round tables during which members of the audience will be privileged to ask questions and express views.

Maurice C. Turner is chairman of the public forum committee, other members of which are George Ehnebom, Dr. Pearl Robertson, Mrs. H. A. Berens, Carlisle Bloxom, and L. A. O'Connor.

Conley Legion Auxiliary Unit Elects New Leaders

John F. Conley unit, American Legion auxiliary, held its annual election recently with the following chosen: Mrs. Harriet Conley, president; Mrs. Kathryn Doucet and Mrs. Esther Jansen, vice presidents; Mrs. Edith Dryz, treasurer; Mrs. Jessie Graham, chaplain; Mrs. Francis Krieger, sergeant at arms, and Miss Margaret Morris, historian.

Women Volunteer and Keep Family Gravel Pit Going Despite War

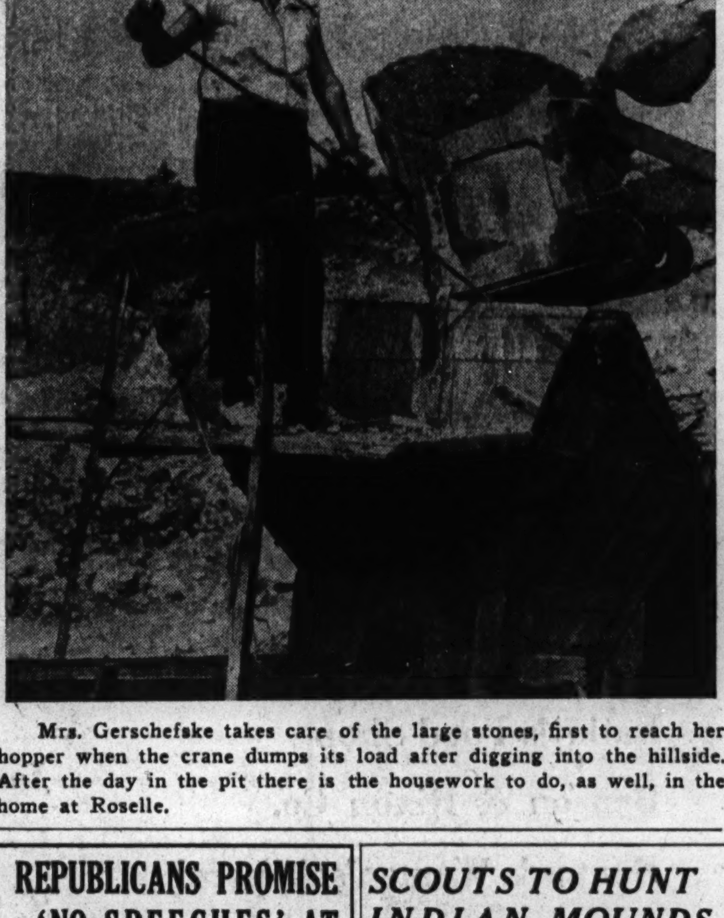
When Hugo Gerschefske, operator of a gravel pit, was confronted by the help problem this summer, his daughter, Hildegarde, 16, a senior at Glenbard High school, came to his rescue by volunteering to run the stone crusher. Asking no quarter, Hildegarde puts in full days manipulating the throbbing machinery that has kept the pit on schedule in its output.

[TRIBUNE Photos by Julius Gantter.]

All three women of the Gerschefske household, counting Ruth, 10, who is the water girl, are busy on the production line. Mr. Gerschefske, left, handles the crane that is too far to the right to be caught by the camera. The pit is a noisy place when all the conveyors are in action.

"Something attempted, something done, has earned a night's repose." Homeward bound at the close of day, left to right, are Hugo Gerschefske, Ruth, Mrs. Gerschefske, and Hildegarde. Pioneer women were not the only ones willing to do a man's work in a pinch.



Mrs. Gerschefske takes care of the large stones, first to reach her hopper when the crane dumps its load after digging into the hillside. After the day in the pit there is the housework to do, as well, in the home at Roselle.

War Industry Tries Further to Save Tires

[Fred Dewey of La Grange has been named chairman of the community defense transportation group in that suburb. Details on page 6.]

"Double up—victory will ride on the rubber you save," is the slogan of an intensive tire conservation campaign being conducted at the Electro-Motive division of General Motors, La Grange. The drive has for its goal the reduction of the number of cars driven by employés from 2,971 to 2,000, raising the ratio of persons per car from 2.4 to approximately four persons per car, cutting down the number of cars at least one-third.

Electro-Motive at 55th street and Joliet road, La Grange, is two and one-half miles from the nearest railroad passenger service or street car line. Automobile transportation is depended upon by an estimated 99.5 per cent of the workers. These workers, altho more heavily distributed in the west suburbs, come from points as far distant as Wilmette and Des Plaines, and from the Pullman area and Joliet.

Increase Rider Load.

Without an organized campaign the group riding plan made some progress since it was started last March, the ratio of persons per car rising from 1.8 to 2.4. The campaign now in progress, however, is designed to push the doubleup program to its limit.

H. L. Blair of the plant's public relations department, appointed chairman of the campaign transportation committee, distributed group riders' registration cards which were placed on the clock racks for hourly workers and on the desks of salaried employés.

Registrants are asked to give their name, their department, and clock number, their working shift, their home phone and their address, and the nearest cross street. In registering, employés agree to share their car with car owning fellow workers who may become members of the club.

Ask Detailed Information.

Space is given to provide information from those who want or do not want to ride and for those who now ride or do not ride with a group. Drivers are asked to state how many passengers they now carry, the kind of car they drive, how many more passengers they want, and the route they take to work.

Employés were asked to fill out the cards in detail and deposit them in the red, white, and blue boxes that have been placed at the five plant entrances. Sixty per cent of the employés turned in the filled out cards almost immediately.

Answers Show Coöperation.

Mr. Blair said that volunteered comment on many of the cards made a special plea for rides. He said the cards turned in revealed a spirit of coöperation in giving the needed information that was outstanding.

"Certainly," said Mr. Blair, "the information we have received indicates how enthusiastically employés want to coöperate in the group riding plan as an additional aid to save tires."

A feature of the campaign is the distribution of official membership windshield sticks to drivers who are carrying three or more passengers.

REPUBLICANS PROMISE 'NO SPEECHES' AT 27TH WARD PICNIC

"There won't be any speeches. Just come out and enjoy yourself." That was the word passed on by members of the 27th ward Regular Republican club to residents of the west side as plans were announced for the organization's family picnic and outing at Kolze's park, 6343 Irving Park road, on Aug. 30.

William J. Granata.

Scheduled as one of the last of the Republican ward rallies before Labor day, when the county Republicans customarily assemble at Riverview park, the gathering will be a testimonial to William J. Granata, 27th ward committeeman and state industrial commissioner, and the Republical candidate for Probate court clerk.

There will be a baseball game between members of the 27th ward organization and the business men's committee. Under special rules established only for this contest, "ringers" over 50 years old are barred from play, players over 6 foot 2 must bat with only one arm, and any one standing 5 feet 6 or less and weighing 200 pounds will be conceded a triple if by hitting he can get half way to first base before the ball arrives there.

SCOUTS TO HUNT INDIAN MOUNDS ON MICHIGAN TRIP

Members of Boy Scout Troop 367, which meets at Columbus park, left last week for a two week trip into the White river country of northern Michigan. They will explore the territory and hunt for mounds left by the Pottawattomie Indians.

Unlike many other troops, Troop 367 is managed entirely by the Scouts with the senior leaders acting as advisors. The staff includes Don Mann, scoutmaster; Len Steinberg, junior assistant scoutmaster; Don Reuben, Dan Roin, and Perry Rosenberg, senior patrol leaders; Stuart Bachman, Carl Wool, and Julian Zinder, patrol leaders; Sheldon Nemerovski, scribe; Bernard Cohen, handicrafts; Marvin Choos, aquatics; Dr. Lawrence S. Mann, camp doctor.

Elgin Bus Lines Reduce Stops to Conserve Tires

To conserve tires and equipment, and in compliance with suggestion of Office of Defense Transportation, Elgin City Lines, Inc., has announced that 23 of its 360 bus line stops in Elgin have been eliminated. The plan is said to reduce the total number of stops by approximately 6 per cent.

B. E. Laughead Commands Van Buren Legion Post

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

Gifford M. Holden Jr., whose great grandfather, Abel D. Gifford, was one of the founders of Elgin, has received an appointment to West Point Military academy, and left during his junior year at Purdue university to report at the academy. Holden is a graduate of Elgin High school, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gifford M. Holden of Indian Knoll road, West Chicago. His father is an assistant secretary of Chicago Title and Trust company, and his mother is the former Bernice E. Dahl of Oak Park. Holden has been studying aeronautical engineering at Purdue, and during his high school days in Elgin was active in the Junior Birdmen organization. His appointment to West Point was obtained thru William G. Stratton, representative-at-large from Illinois.

Gifford M. Holden Jr.

Staff Sergt. Stanley L. Wroble, 2318 Augusta boulevard, and Corp. Maurice Levine, 1143 South Richmond street, have been selected to attend the infantry officer candidate school at Camp Claiborne, Louisiana.

Cadet Donald W. Fauth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Fauth, 71 South Root street, Aurora, has entered the army air force classification center at Nashville, Tenn. Cadet Fauth was active in East High athletics, was picked on the All-Conference football team for two years, and was prominent in other school activities. He has a brother in the service who recently transferred from the infantry to the air forces.

Pvt. James G. Papagiannes, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Papagiannes, 2801 Washington boulevard, recently began the airplane mechanics course at the army air base, Lincoln, Neb.

Corp. William Novak, son of Mrs. Sophie Novak, 1655 14th street, has been admitted to the air force officer candidate school at Miami Beach, Fla. Upon successful completion of the course, he will be commissioned a second lieutenant.

Joseph F. Scheureman, 2256 Washington boulevard, was graduated recently from officers candidate school at Camp Roberts, Cal., and commissioned as a second lieutenant in the field artillery.

Dr. Earle E. Wilson, whose offices have been at 137 North Marion avenue, Oak Park, has been ordered to military service. He has been commissioned a first lieutenant, and his first station will be at Denver, Colo. At the time Dr. Wilson was ordered to active duty, he had spent several months at the Chicago Maternity center, where he was beginning post graduate study leading to specialization in obstetrics and gynecology. Dr. Wilson is a graduate of the University of Chicago, Rush Medical college, and Northwestern university. He has been associated with Dr. William F. Windl at Northwestern university medical school in the study of some phases of fetal physiology.

Maurice O'Connor Jr., 214 North Laporte avenue, has been advanced to corporal, and is now stationed at Camp Elliott, Cal. He returned only recently from Iceland.

John Paul, former resident of Oak Park, was recently sworn in as a midshipman at the U. S. Naval academy, Annapolis, Md. He is the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Pappas of Bryan, O., also former Oak Park residents.

Dr. Salvatore G. Cilella, 725 Taylor street, is now stationed on the Free French island of New Caledonia, and has been promoted to captain, it has been learned by his family here. He enlisted in the Illinois National Guard in October, 1940, was commissioned a first lieutenant, and was stationed at Camp Forrest, Tenn. He left for overseas duty in January. His wife and their nine months old son, Salvatore Jr., reside at the Taylor street address. One brother, Carmine, an accountant, was inducted into the army last month, and is now stationed at Fort Benjamin, Ind. Another brother, Alfred J. Cilella, is an attorney, and a third, John, was a corporal in France in the World War I and is now chairman of Selective Service board 107.

Miles Kadlec, son of Alois Kadlec, 2239 South 56th street, Cicero, and Anthony J. Goonen, son of Mrs. Amelia Goonen, 842 Vernon Park place, have been promoted to corporal at the army air forces gunnery school at Tyndall field, Panama City, Fla., and have been returned to their home field, Barksdale field, Louisiana.

Dr. Benjamin B. Kaplan, 521 South Central avenue, recently was commissioned a first lieutenant in the army medical corps. He is now on duty at Chanute field school of the army air force technical training command. Lieut. Kaplan is a graduate of the University of Illinois medical school. He is the son of Mrs. Sophie Kaplan.

Five West Siders Enroll at YWCA Camp Sagawau

The third camp period of the summer opened last week at YWCA Camp Sagawau, in the forest preserve region near Lemont. Enrolled from west side neighborhoods were Beatrice Heimark, 5967 Augusta boulevard; Sorrell Levin, 3345 Adams street; Polly and Peggy Liston, 648 Saylor avenue, Elmhurst, and Claire Ann Keller, 572 Hawthorne avenue, Elmhurst.

MILITARY UNITS TO STIR CROWD NEXT SATURDAY

Several thousand west and northwest siders well take part in the 13th annual Chicago Music Festival in Soldiers' field, next Saturday. Sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., the festival is dedicated this year to the armed forces and will be one of the greatest musical military shows ever attempted. Profits of the festival will be turned over to army and navy relief.

More than 10,000 will take part in the festival. A thousand of these participants will be young girl dancers, many of whom will come from west and northwest side homes. They will take part in the dance pageant which will be an outstanding feature. Many more west and northwest siders will take part in the civilian defense exhibition to be given by the Commonwealth Edison company.

Members of the Wheelmen of America will give a timely note to the grand entrance parade at 7 o'clock by riding into the field.

Wear Patriotic Garb.

Wearing red, white, and blue ballet costumes, the dancers will enter the field in formations representing airplanes. Their dance routines will represent the spirit of youth. Attached to each girl's shoulders will be a knapsack from which, at the end of the pageant, will be unfurled a part of the American flag, resulting in a huge flag covering the entire field.

By a trick device this flag will suddenly disappear and the dancers will make their exit. As they leave the field, they will cover their heads with blue-green scarfs and will hold seagull wings, attached to their wrists, above the scarfs, creating an effect of seagulls flying over rippling water.

The dancers will come from the Ideal Dancing institute and the summer schools of the Young Men's Christian association. They are under direction of Miss Mayblossom Macdonald, a dancing instructor, and artistic director of the pageant, and Miss Wilhelmina Aveling, assistant program director of the YMCA schools. Assisting on the west and northwest sides are Eleanir Shanahan, Irving Park YMCA, Virginia Tenney, and Roberta Moore, Austin.

Festival Orchestra to Play.

The dancers will be accompanied by the festival orchestra which will be directed by Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N.

Other west and northwest siders taking prominent parts in the festival will be Carl Craven of Wheaton and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bennett, 5438 Ferdinand street, who will lead community singing. Ina May Jones, 2838 North McVicker avenue, grand champion baton twirler, will lead the grand entrance parade.

The festival will be preceded by a luncheon Friday noon in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House. This will be the sixth annual festival luncheon and the honor guests will be Dr. Rudolph Ganz, pianist and composer, and Mara Kurenko, Russian lyric soprano.

Aurora Girl to Be Queen.

Polly Potteiger, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Potteiger of Aurora, will be crowned queen of the festival at the luncheon. Her mother, Mrs. Helen Burt Potteiger, formerly of Wheaton, was a winner in the vocal contest in 1936.

All seats to the luncheon in the ballroom have been sold but there are still seats available in the foyer. Those sitting in the foyer will go into the ballroom after the luncheon to hear the program. Luncheon tickets at $1.75 may be bought from the festival headquarters on the fourth floor of the Tribune Tower.

Philip Maxwell, director of the festival, will be toastmaster at both the luncheon and Saturday night's event. Reserved festival tickets are 55 cents and $1.10. Wednesday is the deadline for obtaining them by mail but they may be purchased at any time in the Tribune Public Service Offices either at the Tribune Tower or at 1 South Dearborn street.

Schedule Preliminary Contests.

Events leading up to the grand finale Saturday night include several preliminary contests. The first of these this week will be a contest for instrumentalists at 7 o'clock Tuesday night in the grand ballroom in the Drake hotel. The contest is open to players on the trombone, accordion, Hawaiian guitar, marimba, piano, Spanish guitar and tenor banjo. It will be supervised by Howard Stube, chairman of instrumental participation. It will be open to the public and the admission price will be 30 cents.

Another contest open to the public will be the preliminary contest for baton twirlers at 5 o'clock Thursday night in the north end of Soldiers' field. The baton twirlers will be featured in the grand entrance parade Saturday night. It is being directed by Fred Miller, field supervisor. The preliminary contest will be free to the public.

The preliminary vocal contest for participants outside Cook county will be held at 7 o'clock Friday night in the Drake hotel grand ballroom. The admission price for spectators will be 30 cents.

124 WEST SIDERS ALLOWED TO BUY TIRES AND TUBES

Bulk of Casings Are for Use on Trucks.

One hundred twenty-four west side individuals and firms qualified for new tires and tubes during the week ending July 31, rationing board figures disclosed.

Of this number, 43 obtained permits for 29 passenger tires and 66 tubes. The other 81 were allowed to buy 258 tires and 247 tubes for use on trucks or buses.

NAVAL AVIATOR DRIVE TO START IN WEST TOWNS

Enlistments Sought in Sections of Three.

Unmarried men, 18 to 26 years old, who want to be naval aviators and at the same time become part of the West Suburban squadron will have their chance during August and September. Applicants also may organize their own flying sections. This campaign, taking place in the western suburbs, will be known as the "Fly for Navy Drive."

The drive to organize the squadron is under the direction of World War I. navy flyers, with Otis Beeman, 742 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, chairman. Mr. Beeman has issued a challenge to the city of Evanston, declaring that Oak Park can recruit more aviation cadets than can the North Shore suburb.

Seek Group Enlistments.

This drive for flying officers will be centered in the cadets themselves. It is the plan that the young men, together with their friends and schoolmates, will volunteer as a group, and thus be together during their training period, and as far along into active service as conditions permit.

In this regard, Mr. Beeman explained, "plans include forming a squadron of west suburban young men which will be started by forming sections of three, just as the aviators fly in formation. The first men who volunteer will be made section leaders, and each will be given an opportunity to recruit his own two wing men. Thus as sections are formed, the squadron will be organized. The section leader is the No. 1 man, on his left is the No. 2 or left wing man, and on his right is the No. 3 or right wing man. This is the basic formation of V's from which all maneuvers take place, such as left and right echelons and other attack formations."

Oak Park Headquarters.

Headquarters for this drive have been established in the Oak Park club, 721 Ontario street, Oak Park. Here cadets may meet with their friends and parents to receive full particulars regarding this branch of naval service. This office will be open tomorrow and Friday from 7 to 9 p. m. The navy has just issued special gold pins to be worn by men who qualify as naval aviation cadets, so as to designate them as members of the famous V-5 branch of the navy.

JOHN TRINKOS OF BROOKFIELD WED 50 YEARS

A mass read for them in St. Dionysius church, Cicero, where they were married 50 years ago, recently celebrated the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. John Trinko, 9429 Henrietta avenue, Brookfield. Dinner for the immediate family was served at the home. An open house was held for friends and neighbors, old and new.

Natives of Austria, Mr. and Mrs. Trinko resided for some time in Cicero before moving to Brookfield 21 years ago. Mr. Trinko is retired after 45 years with the Kimball Piano company.

Sons and daughters of the couple are Frank, Richard, and John Jr. of Brookfield, William Trinko of Richfield, Idaho, and Mrs. Otillio Roberts of Rockland, Mich.

Presentation Parish Holds Homecoming Picnic Today

The Rev. Francis O. McCarthy, pastor of Presentation parish, Springfield avenue and Polk street, invites former and present parishioners to the annual picnic at Altenheim grove, Forest Park, today. There will be amusements and games for all ages, dinner and refreshments. The Rev. Elmer S. Googan is director of the picnic.

SALVATION ARMY GETS NEW CASES BROUGHT BY WAR

Homeless Are Served at Centers.

BY MAURINE MEYERS.

[This is one of a series of stories on the war's effects on the city's charitable institutions.]

The wife of a soldier stops to ask for supper and a night's lodging. She is hitch-hiking back to her home in Pennsylvania, after visiting her husband at a Texas army camp before he is sent overseas.

Problems of this type are becoming more and more common at the Salvation Army Emergency lodge, 1230 Adams street. There homeless or penniless women, transients or local residents, are given temporary refuge. They are furnished with food and shelter until they are able to get back on their feet once more, physically, spiritually, and financially. In charge of the lodge is Brigadier Esther Ahnstrom, who became an officer in the Salvation Army in Sweden 35 years ago. Funds for the work come from the Salvation Army, the Community Chest, and private donations.

Most of the women who come to the lodge for aid are middleaged. Their problems are the hardest to solve, Brigadier Ahnstrom believes, for often they are physically unable to earn their living, and have no near of kin to care for them. Most often it is necessary to send them to Oak Forest, but occasionally they are placed in private homes.

Children Get Temporary Care.

Younger women, seeking help from the lodge, are housed for a few days or a few weeks, as their need may be, and are aided in every way to find work. A young girl ran away from an unpleasant home environment in a Michigan town, and appealed to the lodge for help when her small savings ran out. With Brigadier Ahnstrom's assistance, she found employment, and after she receives her first pay check this month she will move out of the lodge to a girl's club downtown.

Children sent to the lodge are taken care of temporarily, and then placed in homes, with the assistance of Juvenile court authorities. Often there are youngsters to whom the lodge will always be home—for it was there they first received plenty of food, a warm bed, and the affection and sympathy of Brigadier Ahnstrom and her staff.

One of the institutions at the lodge, inaugurated since Brigadier Ahnstrom's arrival eight years ago, is the bread line. Early every afternoon a long line of men, women and children begins to form along the sidewalk in front of the lodge. About 2 o'clock the bread, donated to the lodge, is handed out. Old men, almost toothless, occasionally will ask for rolls instead of bread. Brigadier Ahnstrom knows it is becouse they have no other food, not even coffee to wash the bread down.

Legion Auxiliary Gives Baskets.

Brigadier Ahnstrom still remembers with a thrill the Christmas she wanted to do something special for those in the bread line. Busy making up baskets from the simple stock in the lodge storeroom, she was interrupted by a telephone call. A Legion auxiliary downtown had made up more than 100 baskets which no one had called for. She was asked if she would be interested in having them. The answer was enthusiastically in the affirmative. All she need do was to send a truck for them. As she left the lodge to visit the nearest trucking agency, the Salvation Army truck drove up with the week's bread supply. She sent them off on the errand.

In addition to the vast amount of groceries and fresh vegetables, there were 12 dozen chickens. Every family in the neighborhood had chicken that Christmas. "The Lord knew I was trying to do a good deed in my humble way, and He stepped in to help," Brigadier Ahnstrom said.

During 1941, there were 1,153 women and children taken into the lodge. They received a total of 44,445 meals, and 10,427 received a nights' lodging. An average of 30 persons are taken care of each day at the lodge.

Refuge for Homeless Men.

Brigadier Ahnstrom is assisted with work at the lodge by Adjutant Lulu Stubbs, Adjutant Erma Howe, a social worker from headquarters who visits the lodge twice a week, and three women who assist with maintenance work in the big three story brick building, once a stylish residence.

Masculine counterpart of the lodge is the Salvation Army Industrial home, 1325 Congress street, a place where homeless, unemployed men may find both home and employment. In charge is Brigadier Karl Larson, who has served as an officer in the Salvation Army for 45 years, 15 of which were spent in Sweden, 15 in Canada, and 15 in the United States.

There are always about 114 men living at the home. Of that number, 25 are on the permanent staff, including office workers, cooks, and truck drivers. These truck drivers, with assistants, go out daily on a regular route, picking up contributions from residents thruout the city.

Salvage Is Sorted.

This salvage is brought back to the home, a three story brick building resembling a factory. Immediately upon unloading the trucks it is sorted into piles. Clothing is divided into things fit to be repaired, and material to be baled and sold as rags. Paper is sorted and baled in the huge baling machines in the basement. Metals are dumped into bins, and sorted later. Furniture and stoves are carried to shops where craftsmen repair them for resale.

In spite of the popular belief that boom in war industries has nullified the employment problem, Brigadier Larson declares that men living at the home find it as difficult as ever to obtain work. For the most part they are middleaged, unskilled men. Many relief agencies, WPA projects, and shelters have been closed down since the war began.

Earn Small Wages.

Regardless of age or degree of skill, the home furnishes men with work, food, shelter, and companionship. In addition, they earn small wages for the work they do. The average weekly pay roll is $800. Last year, 1,563 men found shelter in the city's four industrial homes, all similar to the one on Congress street. Nights' lodgings were given 102,599 men and 297,617 got meals in exchange for their work. Many of the men have once more found work in business and industry, and again are leading normal lives.

These institutions are but two of the many by which the Salvation Army carries on its rehabilitation program for the unfortunate in the Chicago area. Commissioner John J. Allan is head of Salvation Army activities in the central states territory.

Becomes Bride at Summer Home

OAK PARK GIRL SAVES SIX AS BOAT CAPSIZES IN WISCONSIN LAKE

Miss Genevieve Boyd, Oak Park, was the heroine in a drama of rescue recently on Lake Owen, near Ashland, Wis. Miss Boyd was at the summer cabin of her family when she heard cries for help.

Hers was the first boat to reach the spot where a family of six had been thrown into the water when their boat capsized. She lifted three children into her boat and helped two of the adults to climb aboard. Fearing her own craft would capsize, Miss Boyd supported the third adult in the water until more help arrived.

Of the six rescued, five survived the accident. The sixth, an elderly woman, died later of shock. Miss Boyd is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Boyd, 1517 North Austin boulevard, Oak Park.

Install Southern District Association Officers

The Southern District association, composed of business and professional men and women, located in the southern section of Oak Park, installed its new officers at a recent meting. Those elected were: Elmer R. Trowbridge, president; Frank Vite, vice president; Adele H. Maze, secretary; Herbert F. Schoene, treasurer, and William T. McAndrews Jr., Peter C. Born, Charles E. Butler, Dr. F. F. Litsinger, and Hans Nelson, directors.

Garfield Park Concert.

The regular weekly concert at Garfield park bandshell will be presented this week by the A. F. Thaviu band, directed by A. F. Thaviu. La Verne Baley, soprano, and Enrico Clausi, tenor, will be the guest soloists. Warren Anderson will be commentator.

WIFE, DAUGHTER KEEP HIS GRAVEL PIT IN OPERATION

War Takes Helpers, So Women Pitch In.

Add to the list of men's jobs that women can perform in an emergency that of working in a gravel pit. Exponents of this assertion are the wife of Hugo Gerschefske and his daughter Hildegarde, 16, who will be a senior at Glenbard High school, Glen Ellyn, this fall.

The Gerschefskes reside in Roselle and the gravel pit is just north of Lake street in nearby Bloomingdale. Mr. Gerschefske started operating the pit three years ago. This spring he was confronted by a dilemma. One of his helpers was drafted and two left the community to go into defense plants.

"I don't know how it's going to turn out," Mr. Gerschefske confided to his family group, which included no sons. There was the investment in equipment, there was plenty of gravel, and there were orders to be filled. Also there was the help problem in the time of war.

Women Find Solution.

The women folk thought they saw a way to meet the situation. There was the housework to do, but Hildegarde was on vacation and weren't women everywhere proving they were capable of entering new fields?

Since last June the feminine members of the Gerschefske household have carried on so well at the pit that orders have been filled on scheduled time, and with the feeling of "something attempted, something done" they say they have found it one of the happiest of summers.

Mr. Gerschefske operates the crane that hoists huge shovelsful of gravel into the bin where Mrs. Gerschefske stands on duty eliminating the larger stones from passing onto the conveyor. Hildegarde stands on the bridge of the crusher and handles the clutch controling the load as it arrives. The crusher is noisy with its constant shaking, but Hildegarde appears as carefree as a girl on the beach in her suntan suit.

Girl, 10, Makes Coffee.

Ruth Gerschefske, 10, is the water girl and the maker of coffee for the noon lunch. The equipment, which spreads far across the 20 foot deep pit, is made to crush 200 yards of gravel a day, and the boss declares the accomplishment is as satisfactory as in previous years.

At Mrs. Gerschefske's bin she permits only the stones under 8 inches in dimension to go thru the screen. Stones that are oversize she pitches off to be used for filler. Occasionally, a bit of granite finds its way into the hopper and refusing to be ground, bounces high in the air still intact.

The sifted gravel continues on a conveyor to the noisy crusher where Hildegarde guides the stones thru two screens before they pass on to the loading bin.

Motorists Stop to Look.

During the weeks of hot summer while the pit has been turning out its quota of gravel without benefit of any "Women at Work" sign, motorists on Lake street occasionally have been struck by the inspiring scene and have stopped to come over and marvel at the feminine efficiency. Miss Hildegarde gives such visitors a nonchalant wave of the hand, careful not to pause too long in interrupting the production line.

Mr. Gerschefske, with his help problem solved for the summer, has this to say of his daughter's spirit: "When a girl is good at a job she's better than a boy."

Frances Ellen Simpson Married

[Koehne Photo.]

OAK PARK G. O. P. TO HOLD ANNUAL OUTING AUG. 23

The annual Oak Park Republican picnic will be held Aug. 23 at Thatcher woods. Dr. Noel M. Maxson is general chairman of the affair, and has been aided in planning the event by Mrs. Harold F. Scovel, Oak Park G. O. P. committeewoman. State Auditor Arthur C. Lueder will be present, as will numerous Republican candidates for county and legislative offices. Rep. William G. Thon is in charge of the speaking program. Mrs. May Y. Eadie, chairman of the committee on prizes, will be assisted by Mrs. Marie Vosburgh, Mrs. Ralph Ford, Mrs. Edward Schanze, and Mrs. Peter Koclanes.

WEST END CLUB MAPS ADDITIONAL PATRIOTIC PLANS

The West End Catholic Woman's club, under direction of Mrs. John G. Hopkins Jr., president, has not been idle these last few weeks, in spite of a summer vacation in meetings. The club's new defense chairman, Mrs. Warren Brown, and her committee, Mrs. Raymond M. Kelly, Mrs. Walter Callaghan, and Mrs. Richard Matre, have been coöperating in planning an active patriotic program.

From July 20 to 27 a house to house canvass was made by 25 club members seeking contributions for the USO. On several occasions the club has sent hostesses to the USO center at 131 South Wabash avenue, and club members Mrs. Warren Brown, Mrs. Walter Callaghan, Mrs. John G. Hopkinson Jr., and Mrs. William Thomas have served as chaperons. Club members opened their homes to navy men one recent week-end when sailors were entertained in Oak Park and River Forest. Red Cross work, first aid courses, and the minute men drive also receive their share of support from members of the club.

DU PAGE GROUP TO TAKE CANOE TRIP IN CANADA WILDS

To See Only Each Other for Ten Days.

Whatever historical events may happen in the world during a 10 day period this month will not be known to a party of 12 from the Central Du Page YMCA until its return to civilization. The association's 12th annual canoe trip in the north woods of Canada will get under way this morning when the boys of high school age or older and their leader, B. R. Ryall, start on a motor trip for Duluth. The party is due home Aug. 24.

Leaving Duluth, the party will motor along the shore of Lake Superior to Grand Marais, and continue some 75 miles along a logging road to Big Sag on the Canadian border.

Mr. Ryall, general secretary of the Y, has led all the previous expeditions. Each year, the same area has been chosen, but details of the journey vary. The region selected is accessible only to travelers on foot and by canoe. The canot trip in Canadian waters will cover about 200 miles.

To Portage Rapids.

The canoeists will portage around the rapids and falls, some of which have a drop of 50 feet. The section being wholly away from civilization, the only prospect of members of the group coming in contact with other persons will be if a ranger happens their way. Wild game including moose, bear, and deer are encountered on the triu, but they are in a restricted area. Fishing has always been of the best.

Members of the party will be required to take along everything they intend to eat with the exception of fish and berries. The individual is required to carry 125 pounds which includes the weight of food, clothing, and tentage.

Take Turns Cooking.

Under Mr. Ryall's supervision, each member of the party will take a turn at cooking the food that is necessarily concentrated. Time from sundown until sunup will be devoted to sleep. The journey will be conducted on a strict time schedule, despite storms, and in the past there usually has been a big storm.

"I have never known any boy to take the trip who has not looked back upon it with pleasant satisfaction," said Mr. Ryall. "It is an experience they always remember, and lasting friendships are formed. As an old guide once told us, 'Inside of a day I can read any boy on such a trip like an open book.'"

Alumni Now Officers.

Mr. Ryall said 90 per cent of the boys who had taken the trips in the past were now officers in the nation's armed forces.

Hamilton Clark, formerly of Wheaton but now of Pittsburgh, Pa., who took the trip last year, has planned to join the party today, as has P. Q. Pennington, who traveled from Florida to repeat his experience of last year.

Half of the 12 members of the party who will be repeaters and who signed up early were Charles Gilbert and Frank Gilbert, no relation to each other, Barton Anson, Paul Smith, John Olinger, and Thomas Treet.

Among the gadgets definitely to be left behind by the party will be radios.

4 MORE BOUTS SCHEDULED ON W-G-N-MUTUAL

Four more bouts on the Cavalcade of Sports have been arranged and will be broadcast by W-G-N and Mutual. Featuring outstanding boxers in nearly all weights, the bouts will be broadcast from Madison Square Garden at 9 p. m. on their respective dates by Don Dunphy and Bill Corum.

On Thursday, Aug. 13, Bobby Ruffin and Bob Montgomery, lightweights, will meet for 10 rounds. On Sept. 10 Freddie Cochrane and Ray Robinson will meet for 10 rounds in a welterweight battle. On Friday, Sept. 25, Chalky Wright is scheduled to defend his featherweight title in a 15 round bout with Lulu Constantino. Tami Mauriello and Lee Savold will meet for 10 rounds on Friday, Oct. 30.

The principal announcing chore on the broadcasts is handled by Don Dunphy who gives the blow-by-blow description; Bill Corum provides the color sidelights.

W-G-N TO CARRY MUSIC FESTIVAL FOR TWO HOURS

Many Highlights Slated on Mutual Network.

Two hours of the Chicago Music Festival, sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., will be broadcast over W-G-N starting at 8 o'clock next Saturday night. The first hour from 8 to 9, usually occupied by America Loves a Melody, will be broadcast also over the Mutual Broadcasting system. Jack Brickhouse will be the commentator and Philip Maxwell, director of the festival, will present much of the background.

The program will be opened with the world première of "Victory," a march overture by Nathaniel Shilkret, featuring the festival symphony orchestra of 114 men under the direction of Henry Weber, general musical director of the festival. Mr. Shilkret will be on the stage with Mr. Weber during the première and will also act as one of the judges for the vocal contests. Other judges will be Mme. Maria Kurenko, soprano concert star, and Dr. Rudolph Ganz, president of the Chicago Musical college.

Plan Community Singing.

Next the 85,000 spectators will be led in community singing by Frank Bennett, choral director. They will sing "Deep in the Heart of Texas," "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree," and then to the tune of "Keep the Home Fires Burning" all voices will be raised in a pledge to the men in our armed services that "we'll keep the home fires burning till you come home." Army camps and naval stations all over the world will be notified of this pledge from the midwest and invited to listen in.

The finalists in the vocal contest will be heard next. The two best men and two best women singers will broadcast to the background of the festival symphony orchestra. The judges will select the winners from the finalists of 12 preliminary festival contests held thruout the middle west with a total of more than 1,000 contestants.

While spectators sing "Here Comes the Navy" to the tune of the "Beer Barrel Polka," 300 men from the Great Lakes Naval Training station will march on the field headed by Lieut. Comm. E. E. [Eddie] Peabody, king of the banjo and director of the naval station's orchestra. Peabody will then conduct a typical "Happy Hour" program which is a popular feature of the station. The program will include selections by the concert and dance bands, specialty numbers, a banjo solo by Peabody, and a medley by the Great Lakes choir of 130 voices directed by Chaplain H. F. Hanson.

Women's Chorus to Be Heard.

The winning women's chorus will be heard next. The winner of the trombone contest will next be announced and will be followed by the men's choral winners who will sing "Wings Over America."

The entire audience will take part in a match lighting ceremony which has been a feature of the festival for many years.

A detachment of marines under the command of Lieut. Col. Carlton Hill will stage a drill to be followed by performances by a massed plectrophonic orchestra and a massed accordion band. The plectrophonic orchestra of 1,000 fretted instruments will play "Marcheta" by Schertzinger while more than 1,000 accordionists will play an army, navy, and marine medley. A marimba orchestra of 160 marimbas directed by Clair Omar Musser will be heard playing the "Bolero" by Rosales, "Dance of the Comedians" from the "Bartered Bride," and Verdi's "Anvil Chorus" from "Il Trovatore."

Following a massed community sing led by Carl Craven, the festival's winning pianist will be introduced and will play a Saint-Saëns piano concerto accompanied by the marimba orchestra.

A highlight of the festival will be the chorus of the Men of Steel featuring 80 workers of the Carnegie Illinois company's Gary plant. They will be directed by Harry S. Walsh, musical director of W-G-N's Northerners' program. The men will be dressed in overalls and will sing before a huge replica of a portion of a steel mill.

MARION CLAIRE GUEST ON MUSIC THAT ENDURES

Marion Claire, soprano star of America Loves a Melody, will make a guest appearance on W-G-N's Music That Endures concert at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow night.

Miss Claire will sing four selections: "Tomorrow," by Strauss; "Pourquoi," from Delibes' "Lakme"; Sadero's "Fa la, Nana, Bambin," and Strauss' "Devotion."

Miss Claire will be accompanied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, and by the chorus, led by Robert Trendler. Lewis James will produce the program. The orchestra's selections will be Dvorak's "Slavonic Dance No. 10," "Debussy's "Ballade," and the first movement of Haydn's Symphony No. 10. The program will be broadcast over the Mutual network.

LAUNCH BATTLE AGAINST RATS IN WEST SIDE AREA

Pest Killers Will Cover Test Sector.

The troubles of the rat exterminator are many. In an announcement of a new, intensified drive to rid a near west side area of the pest, Mrs. Hilda Gitlin of the Metropolitan Housing council stated with regret the exterminators would have to operate without their usual, lethal red squill.

Mrs. Hilda Gitlin.

Red squill, useful as a poisoning agent because it kills rats but does not harm animals or human beings, is derived from a plant that grows only on the shores of the Mediterranean sea. Consequently, red squill has joined the list of goods unobtainable because of the war.

Plan Use of Gas.

"But we are not letting the lack of red squill stop us," Mrs. Gitlin said. "The area is going to be cleaned up, garbage cans installed, and the rats caught in traps. If we have the opportunity, calcium cyanide will be dusted on garbage to poison the rats, altho this agent is not as harmless to other animals as is red squill. Another alternative is to inject cyanide gas into rat holes, altho this involves getting special permission to use the deadly gas."

The test drive, starting late this month, will involve 16 west side blocks in the vicinity of Halsted and Maxwell streets. The exact boundaries have not yet been announced. An important part in the campaign will be played by the department of streets and electricity, and by the board of health. Eight civic organizations, including the Woman's City club, are indorsing the work and will furnish workers.

Coöperating Agencies.

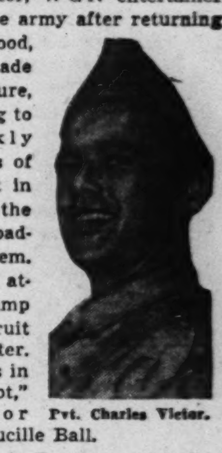
It was explained that private exterminating firms will not suffer because of the campaign as it is in an area where few individuals can afford to hire private exterminators. Civic organizations coöperating with the Metropolitan Housing council are: Woman's City club, Infant Welfare center, Boy Scouts of America, Woman's Joint Committee on Adequate Housing, Newberry center, Chicago Maternity center, OCD, board of health, department of public works, department of streets and electricity, and landlord and tenant associations.

'CAMP GRANT IN REVIEW' POPULAR ON MUTUAL CHAIN

Charles Victor Featured on Soldier Show.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Charles Victor, W-G-N entertainer who joined the army after returning from Hollywood, where he made his first picture, is contributing to the weekly broadcasts of "Camp Grant in Review" over the Mutual Broadcasting system. Pvt. Victor is attached to Camp Grant's recruit reception center. Victor appears in "Sweet and Hot," starring Victor Mature and Lucille Ball.



Pvt. Charles Victor.

Camp Grant in Review, which features a variety of soldier entertainment, including musical and dramatic sketches, is broadcast at 1:30 p.m. every Wednesday over Mutual. WROK, Rockford, operating on a frequency of 1,440 kilocycles, is the nearest outlet, since W-G-N carries a local program at that hour. WROK can be heard thru sensitive and selective receivers in the metropolitan area.

Several men who as civilians were well known in radio circles appear on these reviews from time to time. Corp. Florian ZaBach, violinist, formerly of the W-G-N orchestra, is featured occasionally. Others are Corp. Bob Thomas, formerly of the Breakfast Club and Club Matinée troupes; Pvt. Doug Culver, swing pianist and vocalist; Pvt. Leonard Baylinson, Chicago novachord player.

Three of the camp musical organizations furnish the musical background, rotating in cycles of three weeks. They are the Medical Training Center band under the direction of Sergt. Fred M. Sargent, a onetime Chicagoan; the Recruit Reception Swing Cats, directed by Corp. Jack Koehne, and the Medical Training Center Dance orchestra, directed by Technical Sergt. John Wallace.

HOSPITAL UNIT GOES ON ACTIVE DUTY SATURDAY

Has 34 Doctors, 52 Nurses from Oak Park.

The 25th Army Evacuation Hospital unit, built around a nucleus of doctors and nurses from the West Suburban hospital in Oak Park, will enter active service on Saturday, according to a telegram received from the war department by Dr. W. J. Potts, unit director.

Organization of the unit first began at the hospital early in December, when the army urged West Suburban hospital to undertake the task of organizing a unit as it had in the last war. The rôle of this hospital unit, which has a staff of 34 doctors and 52 nurses, involves working among men at the front of the battle zones.

Because of the mechanization of the modern American army, the hospital will also be mobile. It will be primarily a surgical organization. According to army requirements, more than 300 enlisted men will serve along with the officers and nurses. They will fill posts as technicians, orderlies, and male nurses.

Veterans of 1918.

Dr. Potts saw service during the first World war as a sergeant in the chemical warfare division. He will head the surgical work of the unit. Dr. H. E. Swantz, who was a master hospital sergeant in the first war, will head the medical work. Both have received the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Other doctors who have been commissioned in the army to serve this 750 bed hospital include: R. H. Fouser, R. F. Sharer, H. E. Dorton, Leonard Saxon, S. W. Raymond, R. G. Whitmer, C. W. Hughes, Leroy Linnville, K. N. Hiatt, T. R. Hudson, W. O. McQuiston, N. A. Ferri, F. M. Dwan, H. A. Roth, M. F. Heidgen, J. R. Hughes, J. D. Farrington, J. H. Ferguson, H. G. Hardt Jr., J. G. Kostrubala, A. P. Drucker, M. W. Wagner, H. A. Sofield, Ignace P. Lombardo, Robert H. Barter, Henry E. Hamilton. Dr. J. K. Betty and Dr. E. E. Howie will serve in the unit as dentists, and M. W. Bayliss and H. R. Morriss will handle the laboratory and X-ray work. Earl E. Salisbury and Stanley A. Ferguson will be officers in the medical administrative corps attached to the West Suburban unit.

One of 18 in Nation.

A month ago this unit was listed by the American Journal of Nursing as one of five in the midwest, and of 18 in the entire nation. While the letter from the war department containing the orders as to where the hospital unit will be stationed has not yet been received, it is expected that it will first be sent to one of the larger camps in the country for a brief training period before being sent into the battle zones.

The first organization began immediately after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. On Dec. 12 Dr. Potts was appointed unit director by the board of directors of the hospital.

In addition to the doctors serving the unit, 47 nurses will also report for duty on Aug. 15. They are under the leadership of Miss Loretta Carmody of the West Suburban hospital.

The nurses include Margaret Ann Nelson, Ruth Peterson, Alice Ida Rust, Anna Marie Tislov, Janet Wheeler, Lucille Marie Wilson, Iris Wolff, Edith Rose Worthington, Dorothy Ellson, Evelyn Marie Gustafson, Alice Lenore Haffie, Helen Mildred Hicks, Esie Krchnavi, Virginia Loghry, Helen Lonchar, Sarah Mateer, Juanita Moore, Anna Mae Adams, Marguerite Amundson.

Other Nurses Listed.

Others are Evelyn Brown, Ina Carlson, Ruth Campton, Ethel Casperson, Lorraine Coffin, Lydia Dahlen, and Virginia Davis, all of Chicago; Adale Gertrude Stauske of River Forest; Florence L. Talbot, Rita Mary McGinnis, Jane Emily Mussel, and Charlotte Jane Bastian, all of Oak Park; Mabel Irene Whiteman, Oliva McWeeny, and Hilda Cleo Arnold, all of Hines; Mary Elizabeth Metcalf of Waukegan; Evelyn Maude Millis of Cicero; and Elisabeth Amber Gill of Ottumwa, Ia.

The following nurses assigned to the unit are already serving the army on active duty, but will join the unit on Aug. 15: Gladys Farstad, Camp Custer, Michigan; Vivian Graff, Ida Schader, and Geraldine Lapp, Fort Sheridan; Fern Morgan and Alice Reinhard, Selfridge field, Michigan; and Edythe Marie Hasthorne, Chanute field.

LOYOLA CONFERS DEGREES ON 14 FROM WEST AREA

The Rev. Samuel Knox Wilson, S. J., president of Loyola university, conferred 77 graduate and baccalaureate degrees at the summer convocation held recently in St. Ignatius auditorium. Of those awarded degrees 13 were residents of the west side or western suburbs.

The invocation was given by the Rev. Charles I. Doyle, S. J., chairman of the department of psychology at Loyola university. Dr. Paul Kiniery, assistant dean of the graduate school, delivered the commencement address.

WEST SUBURBS PLAN TO SPEED VOTERS' SIGNING

Move to Avoid Rush on Later Dates.

these has more than 1,200 and another more than 1,000. Less than 3,000 of the 75,000 eligible voters have registered thus far, Hartley disclosed. He predicted a hopeless jam on the registration and election days if an early drive is not launched soon.

The actual task of registering under the new act is simple. The voter is first sworn, then gives the deputy information concerning his name, address, term of residence in state, county, and precinct, the country of birth, citizenship status, and age. If a naturalized citizen, he must tell when, where, and in what court he was made a citizen.

Signatures Must Agree.

The voter signs his registration card. On election day he must sign his name in order to receive a ballot, and this signature must agree with the one on the file card. He need never reregister unless he moves or changes his name.

Thruout all the affected counties organizations and individuals have volunteered to help induce voters to sign up, and to aid in the routine work of handling the registrants.

Under the new act, a man in military service need not register in order to vote by absentee ballot. To secure such a ballot, the voter may apply by mail to his county clerk for an affidavit, which he fills out and returns. The clerk will send him an official ballot, which must be marked and returned to the county clerk in time for delivery to the voter's regular polling place before the polls close on election day.

West Side Youths Give Band Concert Tuesday

A 44 piece band made up exclusively of teen age youngsters, directed by Miss Shirley Chalmers, Tuesday evening, will present the eighth of a series of open air concerts on the Roof Garden of the Jewish People's institute, 3500 Douglas boulevard. The band, known as the Youth band, is a product of the immediate neighborhood, and is a pioneering effort to further music study at the Jewish People's institute.

Honor Camper.

Pat Herriman of Barrington Boy Scout troop 10 was selected as the honor camper recently at Camp OH-DAK-KO-TA, the summer training camp for Boy Scouts of the Northwest Suburban council.

MEN ON WEST SIDE WITH 4-F RATINGS USED IN SERVICE

Three west side men are among the first 22 4-F draft registrants in the nation to serve the armed forces. These men, whom physicians called physically unfit for military service, are fighting for Uncle Sam today, and their duties are as vital as a soldier's.

The men were graduated recently as naval ordnance inspectors for the 9th naval ordnance district. They were among 253 men receiving diplomas from Illinois Institute of Technology in one of the institute's largest war training graduation exercises. In addition to the naval ordnance inspectors, 158 enlisted men and officers of the United States Signal corps and 73 army ordnance inspectors of the Chicago ordnance district received diplomas.

Four west side residents were included in the group of 73 army ordnance inspectors who finished the 10 week course. Both during their study and now they are employés of the Chicago ordnance district, and paid under civil service regulations.

The three west side residents finishing the naval ordnance inspection course are: George Johnson, 2222 Adams street; Leo Lantz, 2318 Thomas street, and Charles Hoppe, 4638 20th street.

RIVER FOREST ART LEAGUE HOLDS 3D SUMMER EXHIBIT

The third exhibit of the summer series of the Austin, Oak Par, and River Forest Art league will open with a tea this afternoon at the league clubhouse, 720 Chicago avenue, Oak Park. Oils, water colors, and sculpture will be on display. Taking part will be Alice Wheeler Sommers, chairman, assisted by Verne Mullen, Karl Plath, Grace Hall Hemingway, Claire Cummings, Richard Epperly, Winifred Flack, Charles Dahlgreen, Genevieve Nix Radtke, Ruth Sandel, Fred Oswald, Stuart G. Phillips, Bella Richmond, and Virginia Gardner.

Consumptive Aid Sponsors Dance at Resort Tonight

The Chicago Consumptive Aid society, 3159 Roosevelt road, will sponsor a dance this evening at Zipperstein's resort, on Bangor road, near South Haven, Mich. Irving Fidelman will be master of ceremonies. Proceeds will go toward maintenance of the Fox River sanatorium at Batavia. Mrs. Frieda Granat is chairman in charge of arrangements. Mrs. Rose Busch is president of the Bessie Hirschberg Mother body, sponsoring group.

CZECHS TO RENEW THEIR PLEDGE TO FREE WAY OF LIFE

Parade, Bond Campaign on Program Today.

The Czech-American National alliance, 4049 26th street, will hold its fourth annual Mobilization for Freedom today at Pilsen park, 26th street and Albany avenue. John A. Cervenka, 2438 South Lawndale avenue, honorary president, states that since Munich, the Czechs of Chicago have gathered each year to pledge their faith in democracy and to work toward the alleviation of the suffering of their countrymen in Czecho-slovakia. This year, with America at war, the keynote of the fourth mobilization is "Help America Win by Buying Bonds."

Parade Is Scheduled.

A parade will precede the activities at the park. The procession will form at 1:30 p. m. at 26th street and Karlov avenue, and march east on 26th street to Albany avenue. The reviewing stand will be at the east end of the line of march. Representatives of federal, state, and municipal governments, as well as representatives of the 28 allied nations will be present.

Participating in the parade will be national groups in costume, fraternal units, Sokols, and World War I Legionnaires. Civilian Defense units, Red Cross groups, American Legion posts, and patriotic organizations are also expected to join in the parade. Two of the five ambulances which have been presented to the government by the Western Bohemian Fraternal association will be in the parade.

Plan Bond Campaign.

The program, scheduled to start at 2 o'clock, will open with an intensive war bond drive, to be directed by Robert Brouk, Cicero's Flying Tiger. The drive will be conducted from the cockpit of an airplane which will be installed in Pilsen park for the occasion. Brouk will be assisted by young women Sokols in uniform, who will act as guides and assist in filling out the bond pledges.

Included on the program will be Czech national folk songs and dances, as well as a number of colorful bazaar booths. Frank Shotola, 2220 Ridgeland avenue, Berwyn, is general mobilization chairman. Alliance officers assisting him are Adolph Kacer, president, 2434 South Ridgeway avenue; Vaclav Simaner, treasurer, 1504 South Cuyler avenue, Berwyn, and Vincenc Vrdsky, secretary, 2818 South Ridgeway avenue.

HARLO J. DUNN GETS BOY SCOUT POST AT GENEVA

After serving nearly four and a half years as assistant Boy Scout executive of the Thatcher woods area council, Harlo J. Dunn of Oak Park has received a promotion as Scout executive of the Chief Shabbona council, with headquarters at Geneva. He succeeds Ernest Schmidt, who has been promoted to Scout executive of the Twin Lakes area council with headquarters at Oshkosh, Wis.

Mr. Dunn came up thru the ranks in Detroit as a Scout, camp staff employé, headquarters employé, and finally as a trained field executive. While residing in the Thatcher woods area council, Mr. Dunn has been director of Cubbing in the council, managed district finance campaigns, and handled leadership training work. The Geneva council has a membership of about 900 boys.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunn have a son, Philip, 14, who has been active in Troop 2, and a daughter, Tamara, 8. His successor has not been named.

Effingham County Picnic Set for Next Sunday

The annual Effingham county picsouthern Illinois county will be held nic for all former residents of the southern Illinois county will be held next Sunday in the Forest Hill picnic grove on Higgins road. It will be an all-day picnic with a basket dinner at noon. Forest Davis of Arlington Heights is picnic chairman and Mrs. Frances Martin, 7650 Touhy avenue, is assisting with arrangements. The picnic grove is located one and one-half miles west of the Arlington Heights road.

Golden Wedding Dinner Party

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Van Tuyl, 228 North Menard avenue, recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at Mills park in Oak Park. More than 50 members of their immediate family and friends were present for dinner. Seven of the 10 children born to Mr. and Mrs. Van Tuyl are still living, and they have 22 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Mr. Van Tuyl, a chemical engineer engaged in defense work, has been employed in that field for 45 years. The Van Tuyls moved to Chicago from Kankakee 10 years ago. [Toloff Photo.]

10 AT HALF WAY MARK IN CIVILIAN FLIGHT TRAINING

Compose First Class at Elmhurst College.

Ten "Yankee Doodle Dandies," members of the first class under the Army Civilian Pilot Training program at Elmhurst college, recently completed the first half of an eight week preliminary course. The progress made has opened up a possibility that the quota of the next class on Sept. 1 will be enlarged, perhaps to 20, according to Elmer H. Tiedemann, coördinator, and Willis J. Rollins, flight contractor.

More than 20 applications already have been received for the second session. Those who cannot be accommodated will be given priorities on future classes, opening each eight weeks.

These Ten Chosen.

The ten selected from more than 30 applicants to fill the first quota are John Gustafson, Leslie Carlson, Frank Hibbard, and Robert Harley, Chicago; Donald Forsythe and John Davis, Elmhurst; Lewis Erichs, Lombard; Stanley Davis, Lake Village, Ind.; Dellis Jacobsen, Leland, Ill.; and Thomas Davis, Wheaton.

Recruited between July 5 and 13, the first class was named "Yankee Doodle Dandies" in recognition of their patriotism in volunteering for the program. Tho they received maintenance and free instruction, they get no pay during the early weeks of training. All the men previously applied for army air cadet training but were rejected, usually for minor physical defects.

All ten of the men in the first quota were soloing at the Elmhurst airport after about eight hours of flight training.

Applications Taken Now.

To avoid delay in the opening of the next session, CPT applications now are being received at Elmhurst college from men 18 to 36 years old. Both the college and the airport are prepared to handle at least twice the present quota.

Trainees under the new quota in September will learn flight principles and elementary military discipline and drill on the Elmhurst campus. Flight instruction at the Rollins Aviation company will be in light power planes similar in operation to the gliders in which the men, eventually, hope to serve their country.

Elmhurst college is among the first ground-flight centers established under the new army sponsored CPT program.

WEST GARFIELD SEEKING TALENT FOR PARK DRAMA

West Garfield community, number 8 in the west side division, has issued an invitation to amateur actors to participate in a pageant Aug. 20 in Garfield park. A sketch called "Washington at Valley Forge" will be presented by local talent. The script has been written and produced in conjunction with the drama division of the park district. The first west side presentation will be given Aug. 17 at Sheridan park.

Elmhurst Bride

Mrs. Paul R. Patterson was Miss Helen Louise Heck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Heck of 325 Cottage Hill road, Elmhurst, before her recent marriage to Dr. Patterson, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Patterson of Kansas City, Mo.

DU PAGE NAVAL AIR UNIT TRAINS AT IOWA SCHOOL

Du Page county's own naval air squadron of "White Eagles" ordered recently to flight training at the Iowa City, Ia., preflight school, will find two former Du Page men among their 200 navy teachers. The men are Robert Grieve of Glenbard and John Haman of Naperville.

The squadron will enter three months' extensive training at Iowa City prior to spending three months at the naval reserve base for preliminary flight training. They will then be transferred to one of the three great naval air schools for advance flight instruction to prepare for flying officer's commissions.

It is said that a second "White Eagles" squadron will be formed in the near future if enough young men from Du Page county become flying cadets.

PLAN FIELD MEET AT ELMHURST ON YOUTH DEFENSE

Children to Show Results of Play Program.

Bringing to a climax a program of eight weeks of supervised play, the Elmhurst Recreation council will hold a children's emergency defense field meet Wednesday night at Wilder park. Mrs. Esther G. Armstrong, supervisor of the summer's program, will direct the evening's activities starting at 6 o'clock. Frederick G. Gills, boys' director of the program, will officiate and announce the events. A gala family night is planned.

Mrs. Armstrong holds a certificate of proficiency in physical fitness as a master instructor issued by the OCD. Thru emergency defense in play form the child, it is said, not only learns how to handle himself in case of emergency but enjoys the activity as well. The recreation council is sponsored by fourteen of Elmhurst's organizations.

Divided Into Age Groups.

For the program Wednesday night, boys and girls have been divided into primary, intermediate, and junior-senior high groups. An obstacle course has been devised for each age grouping in which the participant acts out a definite situation. Tin cans, prepared according to government regulations, will be used in a novelty relay race.

Four junior Red Cross units will demonstrate what they have learned in classes, and there will be a display of injured dolls bandaged according to specifications. Seventy-five boys and girls will receive the junior Red Cross certificate for completing fifteen hours of instruction. Each boy or girl taking part in the meet will receive an official OCD physical fitness badge.

Games After Supper.

Picnic supper will be followed by a boys' softball championship game, tennis, and exhibition of handicraft, dancing, and creative dramatics. Miss Ruth Strand, librarian, will be in charge of the parade of story book characters. There will be a puppet show and a cracker box Derby.

Assistants in the program include Miss Ruth Brown, assistant director of the recreation school; Oakley V. Morgan and Mrs. Walter Ernst, awards; Mrs. Theodore L. McDaniel, publicity; Mrs. R. W. Damron, assisted by Mrs. D. J. Thompson, craft exhibit chairman; Mrs. Carl Schmidt, dance; Mrs. Edith Cooper, singing games; Mrs. Paul Selonke, pianist; Mrs. Lucille Brown, dramatics; Mrs. W. B. Talbott, Junior Red Cross exhibit and demonstration.

JOHN L. JOYCE IS NEW LEADER OF CORNWALL POST

John L. Joyce recently was elected commander of Norman J. Cornwall post of the American Legion.

Other newly elected officers are Alfred C. Simons and John F. Butler, vice commanders; Michael J. Gengler, finance officer; Allen J. Erne, financial secretary; John M. Stevens, chaplain, and Edward T. Hook, sergeant at arms.

The post and its Sons of the Legion squadron will hold their annual picnic next Sunday on the grounds of the post clubhouse, 28th street and Forest avenue, North Riverside. John F. Butler is chairman of the picnic committee.

TUNES OF OTHER DAYS REVIVED AT RECORD STATIONS

Riverside Legion Post Extends Drive.

The story that phonograph records tell may be read by a glimpse into the receptacles used at collection places in the American Legion drive that has been in progress for several weeks. The plan has called for the collection of the records to be used as scrap in making new records for USO centers.

In Riverside, George W. Jindrich, local druggist, offered to make his store a record salvage headquarters. The response has been a large assortment of discs dating back to the first days of the phonograph on thru to recordings of current tunes. One contributor sighted a record that intrigued him so much he offered to buy it from Mr. Jindrich, who agreed that he would be willing to trade it for two additional ones.

In the Jindrich collection may be found ballads and orchestrations to fit every mood. The metal discs have caught in their grooves the slow cadences of gospel hymns and the jerky rhythm of singers of the blues.

Was Best Seller.

Perhaps the oldest record is "The Herd Girl's Dream," a badly scratched and partially broken plate that was a best seller some thirty years ago when phonographs were still a novelty.

The collection offers ample evidence that many a song was written to be enjoyed by a limited audience. There are titles little heard of. In other instances, the name of a song immediately strikes a responsive chord because of the memory it evokes. Yet it has been years since the particular tune was the vogue. Without significance, it is to be hoped, a recording of "O, Promise Me" arrived broken in half.

Musical tastes of the villagers are indicated by the songs they have played over and over during leisure hours in their homes. The opera, "Aida," is a companion of "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" in the collection box. Here is a group of five records, carefully kept in their wrappers, all of which are sentimental. This collection includes "When I'm Gone You'll Soon Forget."

Many Southern Airs.

The collection also brings a reminder of humorous dialog represented by "Cohen on the Telephone," or "Fun on the Farm."

Listeners of the records contributed traveled far and wide as the needle wended its way. Most frequently they journeyed south of the Mason and Dixon line thru the nostalgic fancies of the song writer. They shared a longing for "The Red River Valley" or "The Isle of May." Hawaii was a popular locale for many record purchasers. Christmas carols are well scattered thru the collection.

Frank J. Wood, commander of the Riverside Legion post, in extending the drive for another week, said: "The more old records we salvage the more new records the men in the service will be able to enjoy."

AUTO POOL PLAN HEAD IS NAMED FOR LA GRANGE

Fred Dewey, 243 South 7th avenue, La Grange, has been appointed community defense transportation chairman to aid in the organization of "automobile pools" in La Grange. Registrations by those seeking to assist in the program for saving rubber are made at the civilian defense office in the town hall.

Mr. Dewey is desirous that all persons interested in the pool contact the defense office and give their names and addresses, time of leaving home, destination, and time of starting home. Windshield stickers for each car owning member of the club are being made available. The La Grange project is part of an intensive share-the-car campaign under way in the entire metropolitan civilian defense area.

"La Grange is so situated that many of its residents travel in several directions for work in plants now engaged in vital war production," said Mr. Dewey. "Already there has been considerable car sharing, but it is our plan to develop the system so that every automobile will be utilized to its capacity.

"The campaign will be carried on not only for those traveling to and from work in plants engaged in war production, but for those who drive to and from their work in Chicago, on shopping trips in La Grange, and to school this fall.

Wed 50 Years

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Cherry, 3039 Harrison street, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary recently with a reception at their summer home on Channel lake, near Antioch. They have two daughters, Mrs. Wilbur M. Adams of Highland Park, and Mrs. Harry G. Walter of Elmhurst, and two grandsons, William C. and Harry G. Walter Jr.

New Lions Club Officials

10,000 Are Expected at Festival.

Irish music, songs, and dancing will feature the annual observance of "Lady Day in Harvest" by Chicago's Irish at Harms park, 4207 North Western avenue, next Saturday. Leading Chicago citizens of Irish birth and descent will appear on the speakers' platform, including Bishop Sheil, and Mayor Kelly. Bishop Sheil has been named honorary chairman of the day.

More than 10,000 persons are expected to assemble for the program, which will include athletic contests, competitions among pipers, fiddlers, flute and accordion players.

"Honoring the feast of 'Lady Day in Harvest,' an annual event celebrated in Ireland for more than a century, is held equal to St. Patrick's day by the Irish people," said John J. Hurley, who will be general chairman of the Chicago program. "The outstanding celebration in Ireland is the gathering of the clans at numerous places thruout the country. The assemblies are familiarly known as 'patterns.'"

Contests on Program.

Chicago's leading clans will compete for the honor of being known as the greatest Irish name in Chicago. Among family names registered for the contest are Murphy, Sullivan, Kelly, O'Brien, Burke, O'Connor, McCarthy, Gallagher, and O'Malley.

Thomas Cook, chairman of the entertainment committee, announced that Tom Lennon and his musicians will play ancient and modern Irish airs, as well as popular music. Special numbers will be played on Irish war pipes by Eddie Mullaney. Other artists scheduled to appear include Mary Langdon, Rita Callaghan, Kathleen O'Donnell, Kay Quinlisk, Tom Hanlon, and Allan Child.

The Rev. E. Oliver Boyle is moderator of Irish day. P. J. Flannery is vice president of the committee; H. Emmet McHugh, secretary; John McGinnis, treasurer, and Edward B. Dwyer, John O'Shea, William B. Sheehan, and T. F. Cook, trustees.

Committee Members Listed.

NAME E. F. PFLUG HEAD OF AMERICAN LEGION 5TH DISTRICT COUNCIL

Elmer F. Pflug, past commander of Sarlo-Sharp post, recently was elected commander of the fifth district council of the American Legion. Emmett R. Watts, of Forges post, is retiring commander of the council which last year led all districts in the state in enrollment of membership.

[Blaise Photo.]

Twenty-nine posts comprise the district. Ten are on Chicago's west side and 19 are in the west suburbs. The 1942 membership exceeds 6,000.

The new commander will be installed Sept. 10 when the district council meets as guest of Sarlo-Sharp post in Melrose Park. Other new officers to be installed are George R. Kelly of Brophy post, vice commander; Richard E. Hayes of Maywood post, adjutant; and John J. Joyce of Norman J. Cornwall post, finance officer.

Forges post will be host to the district Aug. 18 when delegates will assemble for the final session before the annual department convention at Peoria.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Aug. 10

Monday is yet time to sow more vegetables, such as beans, radishes, carrots, beets, and Chinese cabbage. Endive is quite hardy and not easily injured by early frost. It is tender and useful in a salad when blanched.

Blanching is a means whereby light is excluded from the center leaves which causes them to be tender and light in appearance. Simply tie up the leaves with rubber bands or twine. It takes from 10 to 20 days to be ready for use.

Gardeners who grow roses should stop applying plant food now to prevent sudden stimulation and tender growth late in the season or thoro ripening of the stems may not take place and the plants suffer from winter killing.

Tuesday, Aug. 11

Order pansy seed and sow immediately to obtain strong plants for next spring's planting. When the seedlings have made some growth they should be transplanted to a frame or permanent place in the flower garden or border. Buy only a high grade strain.

Make plans to build a new lawn this month and up to Sept. 15. By preparing the ground and sowing in fall the growth will be strong enough to withstand winter weather without injury. Some watering may be necessary because the young plants must have moisture to insure development. A good layer of peat worked into the upper surface before sowing will give a good seedbed and be moisture holding.

If possible, spade under a copious amount of decayed manure to add humus to the soil. Humus is lacking in many gardens in the city and decayed manure or other vegetable matter such as peat, incorporated in the soil will add much to the growing conditions. Weeds do not grow as rapidly in fall as they do in spring.

Wednesday, Aug. 12

All gardeners should take good care of their equipment and especially rubber hose and spraying apparatus. Do not allowed hose to remain outdoors in full sun, but when thru using it coil it up and hang it on wall pegs to prevent pinching and subsequent leaking.

Keep the lawn mower in the best possible condition, well oiled, and keep the wheels from being clogged with grass. Roll up the garden line when not in use. Clean the hoe each time it is used and wipe with an oiled rag.

Thursday, Aug. 13

Do not pinch hardy chrysanthemums from this time on, but a good application of plant food will be beneficial and produce strong stems and abundant flower buds. Water plants in the morning to give them time to dry off before evening or mildew may attack them.

Do not cultivate vegetables too deep. The roots have had ample time to spread and many will be near the surface. These are feeding roots and should not be destroyed. It is not generally realized that trees require food to keep in good health. Many trees would quickly respond to applications of food and they would not be as susceptible to insect attacks and disease.

Food can be supplied any time when the ground is not frozen. There are specially prepared foods available, but a complete commercial food will give excellent results. The amount to use depends on the size of the tree, the rule being to use one pound to each inch of circumference of the trunk measured 4 feet above the ground.

Friday, Aug. 14

Food is applied at the drip or outermost branches of a tree because the feeding roots are located there. Take a 2 inch auger and bore holes about 18 inches deep at intervals of 2 feet or more and fill half way with the food and the other half with soil. Much of the food elements will soon be available.

It cannot be expected, however, that long neglected, stunted trees will ever regain their luxuriant appearance. Trees must be carefully tended at all times or from the time they are planted. Many trees should have the deadwood removed. This can be done at this time because it is easily observed while the leaves are present.

Saturday, Aug. 15

Madonna lily bulbs may be obtained soon and the earlier they are planted the better. Plant only 2 inches to the top of the bulb. If a considerable number are planted mulch with leafmold or peat. Old bulbs can be divided. Lift and divide the Virginia bluebells. If morning glories are cut when in bud they make fine early morning displays.

If the cabbage heads show a tendency to crack twist the stems to break the roots on one side. Pick the mature fruits of eggplants and peppers to give the smaller fruits a chance to develop quickly. Lettuce can be sown in the cold frame, protected with cheese cloth if necessary.

CLAY TILE COMES TO THE FORE AS REPAIR MATERIAL

Not Needed for War, It's Durable and Beautiful.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

After thousands of years of use, genuine clay tile is more than ever to the fore. It has an age old reputation for enduring soundness and beauty, and it is not considered a critical war material.

If a bathroom or a kitchen in your home is in need of repair there is tile for your consideration. For some time color has played a leading part in our homes and we all know what can be accomplished with it, how it can counteract structural and architectural defects, overcome poor lighting and poorly planned exposures. Manufacturers of tile have been aware of these truths and have developed tiles to the point where color combinations are almost limitless.

One manufacturer of these clay tiles has gone to great care to enable prospective customers to see the possibilities of tile, and its harmonious color balanced combinations. Assembled and interchangeable panels of full sized tile are to be found in dealers' show rooms.

These closely approximate the appearance of a finished installation so that a home owner can experiment with endless color combinations and know with certainty that he has what he wants before he makes his final selection.

Many Patterns Available.

There's an interesting and comparatively new line of decorated tiles introduced into the tile family. Here very dainty and provocative patterns have been applied under the glaze so that the softness of the decoration cannot be marred or impaired.

In a dealer's showroom displaying these tiles you can see a certain pattern which is a copy of a delicate French wall paper, and available in 13 color combinations.

Rickrack and fluted patterns also adapt themselves to different type rooms, and under their glaze these lovely tracings are as easy to clean as china. This type tile can be grouped with plain tile to form unusual backgrounds of contrast and beauty.

Modern Mosaic Floors.

Ceramic mosaic floors can be very modern in treatment with design motifs instead of conventional all over repeat patterns. The same wide choice of color combinations is possible in floors as in walls, the colors balanced within themselves and with the wainscot.

Dealers are qualified and ready to give individual problems the study they need and to suggest smart variations of specially designed bands and insets, and all installations are guaranteed. And with floors, as with walls, you can see before you, thru the use of the interchangeable sections of full size tile panels, the floor as it will appear in your own home.

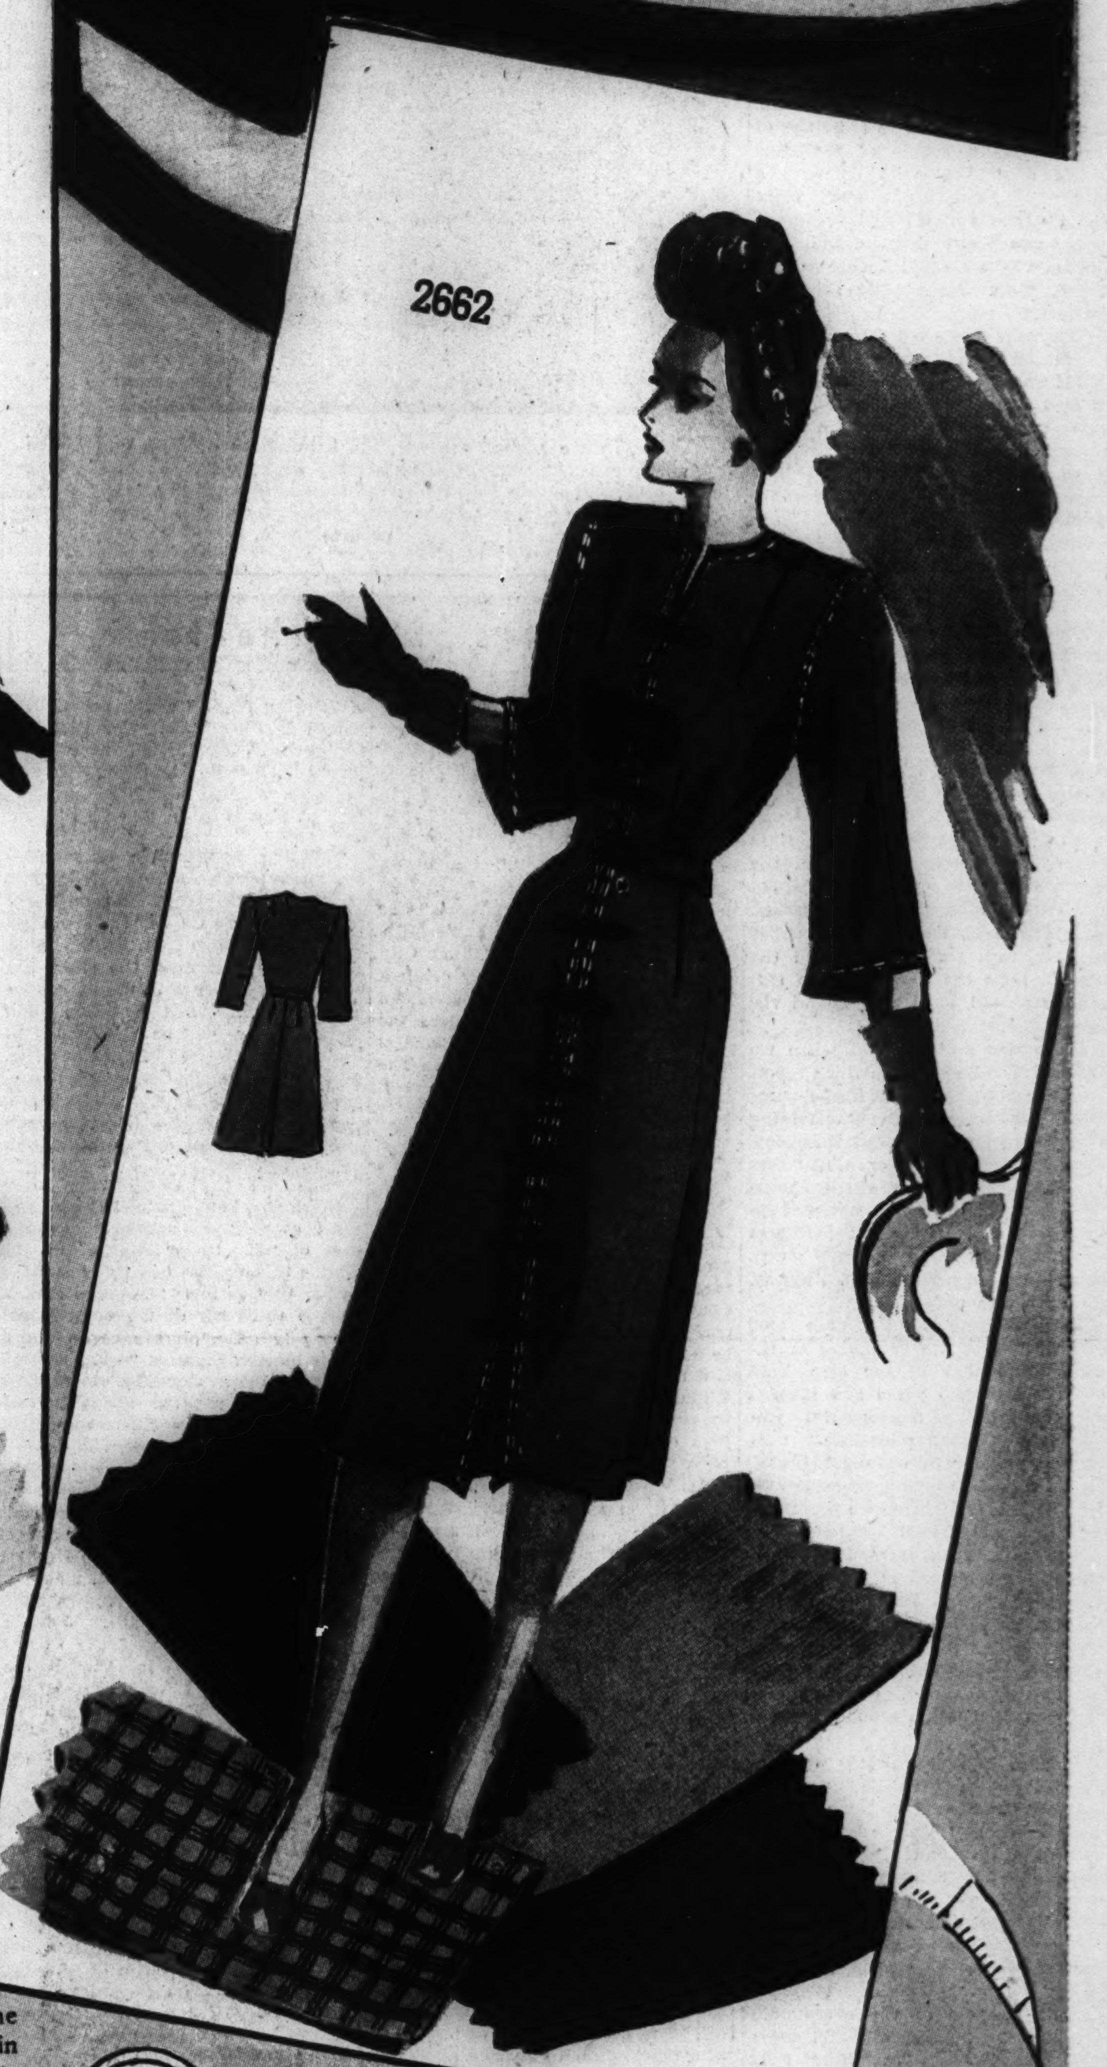
Tribune Fashion Show Designs in Patterns



By CLOTILDE

THIS is a scoop for clever women who sew their own clothes; patterns based not on current fashion trends but on prophetic styling. From the many winning designs in the 1942 Chicago Tribune Annual American Fashions competition, just concluded, we have selected these three for pattern adaptation because they supply the wide variety of fall and winter wardrobe needs of busy women everywhere. We are accustomed to and demand the most modern in dress styles. These frocks are not only modern, they are supermodern, forward-looking, fashionable this year and for at least another year to come. Wartime heightens one's sense of value. Even the investment in a new dress must be a sound one. You can make and wear these three frocks with the assurance that time and money have been wisely spent, wardrobe smartness guaranteed for more than just one season.

Pattern No. 2663—Two-piece fashion forecast. The slim skirt has a single plait low in the front. Curved lines accent the jacket at neckline, hem, and at the base of the bracelet length sleeves. Color contrast enters the picture thru the medium of four set-in pockets, three horizontal frogs, and a pocket kerchief. Designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 3½ yards of 39-inch material or 2⅜ yards of 54-inch fabric.

Pattern No. 2661—The hemline predicts a fashion trend to come. Its crenelated lines are echoed in the square buttons on the bodice. Revealing the throat below its bow, the collar is in unity with the neckline, not merely attached to it. Another bow finishes the self-material belt. Designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 39-inch material or 2 yards of 54-inch fabric.

Pattern No. 2662—The simple media of contrasting stitching and loop frogs of the dress material distinguish this slender coat-frock model. In bracelet length, the sleeves are full, the armholes deep. Designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 39-inch material.

It Isn't the Same Old Coney Island, Critic Finds

Wartime Has Changed the Famous Park

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK [Special].—"How's my Coney Island?" wrote Pvt. John Henderson at the end of a letter from somewhere in the heart of the armed forces. "Pretty lousy, what? I remember—"

What Pvt. Henderson remembered was a day he and his young lady spent at Coney a matter of three years ago, when everything was practically "jake" with both of them. They had taken a couple of bottles of "coke" and a couple of hot dogs ["Hot dog! We could do with a couple of those right now, right here!" John agreed] and sat down on the beach after a swim and, boy! Did they have a time! Except for the crowd. That was a little thick for comfort.

"Anyway, how's old Coney?" Pvt. Henderson wants to know. Not knowing, it was necessary to make the trip to find out. And is it a trip! No buses running these days. No boats. No gas. So the subway takes you there, and brings back what is left of you after a three hour tour of inspection.

Well, John, Coney, as you suspect, isn't what it used to be. It carries the old outlines and something of the old spirit, but you wouldn't be pressed for room to stretch in, not on week days, now. At night you and the girl could have the beach practically to yourselves.

It isn't the same old beach, either, that it was last time we made the trip. Somebody, Park Commissioner Moses, probably, has given it the Jones beach touch. Everywhere you walk there are trash baskets, rows on rows of them. As a result, the sands are swept clear of discarded newspapers, discarded lunch baskets, discarded hats, baseball bats, paper napkins, torn bathing caps and the like. A little too clean to seem natural to an old, old Coney Island visitor.

There was still daylight when we arrived. The boardwalk, which seems a good deal farther from Surf avenue that it used to seem, was entertaining a scattered crowd. It was Thursday. That may be a good or a bad day. Being the maid's day off, it should be a good day for Coney, but perhaps the maid isn't taking her pleasures as lightly as she did before the war, or she may be in munitions. Anyway, it was a thin crowd.

The parachute drop that once stood and thrived at the beginning of the Gay White Way at the New York World's fair two years ago [there's another stirring memory for you, John!] was doing a desultory business. Service men were going aloft in pairs and dropping nonchalantly. No squeals from them. An occasional boy and girl friend went up, and came down, with giggles. Business wasn't what it was at the fair, the ticket seller told us. Nothing like, in fact. At Coney they have to close down with the dark, he said. Couldn't string lights up and down the 250 foot tower. Couldn't even have exposed lights around the base of the tower.

It was, however, pretty dark before they quit, this particular Thursday night. Strangers kept popping in and daring each other to dare both the ride and the dark. Must have added something to the thrill to be taken 250 feet into the air and then dropped down thru the night.

The shops were closing as darkness settled. A few kept open, and when their lights became conspicuously bright, because of the surrounding blackness, a policeman would appear and speak about it. More lights would go out, and the awning would be lowered another foot.

A few bars were serving a few persons; a hot dog stand here and there; candy shops, a soda fountain or two; and one bump-the-bumps concession continued to invite trade, back of a screened entrance. The fun here naturally depended on the crowd. Jolly crowd, lots of yelling, lots of fun. Two or four or six persons, everybody embarrassed and quiet.

About one wheel chair to the mile, I'd say. And about 50 strollers to the block. Even when the lights were turned on, they seemed to deepen the shadows rather than to brighten the walk. The back, or ocean side, of each lamp is painted out, and about a third of the front, or promenade side. This throws the benches along the rail in the shadow, and these were, reasonably enough, popular parking places. A soldier and his sweetheart, a sailor and his lass, each pair taking up the center of each bench to discourage other parkers. They seemingly were strung the length of the boardwalk. The nestling was pretty much of a pattern.

As darkness settled the crowd moved back toward Surf avenue. All the little alleyways of games and gayety were alive now. Steadily the barkers' voices rose to the familiar amusement park roar. I missed the rat-a-tat of the shooting galleries.

Curiously, John, the boys don't seem to be interested in shooting these war days. These penny popguns, I suppose, don't mean much anymore. They had rather play with the electric machine gun targets with which they shoot flying airplanes out of the sky, or throw baseballs at wooden milk bottles piled into pyramids.

Throwing games are popular this year, they tell me. They offer something to smash. Here are targets you can give all you have in that good right arm. Here are scowling caricatures of Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito, superimposed upon the rear elevations of a collection of spavined horses. A good smashing hit on any of these and you win both satisfaction and a prize. The boys I watched were not interested in the prizes. They just wanted to throw something and hit something with it, the fighting impulse.

There was a "dump-the-girl" item near the entrance to Luna park. If you hit a six inch target above the girl, lying loosely on a couch in decorative pajamas, she comes tumbling to the floor. That's still fun. But again the satisfaction seemed to be in the smashing of the target rather than the confusion of the girl.

John, you would be surprised to see what slacks have done to steeplechase. All the girls wear them and walk over the airjets defiantly. Probably you remember the days when crowds of two or three hundred used to sit for hours in front of the little trick stage, waiting hopefully to see the skirts fly when the girls came on, innocently looking for an exit. You remember those smooth sliding games, and the rolling games; the human pool table and the barrel-of-fun, teeming with hysterical young women trying to hold their skirts with one hand and their hats with the other?

They're practically all gone. I suspect that on week-ends and holidays the steeplechase promoters hire a few discreetly gowned maiden ladies to substitute for the old fashioned girls who never expected to see the day when they would be wearing men's pants. They do, if they're the showmen they used to be.

The old pin-ball games, the rabbit race, the world in wax and the fortune tellers are still going strong. There is a popular poker game which is an adaptation of pin-ball and bingo, rows of tables at which you sit and roll rubber balls toward rows of holes numbered and named for the ranking cards in a deck. If you get a straight, or a full house, or three, four or five of a kind, you also get one or more packages of cigarets. Seemed to be popular. Poker usually is.

The wax works, not to take the edge off your visit, is prepared to give you a glimpse of the mad Espositos being electrocuted; or the escape of Rudolf Hess; or Gen. MacArthur in Bataan. Or, if you are interested, a lifelike copy of Lina Medina, the world's youngest mother.

No, John, it's not the same old Coney. Not entirely. I have a suspicion, however, that it will pull thru and still be going strong when you get home. Give my regards to the other boys. If they want to hand you any Chinese money, 'take it. It's going to be just as good as any, after this thing's over, over there.

RUTH AND SISTER EILEEN

Thru a second summer, the tribulations of Ruth and Eileen Sherwood, as played by Effie Afton (left) and Peggy Van Vleet, continue to attract audiences to "My Sister Eileen" at the Harris.

Notes of the Theater

Thornton Wilder's "The Merchant of Yonkers" is the newest surprise package of the enterprising Port players of Shorewood, Wis. This farce comedy, presented three seasons ago on Broadway with Jane Cowl as star, has not been professionally produced in the middle west, altho it has been seen a few times in tributary theaters in this region. A far cry from "Our Town," "The Merchant of Yonkers" is laid in Yonkers and New York City in the 1880s. In an entirely original fashion, it makes use of occasional songs and dances, and requires the characters to indulge in whimsical Wilder asides to the audience. The Shorewood production will be costumed with full period flavor.

The title rôle of the merchant, originally played by Percy Waram, will be undertaken by the versatile Morton Da Costa. Helene Ambrose will appear in the Jane Cowl rôle. The performance will be directed by Edmund C. Wilkes, one of the original members of the Port players in their Port Washington days, who is on a short furlough from the army before entering officers' training. Tonight the Port players offer their final performance of "Rain," with Miss Ambrose as Sadie Thompson.

The autumn calendar of theatrical attractions is now gradually beginning to take definite shape. Altho no final date has been set for the opening of "Junior Miss," which follows "My Sister Eileen" into the Harris theater in September, two other opening nights have been settled upon. A revised edition of the healthy perennial, "Hellzapoppin," returns to the Erlanger theater Sept. 28, with Lew Parker and Jackie Gleason as head men. The show will be known as "The New Hellzapoppin of 1942-'43," and is described as "entirely different in cast and material" from the earlier version of the zany musical. The new book and material are, of course, devised by Olsen and Johnson. The musical score has been composed by Charles Tobias and Sammy Fain, who worked together on "Sons o' Fun," the current Olsen and Johnson nonsense piece in New York. In addition to the featured duo of Parker and Gleason, the cast will include Barto and Mann, Charles Withers and the Radio Rogues.

The other definite date now available is Oct. 5, for "Spring Again," the comedy by Isabel Leighton and Bertram Bloch starring Grace George and C. Aubrey Smith. Guthrie McClintic is the producer and director of "Spring Again," which ran all last season in New York. The excellent supporting cast, carried over from last year, includes Ann Andrews and the incomparable Joseph Buloff. The play will come to the Selwyn theater.

"Skating Vanities," a roller skating show which made its debut last season before large audiences of Madison Square Garden in New York, will be in Chicago from Sept. 9 to 20. Elaborately costumed, the show has been put together with the assistance of Gae Foster and Fanchon, and Marco. There will be a chorus of 24 Rollerettes and 12 Roller Cadets. Among the principal skating performers are Lucille Page, Gloria Nord, Buster West, Bobby May, Hughes, and Finnegan, and others too numerous to list.

Edith Gresham, one of the best and most experienced actresses in the cast of "My Sister Eileen" at the Harris theater, has exactly eight lines in her part as the prospective tenant. In the third act of the comedy she comes into the picture as an apartment hunter, inquires "what sadist" designed the kitchenette, utters other disapproving remarks about the appointments of the Sherwood girls' Greenwich Village home, and departs in a huff. In this short part the sureness of her thrusts bespeaks extensive training and experience. Miss Gresham comes from a theatrical family, for her parents were Herbert and Martha Ford Gresham, members of Augustin Daly's well known stock company. Her grandfather, John T. Ford, was the owner of the theater bearing his name in Washington, where Abraham Lincoln was assassinated. Ford was imprisoned for three months before he was absolved of any responsibility for the crime. Miss Gresham is now appearing in her third Max Gordon production, the earlier ones having been "The Women" and "Sing Out the News."

Rufus King's mystery play, "Invitation to a Murder," not seen often hereabouts, is the next attraction of the Belfry players in Williams Bay, Wis. It will open a run of nine consecutive nights on Saturday. John Ross Winnie will direct.

The Berkshire playhouse, whose professional schedule was abandoned this summer in the face of wartime restrictions, has found a way to get its student productions before its gasless customers. Each week the so-called Berkshire Circuit theater, composed of student players, makes the rounds of four towns in the Berkshire hills area, playing one night each at Pittsfield, Great Barrington, Lenox, and Stockbridge. Evidently the combined resources of the group provide a sufficient gasoline supply to make the novel arrangement possible.

N. U. Theater Presents Play by Ex-Bus Boy

By Cecil Smith.

Two years ago, when Ruth Chatterton was crossing the country in one night stands with "Pygmalion," she decided suddenly—with the concurrence of Harold J. Kennedy, her producer—to drop the Shaw classic in favor of a series of tryout performances of a new play by a young and unknown playwright. The author's name was George Batson, and he was working at that time as bus boy in a New York nickel-in-the-slot restaurant. He had never had a play produced.

Mr. Kennedy scurried about until he found, out in California, some settings from the road company of "Kiss the Boys' Goodbye" which could be remodeled enough to serve the needs of the new play. And on one memorable evening in early 1941, the city of Amarillo, away out in the panhandle of Texas, played host to what may have been its first world première. The play did not succeed, either in Amarillo or in the other southwestern and southern cities in which it was presented. I have no first hand report to make, not having seen it, inasmuch as the company did not venture nearer to Chicago than Memphis, Tenn.

I should have no reason to mention this rather obscure failure if it were not for the persistent regularity with which the name of George Batson keeps coming up in the theatrical news. He is one of those young authors, of whom there are always a good many, whose talent is inescapably promising, but too undisciplined to be quite saleable. Even after the failure of her first experiment, Miss Chatterton could not shake off the notion that there was something worth salvaging out of Mr. Batson's gifts. Last August she experimented with a second play, at the Cambridge, Mass., summer theater. I happened to be in Boston that week, and had a chance to steal a look at the play. It had a trite theme, about a worldly wife and mother who suddenly returned to create consternation in the family she had deserted some 20 years earlier. But some of the lines were full of gleam and glitter, and in between stretches of irritation at the author's banality and naïveté, one could not help being delighted by the occasional thrusts of an original and brisk gift for writing dialog.

Apparently both Guthrie McClintic and Jane Cowl were tantalized by Mr. Batson's now-you-see-it-now-you-don't kind of talent, for Mr. McClintic took an option on the original Amarillo play, changed the title to "Treat Her Gently," and evidently persuaded Miss Cowl that it would be just the vehicle for her. In a week or two of tryout performances the sad truth again became evident; there just wasn't quite enough in it to carry it along as a successful commercial piece. Plans for a New York opening were abandoned, and Mr. Batson is still unrepresented in New York.

A week ago the Northwestern university summer theater gave Chicagoans a chance to make the acquaintance of the young author [who now has given up his automat job and moved into a higher range of wage earning without yet finding a way to make his living out of the theater]. I do not know the proper chronological place of "Every Family Has One" in the list of Mr. Batson's works, but it was the third of his plays to reach production on the stage. At Evanston Clarence Miller staged the comedy shrewdly, with an attractive and well trained group of youngsters from the high schools and preparatory schools of the Evanston area.

"Every Family Has One" suffered from a plot so bromidic that you felt like screaming with ennui half way thru the second act. It is a variant on the timeworn scenario of the social climber of a mother who is trying to force her daughter into a loveless marriage with a blue blooded pantywaist, and who is outwitted by a realistic and homespun old grandma. But once again it was the same story; lines and passages of dialog were so sparkling that you almost, but not quite, forgave Mr. Batson for the ineptitude of the rest of the play. And in full justice, it must be said that the construction of the scenes was tight and swift moving, and that the mechanics of the playwriting revealed a good deal of professional technical knowledge.

I am hoping that "Every Family Has One" is an earlier play, produced after its time. It would be pleasant to believe that Mr. Batson has made some progress toward discovering fresher subject matter. But as things stand, the Batson question remains unsolved. If he can bring his plot materials and his characterization up to the level of his best dialog, the American stage may gain a bright author of comedies. If he cannot, he will of course fade from the picture after these brief flashes of opportunity, and will, let us hope, achieve a successful career in business or in the army.

The Theater of the Dunes at Beverly Shores, Ind., found itself in need of funds and decided to stage "White Cargo" for the sake of the box office. The device worked, for customers packed the theater the night I was there, and, more wonderful still, did not seem to be sorry that they were there.

I had never seen "White Cargo," and thought it about time to complete my education. The play, a product of the lurid 1920s, seems an incredible piece of trash from the superior vantage point of 1942 culture. As was often the hypocritical custom in older days, the author explains in a printed note that the play is not intended to be merely sensational, but is intended, with implied moral uprightness, to give a true picture of the "dry rot" [he should have said "damp rot"] which afflicts both vegetables and human beings in the tropics.

There isn't a well drawn character in the play. The priggish young Englishman who ultimately falls into the clutches of Tondelayo, a seductive half-breed, is hopelessly nasty-nice, and when Tondelayo started to poison him I suffered from a poorly repressed sadistic wish to see her carry the job thru to completion. The sexual innuendos, which are what bring the customers, now seem harmless and categorical, and almost Victorian alongside the easy virtue of "Good Night, Ladies."

As to the somewhat hysterical performance given at Beverly Shores, I have nothing to say, since no kind of acting would make "White Cargo" into a work of art. But I do think it is worth while to report one customer's reaction to the performance of the young woman who gave her all to the rôle of Tondelayo. "Confidentially," he said to his companion, "she slinks."

The public response to the Belfry players, at Williams Bay, Wis., is most heartening this summer. Even tho it was Monday, which is usually the slimmest night of the week at any theater box office, the picturesque one-time Mormon chapel was completely sold out for "The Little Foxes" the night I was there.

Janet Fairbank, better known to Chicagoans as an operatic soprano, undertook her second acting assignment of the summer as Regina Giddens—the character originally played by Tallulah Bankhead. Once the action got underway, Miss Fairbank developed force and credibility, and in general displayed a caliber of talent which ought to provide a future for her on the speaking stage, if she should ever decide to abandon opera and concerts for this new field of endeavor.

The other performers, with less experience and training, naturally seemed a little more at loose ends. In fact, you will see better acting and direction at a number of summer theaters. But so stark a comment does not tell the Belfry players' story fairly, for the theater is a community enterprise open to all who can qualify, and it has become one of the most flourishing and engrossing efforts of its kind.

Oriental theater. Blue Barron and his orchestra, which purveys "the music of yesterday and today," is in the midst of a week's stage appearance. Starred in the Blue Barron revue is Dean Murphy, the mimic who has won the praise of President Roosevelt. He comes to the Oriental from an engagement in the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel. The unusual instrumentation of Barron's orchestra includes, in addition to brass and saxophones, a five piece rhythm section, with drums, bass, two pianos, and tuba. The last named instrument rarely finds its way into a dance band. Other performers in the current stage bill are Nan Rae and Mrs. Waterfall, Troy and Lynn, Clyde Burke, Jimmy Brown, Charlie Fisher, Billy Cover, and Tiny Wolf.

Chicago theater. Benny Goodman, the local boy who has reached the top of his profession, has his celebrated swing band on the stage this week. In addition to the clarinet playing maestro, the specially featured performers include Peggy Lane and Dick Haymes.

Rialto theater. Darlene, the dancer who already has shown Rialto patrons her "living statue" dance and her "dance of the naughty winds," returns as this week's headliner. The stage show also offers the Martingales, Peggy Greer, and Holst and Milady.

Stratford theater [today only]. The week-end vaudeville bill ending today stars Ralph ["Cookie"] Cook and Floyd Christy in a revue called "Laffs-A-Cookin'." The supporting acts are the Appletons, Lee Royce, Lloyd and Willis, the Hoffman sisters, Mary Beth Sayres, Lester Townes, Bibbs, and Val Setz.

Cafes Making August Effort for Fine Fare

By Will Davidson.

There probably was some reason for including August in the calendar besides honoring a Caesar, but the hay fever victims don't know it, and, after a glance at the present night life situation, the hey-hey fever boys and girls don't either.

The Stevens hotel is in the air corps now, and the shades of Carlos Molina and Griff Williams and Ray Heatherton and Del Courtney and many, many others are trudging up and down the empty Continental room, giving ghostly interviews to the shades of past p. a.'s like Marion Odmark and Tom Montgomery and Harry Miller. The Congress is sporting wings now, too, and similar ghosts give similar sepulchral scoops to the shades of Tony Owen and Renee Howard and Syd Lovitt.

The Rhumba Casino departed this life in the midst of one of the best shows it ever had. Harry's New Yorker will be no more.

• • •

But maybe these somber thoughts are merely the offspring of a strep germ. For, after all, Griff Williams comes back to the Palmer House Sept. 17, with the Hartmans in tow. . . . Lawrence Welk returns to the Trianon on Saturday night to renew his lease there with a double header co-starring Tiny Hill, the present tenant. . . . Adrienne already is singing joyfully in the cool green and white Camellia house of the Drake hotel. . . . The Latin Quarter is doing its two-bits worth to entertain the Randolph Street 400. . . . Charlie Spivak comes into the Panther room of the Hotel Sherman Friday to do his gabrielling where Duke Ellington has been holding forth . . . and there are grand shows on at the Chez, and at the La Salle, where little Milita sings her heart out for you while Salvador strums a sleepy guitar. . . . There's Jimmy Joy at the Bismarck, Carlos Ramirez in the Mayfair room, and the Dorben gals at the Beach walk, with Shep Fields, and Russ Morgan coming in there the 21st. And certainly nobody is complaining about the lack of business at the Palmer House, where Billy de Wolfe is the master of laughs, and Tommy Tucker the maestro of music.

Milita.

Perhaps little August isn't so bad, after all.

Boswelling the Bistros:

Del Courtney has followed Griff Williams into the Baker hotel, Dallas, Tex. Griff has a spot to land in when he comes back here, but what will poor Del do with the Stevens gone? . . . That's a neat knockabout act over at the Blackhawk—Novak and Fay. Dorothy Dale, the attractive dancer, also helps Art Jarrett give the patrons a fine evening. . . . José Manzanares had a birthday party not long ago. The age is secret.

Louie is back from vacation, and now heads the Headliners again in the Eitel restaurant. . . . Burns and Allen will be guests of Benny Fields and Mrs. Fields, the former Blossom Seeley, at the Chez tomorrow night. They are old time two-a-day friends. . . . Tough break—that Pullman porter who wanted to buy a home on the instalment plan, but the government wouldn't let George due it.

Chicago Music Festival in Soldiers' Field Saturday

Expect 85,000 to See Annual Gala Pageant

By Edward Barry.

The Chicago Music festival to be held in Soldiers' field next Saturday evening under the sponsorship of Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., is our old friend the Chicagoland Music Festival under a new name.

The reason for the change was the doubt in the mind of the management as to whether in this war year of 1942 the transportation agencies would be able to handle easily the fairly large civilian movement into Chicago which the festivals of other years have entailed. This year the festival will draw its participants from Chicago itself and from territories within easy distance of the city, and the new name expresses this new conception of the geographical extent of the festival's immediate influence.

Edgar Nelson.

The cutting off of more distant sources of supply does not mean that Soldiers' field will be any less crowded Saturday night. About 10,000 persons are to take part in the pageantry and music which make up the bulk of the show, and it is hoped that the attendance, if weather conditions are favorable, will approach the 85,000 mark.

• • •

Since the various pageants which will turn the field into a riot of color already have been vividly described in other sections of the paper, the following paragraphs will confine themselves largely to the musical aspects of the festival.

The first thing that strikes a person who looks over the program schedule is the sheer scale of the musical undertakings. The marimba orchestra does not consist of a stingy 10 or 12 instruments but of a whopping 163. The fretted instrument group runs to 1,000 pieces. So does the accordion band. The massed choruses will number about 2,000 voices.

Before you smile cynically and remind us that mere size has little to do with musical importance, think what these mammoth groups mean to people who otherwise would get few or no chances to take part in actual public music making. This annual Soldiers' field performance offers a powerful incentive to work and to study, and altho no claim is made that a knowledge of the marimba, for instance, is an open sesame to all the riches of music, the fact remains that such knowledge does indubitably constitute one step in the right direction.

• • •

There also is a great and genuine pleasure in coöperating with others in the production of music—a pleasure which lifts an individual out of himself and has beneficial results which are by no means confined to the musical field. There is perhaps no institution in the world today which offers, on so large a scale, opportunities for this noble kind of pleasure. Remember that the big sing in Soldiers' field is only a climax. Weeks or months of music making, in smaller groups, precede it.

But even from the standpoint of the listener only, there is much to be said for big musical groups. Sometimes the cynics are confounded by the sheer sensuous delight of the music produced by such aggregations. Certainly the novelty of it helps arouse one's sense of wonder, and this in itself is pleasurable.

The community singing, which is an old and well liked feature of the festival, will be the biggest scale feature of all. The entire audience will be invited to sing familiar songs directed by a leader on the field.

• • •

The festival is not all on a gargantuan scale. There will be several solos, both vocal and instrumental, as well as music by moderate sized bands, choruses, and an orchestra.

The finals of the vocal contest—one of the several contests which lead up to the Soldiers' field festival—will be presented as part of Saturday's program. Two men and two women, survivors of the preliminary contests, will compete for the honor of being named best man singer and best woman singer, respectively. No matter who wins, all four singers will have the advantage of performances under the most auspicious circumstances. Not only will they be presented publicly before an audience of many tens of thousands but they also will be heard by a radio audience whose size baffles the imagination. W-G-N and the Mutual network are taking the 8 to 9 hour [which includes the vocal finals]. W-G-N will take the 9 to 10 hour also, but without the network. The festival begins at 7 o'clock and will last to about 10:30.

• • •

Among the many men and women responsible for this gigantic undertaking the following may be mentioned: Philip Maxwell, festival director; Capt. Howard Stube, chairman of instrumental participation; Fred Miller, field supervisor; Henry Weber, general musical director; Edgar Nelson, general choral director, and Mrs. Edmund J. Tyler, chairman of vocal and instrumental contests.

The music festival luncheon will be held in the Palmer House Friday. The program will include patriotic ceremonies, short musical numbers, and brief addresses by the two guests of honor—the soprano, Maria Kurenko, and the pianist and conductor, Rudolph Ganz. The luncheon traditionally serves as prelude to the great Soldiers' field spectacle on Saturday, and it has the warmer, more intimate qualities which the bigger event necessarily lacks. Philip Maxwell will serve as master of ceremonies at both the luncheon and the festival.

The Pro Arte String Quartet to Close Ravinia's 1942 Season

By Cecil Smith.

Two years ago the Ravinia festival embarked upon a venturesome experiment. The Pro Arte String Quartet, one of the most celebrated chamber music ensembles in the world, was invited to come to Ravinia for a week, immediately after the close of the six week series of orchestral concerts, to play a cycle of six programs devoted to the entire list of string quartets by Beethoven.

None of the Ravinia directors felt particularly secure about the project. Chamber music had never flourished in Chicago, and the winter calendar for years past had included so little music of this intimate kind that it was impossible to tell whether Ravinia patrons would bother to attend the Pro Arte concerts. In spite of these natural misgivings, the post-season week turned into a modest but wholly unsensational success. A total of 3,356 patrons came in the course of the week—an average of 559 for each concert.

Because the men in charge of Ravinia's destinies believed in the importance of chamber music, and wanted to contribute to the development of its audience in the Chicago region, the experiment was repeated last summer. With the number of concerts reduced to four, the Budapest String Quartet presented a set of diverse programs, ranging chronologically from Haydn to Ravel.

The greatest optimist in the world could scarcely have dared to predict the public response to Ravinia's second chamber music series. Evidently word had gone around the north shore that a good string quartet was worth hearing, for an average of 1,899 patrons attended each concert. A Sunday afternoon program in which Benny Goodman collaborated with the Budapest players in the Mozart clarinet quintet accounted for more than one-fourth of the total, to be sure, but not enough more to alter the substantial proof of public interest in the whole chamber music project.

• • •

Now, therefore, the post-season week of chamber music seems to have become a fixture at Ravinia, and a very happy fixture it is. The Budapest String Quartet, whose members play well all the time and nothing short of miraculously when they are at their best, will return for four programs on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings and next Sunday afternoon. In the first three of these Leonard Shure, the young pianist who was heard in the Brahms G minor piano quartet in last year's Ravinia chamber music series, will join with the string players in performances, on successive occasions, of the Schumann, Dvorak, and Brahms piano quintets. Next Sunday afternoon Milton Preves, first viola player of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will play the second viola part in the Brahms G major quintet for two violins, two violas, and cello.

Leonard Shure.

While the four programs do not touch upon the field of contemporary music [the most recent work listed being the Debussy quartet, written 49 years ago], the choice of music represents a good cross section of later 18th and 19th century composition. Since no chamber works at all really can be said to be well known in Chicago, there is no such thing as a hackneyed program in this field. Altho Schubert is conspicuous by his absence, such other major chamber music composers as Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, and Schumann are represented.

• • •

The members of the Budapest String Quartet are Josef Roismann, first violin; Alexander Schneider, second violin; Boris Kroyt, viola, and Mischa Schneider, cello. In detail, the four programs will contain the following music:

Tuesday at 8:30.
String Quartet, G major, Köchel No. 387........Mozart
String Quartet, G minor, opus 10........Debussy
Quintet for Piano and Strings, E-flat major, opus 44........Schumann
Leonard Shure, piano.

Thursday at 8:30.
String Quartet, D major, opus 76, No. 5........Haydn
Quintet for Piano and Strings, A major, opus 81........Dvorak
Leonard Shure, piano.
String Quartet, F major, opus 59, No. 1........Beethoven

Saturday at 8:30.
String Quartet, G major, opus 18, No. 2........Beethoven
String Quartet, E-flat major, opus 12........Mendelssohn
Quintet for Piano and Strings, F minor, opus 34........Brahms
Leonard Shure, piano.

Next Sunday at 4.
String Quartet, D major, opus 64, No. 5 ["The Lark"]........Haydn
String Quartet, E minor, opus 116 ["From My Life"]........Smetana
Quintet for Two Violins, Two Violas, and Cello, G major, opus 111..Brahms
Milton Preves, second viola.

The regular six week orchestral season at Ravinia ends this afternoon with the final Chicago Symphony orchestra program conducted by Pierre Monteux. Tonight the guarantors and workers of Ravinia will be entertained at a special program, replete with surprises, to which the orchestra and Budapest String quartet donate their services. The program of today's orchestral concert, beginning at 4 o'clock, follows:

Academic Festival Overture........Brahms
Symphony No. 3, C minor........Saint-Saëns
Alborada del Gracioso........Ravel
Pictures at an Exhibition........Moussorgsky
[Orchestrated by Maurice Ravel]
Fête Polonaise, from "Le Roi Malgré Lui"........Chabrier
[First time in Chicago]

On Saturday, Aug. 22, the Ravinia festival will turn the grounds over to a committee of prominent Russian-Americans, headed by George Voevodsky, for a gala Russian War Relief concert in which Dr. Frederick Stock will conduct the Chicago Symphony orchestra in the first Chicago performance of the much discussed 7th symphony of Dimitri Shostakovich.

Works by American born composers received 121 performances at the hands of the nation's 16 major symphony orchestras during the season 1941-'42, an increase of 29 over the preceding year. This is one of the interesting facts revealed in the National Music council's third annual survey of compositions performed by these 16 orchestras at the regular subscription concerts in their home cities.

The Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra of New York, with 16 performances of works by American born composers and 29 by naturalized or resident composers, led the list. The Chicago Symphony orchestra placed second, with 12 performances in the first category and 18 in the second. Other high ranking orchestras were those of Cincinnati, St. Louis, Cleveland, and Washington. The orchestras of Detroit, Minneapolis, and Kansas City ranked low in the number of American works played.

On a percentage basis [proportion of American works to total performances], the orchestras in the lead were those of Cincinnati, New York, St. Louis, Los Angeles, and Chicago. Considering only the works of native born composers, the percentage rank was Indianapolis, Washington, Pittsburgh, Boston, Cleveland, and St. Louis.

The Illinois WPA Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Guy Woodard, is playing a series of concerts for men in the armed forces at the new Summer Recreation center, Fullerton drive and Lake Michigan, in Lincoln park. Concert hours are noon Sunday, 6 Wednesday and 4 Saturday.

Deferment of Specialists in College Asked

By the Rev. John Evans.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national director of selective service, has asked that local selective service boards provide occupational deferment for students who have completed two years of study in scientific or specialized fields at colleges and universities, and for selected graduate students as well.

The recommendation was designed to maintain a continuous flow of technically and scientifically trained personnel so necessary today. In addition to specifically listing fields in which personnel shortages exist, Gen. Hershey suggested a 60 day deferment period beyond graduation to provide opportunity to engage in activity essential to war or defense production.

• • •

Engineering positions dominate the list of fields recommended for deferment. Aeronautical, automotive, chemical, civil, electrical, heating, ventilating, refrigerating, air conditioning, marine, mechanical, mining, radio, and transportation engineers are included.

Among other positions which have appeared on the deferment list are accountants, chemists, mathematicians, naval architects, personnel administrators, and physicists. Students of agriculture, bacteriology, biology, agricultural engineering, hydrology, pharmacy, and physical education have thus far been exempt.

The University of Michigan may offer a course of training in the art of camouflaging civilian installations of military value. Prof. Harlow O. Whittemore, chairman of the department of landscape architecture, would direct such a course.

By Mae Tinee.

Good morning!

Well, I guess this one'll show 'em! That Lee Bowman has star dust in his hair.

For a long time this presentable chap has been lending sheen and edge to supporting rôles. . . . "Pacific Rendezvous" gives him a major characterization which he handles with ease and skill that should project him into bigger and better impersonations.

• • •

The plot is concerned with the mysteries and importance of codes in warfare and presents Mr. Bowman as a code expert.

Lieut. Bill Gordon had written a book on code deciphering under a pseudonym. . . . It's a work greatly valued and much used by the government—who had no idea that the snappy young naval officer who wants only active fighting and NOT a desk job, is its author. . . .

But fate takes a hand, thru his meeting with Elaine Carter, niece of the assistant secretary of the navy. . . . In her country's interest she turns tattle tale. . . . Bill's immediately put to work in Washington, checking messages that are being sent to Japan from an unknown spot in California. . . . Thru his skill and general all around canniness a spy ring is uncovered, its members brought to justice and a great naval catastrophe averted. . . .

You will have guessed that the lady who so patriotically unveils his identity is often in his arms and in his hair.

• • •

The serious stuff—some of it is most informative—is larded with humor and electrified with suspense.

Mr. Bowman's fine work is bolstered by splendid cast support and apt direction. . . . Jean Rogers is a darling as the niece and Mona Maris a beautiful and very dangerous Nazi agent.

The film is pleasingly brief and to the point.

See you tomorrow.

THE NOVEL OF THE YEAR!

Elizabeth Pickett Chevalier's

Drivin' Woman

A heroine to rival SCARLETT O'HARA—in a tale of passion and violence during the years of America's rebirth

Sold for $105,000 to the movies before publication!

650 Pages! 130,000 Sold 7 Days After Publication

YOURS as a gift—this amazing new book that is being read and talked about from coast to coast! Drivin' Woman starts where Gone With the Wind left off. And when you meet "Merry" Moncure, you'll find a heroine even more exciting than Scarlett O'Hara!

Merry had grown to young womanhood in the old South. But the war had changed everything. She had seen a carpet-bagger burn her Virginia mansion; she had fled from Virginia to Kentucky to escape trial for murder, when she killed to protect her sister's honor. "Drivin' Woman," Kentuckians called her—a woman who gets things done—and gets what she wants. Beautiful, brainy, determined, she was born to make devoted slaves of men—all but one.

She fell in love with Fant Annable, handsome, irresponsible gambler, and did mad things to win his love. Her honeymoon ended in flight from New Orleans; and on her miserable journey back to Kentucky she sold dresses from her trousseau for board and lodgings. She knew the joy of feeling the rich earth of Kentucky again, of planting and harvesting her first tobacco crop to keep a home for her unborn son. But life was an unceasing battle. A price was put on her husband's head and their infrequent meetings held a happy secret. Through the years her children were born, fatherless in the eyes of the world and sneering neighbors. Allilee Drake, the belle of the country, bore her hatred for marrying the man Allilee wanted. Tugger Blake, genius for making money, was so greedy for power that he was willing to make beggars of the farmers who raised the tobacco that was the foundation of his fortune. And Brother Ephraim rode with the Night Riders when they spread terror over the countryside spilling red blood on the soil and making the night sky red from burning barns and houses.

Told against the rich background of the Kentucky country where the embattled farmers fought against the mighty tobacco trust, "Drivin' Woman" is one of the most thrilling and absorbing novels of the year. You may have it FREE if you join the Literary Guild now!

These selections will always be brand-new books, full-sized cloth-bound new works of fiction or non-fiction, by outstanding modern authors. Each month's selection is chosen by our Editorial Staff from the hundreds of manuscripts and advance reading proofs submitted by the publishers long in advance of their publication date. Every selection is printed at the same time as the publishers' edition, which will be on sale simultaneously at retail for not less than $2.50 and often for as much as $4.00 and $5.00.

How You Save Up to 50%

Every month the Guild manufactures for its subscribers so large an edition of the book chosen by the Editorial Staff that great savings in cost can be effected. These savings are passed on to subscribers in the form of lower prices, and in still another way: The Literary Guild gives each subscriber a FREE book as soon as four Guild selections have been purchased at only $2.00 each. This FREE book is always a popular title, selling at retail from $2.50 to $5.00!

Magazine "Wings" Free

As a Guild member you receive FREE each month the famous Guild magazine "Wings," which contains illustrated articles about the current selection and its author, and includes a special contribution by the author.

"Wings" is sent to subscribers one month in advance so that it describes the book selected for the following month. If you feel you do not want to examine the book, merely notify the Guild not to send it when the time comes. On the other hand, if the selection sounds interesting, you may have it sent for your approval.

"Wings" is also an invaluable guide to all important current reading, for each month it reviews about 30 new books, any of which may be purchased through the Guild at the established retail prices.

MOLLIE MEETS TWO STRANGERS

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

(Copyright: 1942: By Elizabeth Jordan.)

Then the driver took the remaining steps to him, and with surprising strength and efficiency got him to Mollie's car.

THE episode occurred so suddenly, and was so incredible in its details, that Mollie Pearce was never quite sure just how it had happened. She knew that she had been alone in her roadster, that she had been driving at a reasonable speed in a heavy rainstorm and along a narrow New England mountain road.

She also knew, and had been annoyed by the fact, that for some moments before the accident another car, a five passenger sedan, was following hers and apparently trying to pass it, tho the road was too narrow and too twisting to do this safely. Mollie was so conscious of its nearness that several times she slowed down, almost rubbing the sides of her roadster against the mountain cliffs on her left to let the driver behind her proceed.

But evidently when the pinch came he realized that he would have to swing dangerously near the outer cliff on their right to get by. He was either afraid to do this or was deliberately following her car. There was nothing else deliberate about his movements. Looking at him thru the small window in the back of her roadster Mollie frowned into his unpleasant face. He got the full benefit of the frown and grinned at her, revealing a row of large teeth in need of cleaning.

Mollie turned hastily and gave her entire attention to her driving. She was soon conscious of two more discoveries—that the man behind her was at last preparing to pass her, on a slightly wider strip of road just ahead, and that he had a companion in the car who seemed to be expostulating with him. The driver was middle aged. The companion was young, at most in his early 30s, with a pale, smooth shaven face and very black curly hair. He was wearing no cap, tho the driver not only wore a cap but had dragged its visor down to the level of his eyebrows.

All this Mollie took in with a swift eye flash. The next instant she swung her little car so close to the mountain at her left that its left door scraped raucously against a jutting boulder. Her jaws set. That would mean some big scratches on polished wood. But it meant much more than that, for now she heard the squeal of her left rear tire. That was all she had time to grasp. Her road companion's heavier car had crashed into something at his right. The air was full of the protests of outraged woodwork, glass, and machinery. Only a tree a few feet from the bluff at the right had saved the driver of the car behind hers from going over the cliff and taking a drop of a thousand feet into the ravine below.

For a few breathless seconds Mollie heard the sound of screeching brakes, cracking wood, and the oaths of the offending driver. She had brought her roadster to a stop at the first alarm. Now she opened its right hand door and without stopping to examine its injuries hurried to the other car, held in its precarious perch by the tree it had crashed into.

Her fellow driver was already out of it. His expression was peculiar. He was interested in neither his car, his passenger, nor the road companion whose tire he had wrecked. There was blood on his face from some injury he had received but this did not seem to interest him either. With features twitching under high nervous tension he stared before and behind him down the road, obviously in sheer terror of pursuers.

"You idiot!" Mollie Pearce cried. "What do you think you're doing? Look after your passenger. He's hurt."

She leaned toward the wrecked car as she spoke and tried to reach down to the arm of the young man, who was slowly extricating himself from among the brakes. He spoke on a groan.

"Keep away. Can't you see we're almost over! And for God's sake don't touch my arm. It's broken. My leg is, too, I think."

Miss Pearce addressed the driver with icy irony.

"If you can give up your study of the landscape for a moment," she said, "we can get your friend out of that car. I suppose you realize that he isn't safe there. The car may go over any minute."

The driver removed his eyes from the road and fixed them on her face. There was cold menace in them now.

"All the more reason why we don't monkey with that car and send it over," he muttered and again his eyes searched the road as far as he could see its length.

"Now listen to me," Mollie Pearce said in a tone that always made the pupils in her classroom listen very attentively. "I don't know what you're afraid of, but no one has passed us for the last hour and the chances are that no one will for hours more. This is a side road and a dangerous one, especially in a deluge of rain. The natives shun it. There are stretches of miles where two cars can't safely pass, as you should have realized. Now get your mind off the road and on your friend here. We've got to get him out."

The driver again revealed his soiled and yellow teeth in what he thought was a smile. He was plainly relieved by her statement that no more travelers were to be expected, but he spoke indifferently.

"He ain't a friend of mine," he said. "He's a hitch-hiker. I picked him up on the road 10 miles back. But I'll put on your spare tire and you can give me a lift to the Junction. How far is that from here?"

"Five miles. But we'll get this man out of that car first, if you please."

There was a snap in the last words that made him stare. This girl was too young and pretty to talk like that. Before he could speak the man in the car brought out a breathless command.

"Keep away, both of you, or you'll send me over. This car's none too well balanced. I'll get out alone. Keep away."

The last words were as peremptory as her own had been. Mollie retreated instinctively. The driver was already backed against the cliff's bank. The passenger spoke to Mollie.

"Listen. I've got to save my breath. I've got my right leg and left arm to fall back on. Stand back against the cliff—and don't move whatever happens."

Driver's Exit Weakens Car's Perilous Perch

The next five minutes seemed to Mollie Pearce the hardest and certainly the longest she had ever known. The passenger was right about the car's balance. It was a flimsy thing, travel worn, mud stained, and five or six years old. The driver's exit from it had been merely the effort of an active and uninjured man who had only to make a long step from his seat thru the door and up three or four feet to the roadway above him. It had been hastily and without much caution, and it must have loosened the car's precarious perch against a tree whose trunk was none too strong at best and was now badly weakened by the recent impact.

The passenger, who had been sitting at the right of the driver before he was thrown forward, was now back in his place on the seat. He edged his way with infinite care and difficulty along the seat, under the wheel, and to the car's open left door. And, by some miracle of patience, caution, strength of will power, he eased himself out of the almost teetering car and reached up toward the roadway. Even the car's late driver left his safe refuge against the cliff's bank and took a step forward as he watched this maneuver.

But he stopped there as the injured man's words came to him.

"Keep back! I—know—just-how-I—can—do-this."

Even in that moment Mollie was glad the driver had made the effort tho he had checked it so soon. He had at least experienced and obeyed one decent impulse. He was not wholly bad. He was now proving that again by the unwinking gaze with which he followed the passenger's slow, infinitely careful movements. He even edged a few inches closer to the car as if to give a hand at the crisis. But the passenger needed no hand till he lay panting on the road. Then the driver took the remaining steps to him and with surprising strength and efficiency got him to Mollie's car and into its front seat. That job finished he produced a battered flask and another grin.

"Swig some of that while I change the tire," he said to his companion as casually as if nothing unusual had occurred; and then added under another humane impulse, "I bet you need it!"

It was very clear that the young man in the seat did need it. His face was livid and wet with sweat. He took a long pull at the flask, handed it back, slumped into the right corner of the seat, shut his eyes, and set his teeth. Mollie turned to the driver.

"Can I help you with that tire?"

Mollie got into the roadster very carefully. Its front seat was wide and she was small and slight. She would sit between the two men and let the older one drive. There would be plenty of room.

"Anything I can do?" she asked the younger man anxiously.

"No, thanks. The—whisky—helps—a lot."

Mollie looked back thru the rear window. She had been conscious of the jacking up of the roadster, of the rattle of tools as the man behind her emptied her tool chest on the road. He was working very fast and was evidently skilful. In an incredibly short time he replaced the tire with the spare that had hung on the back rack, and restored the tool chest to its place under the seat.

In another moment he was in the roadster beside her, his hands, stained with the oil and dirt he had not troubled to wipe off, grasping the wheel. He was an expert driver. Mollie realized that with relief as he maneuvered the car into action.

"Know this road?" he asked her as they raced along at almost twice the speed she would have traveled.

"Every inch of it."

"Good. Where's the nearest house?"

"About a mile further on. I'm not sure it's occupied. Summer residents are going home now, you know."

"It's furnished, ain't it?"

"O, yes, but it may be locked and barred."

"That won't worry me. Slim's got to have a doctor."

"Anxious about me all of a sudden, or want to get rid of me?" the passenger asked with a twisted smile.

"Want to get rid of you is right. The sooner we part the better for both of us and you know it."

Both men had evidently forgotten the older one's claim that the other was merely a hitch-hiker.

The younger man nodded.

"It's not as bad as you think. The leg isn't broken. I'm sure of that now. It's only a bad sprain. The arm's broken, all right. It hurts like the devil. But dump me anywhere. I'll take care of myself!"

"You'll have to, from now on. I'll dump you at this house the dame says is near here."

The "dame" heard the conversation but her thoughts were busy with two discoveries. These two were associates, not strangers. Also, the driver had said "wun't." New Englanders say "wun't." Otherwise his diction was average. His clothes were good, tho a bit flashy. He was on his native heath, but Mollie Pearce, herself a New Englander, had classified him at a glance.

"A nasty customer," she told herself. "I wouldn't like to meet him on this road on a dark night. The other man seems different."

The driver was now giving close attention to his driving, and was increasing his speed. He spoke again without looking at her.

"I'm going to borrow your car."

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I say. I leave you and this fella at the farm and I go on to the Junction. See? I got to catch a train. I leave this car at the Junction."

"I see." She didn't quite see. But the fact that he was catching a train would explain his speed and his nervousness.

"If that farm house isn't open——" she began.

"It'll be open, all right. I'll open it." He stopped and added an obvious second thought: "If you want, I'll send some one back here for you with your car from the Junction. A doctor, too, for Slim here. O. K.?"

"Yes, please. Thank you."

There was nothing to be done but agree. She realized that. The injured man spoke again.

"I'd like to go on to the Junction too, Joe. I can handle myself now."

"You'll go where I say. You'll go to that farm we're heading for."

"But I've got to get off this lady's hands," the younger man protested.

"And I want you off my hands. You'll go where I take you, so shut up."

The young man shut up. He did not speak again even when they reached the small white farmhouse that had been remodeled into a summer house to meet some one's urge for isolation. On the front veranda to which he had led them, with most of the young man's weight on his arm, the driver tried the front door.

"I'll get you two in here. I'll send a doctor and a driver back with your car. That's all I'll do, and that's more than most fellas would do in my place. You can hustle for your lights and fires and grub. They ain't up my alley."

He was trying in turn the keys on a bunch he had drawn from his pocket. One of them worked. The lock clicked and the front door swung open.

"So long," said the man. "I've got to get that train."

He was gone even as he spoke, while Mollie stared incredulously after him.

He plunged forward into the hall even as he spoke. She caught him but went down with him. Her desperate call to the driver brought only the response of a casual wave of the hand as he shot back into the road and disappeared around a nearby curve.

Mollie looked at the young man at her feet. He had, as she mentally put it, passed out. Her momentary panic passed too, as she remembered that at the driver's rate of speed he ought to be at the Junction—only five miles away—in less than 10 minutes, and that at the most the doctor and driver he had promised her should be here in 20 minutes more. Half an hour to wait. That was all. In the meantime she must make her patient as comfortable as she could.

Injured Man Awakens as Mollie Renders Aid

She passed his inert young body and went into the living room at the right of the hall. It was a sizable room, evidently made by combining the original front and back parlors. Like the hall it seemed bare and forbidding, swathed as it was in brown linen dust coverings. But under one of these, on the divan, she found a chintz-covered cushion which would support the young man's head and the linen coverings would supply some warmth. She put two of them over him and raised his head to the level of the pillow. As she adjusted it he opened his eyes, stared blankly for an instant, and spoke.

"Still—the—ministering—angel," he brought out with a bleak smile at her. "What's your name, and where do you live?"

Mollie told him. "But there's mighty little ministering I can do," she added regretfully. "If I could get you into the living room and near the fireplace I could make a fire."

"Don't try it. You couldn't move me. Besides, I'm getting out of here as soon as I can move."

"Nonsense," she said briskly. "You're doing nothing of the kind. You're waiting for the doctor to come and fix you up."

"You're wrong again." He spoke with an effect of weary patience. Then, with a suddenness and strength that surprised her, he sat up.

"I'm going to get on my feet, and then I'm going to beat it. Look here, young lady," he added with a quick change of tone, "hasn't it occurred to you yet that you're in the wrong pew?"

"But the other man said——" she began at last.

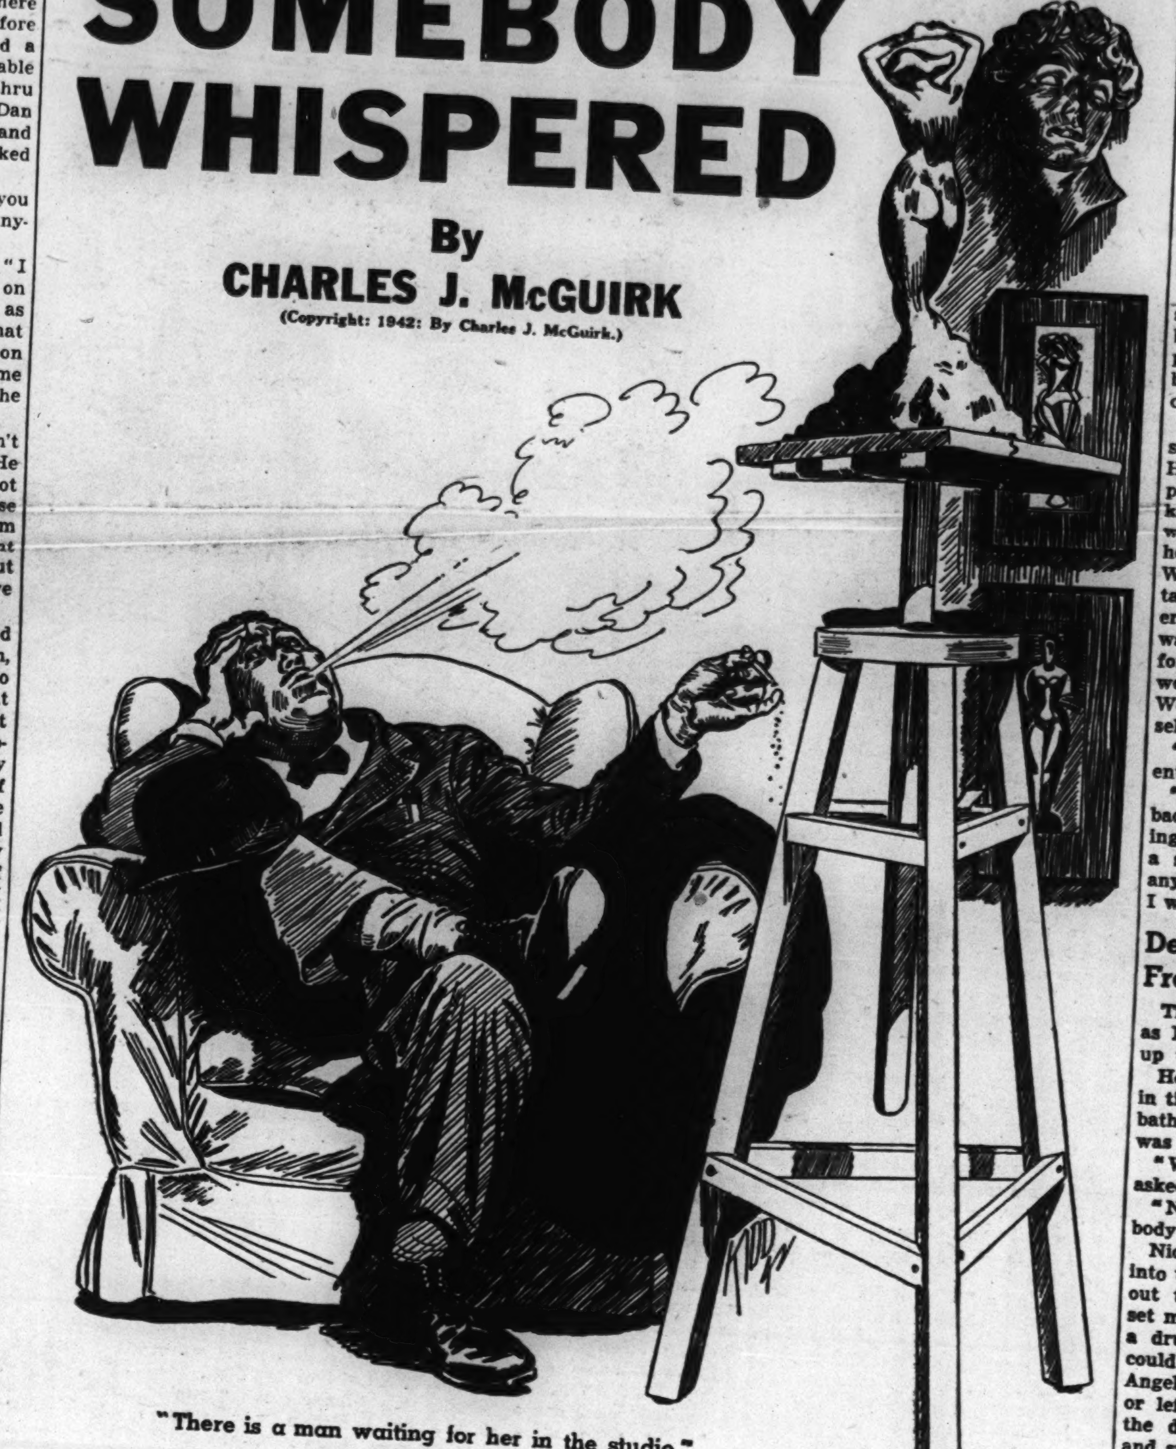
NEXT SUNDAY—"LOVE ME AND LET ME ALONE," BY ALMA AND PAUL ELLERBE

SOMEBODY WHISPERED

By CHARLES J. McGUIRK

(Copyright: 1942: By Charles J. McGuirk.)



"There is a man waiting for her in the studio."

INSTALMENT V.

DAN O'MALLEY was sitting in a booth in the tavern. There was a highball glass before him. Another glass and a pony of whisky stood on the table across from him. As Jim came thru the door and walked toward him, Dan took out a large handkerchief and wiped his moist forehead. He asked three questions in one breath.

"Did Hannigan see you? Did you find the letters? Did you find anything?"

"No," Jim answered all three. "I suppose Hannigan's the policeman on guard. I went out the back door as he came back in thru the front. That made us even because he was on his way out the front when I came into the dining room. I was in the living room when he went out."

Dan stared at him. "That wasn't Hannigan, Jim," he declared. "He wasn't upstairs at all when you got into the apartment. I know because I walked straight down there from the corner and met him at the front entrance. I'd say you were about in the back yard. It couldn't have been Hannigan."

"That's interesting," Jim said thoughtfully. "If it wasn't Hannigan, who was it? It was some one who wanted something very much that was—or is—in the apartment. It could have been Miles' killer. If whoever it was, didn't find what they went after, it's still there. And if it's still there, it's hidden some place where neither they nor I could find it. Or if it was the killer, they might have been after some bit of evidence they left behind them. I wish I'd moved a little faster. I might have seen whoever it was."

"I'm glad you didn't," Dan said fervently, "or you might be picking lead out of your belly. We both of us did all right this morning. We found out stuff by not finding out anything. I was just thinking, Jim. The Carnation hotel's only a couple of blocks from here. We might go over and talk to the Duke."

"All right," Jim agreed, "but there's another thing. How did those two women Dick met in the apartment last night get to it and from it? It was a wild night. They couldn't have walked. They'd have been blown into the lake."

"Yeh," Dan drawled. "Private cars or taxis with the odds on taxis. Anybody dropping in to murder a guy wouldn't drive their own car. Somebody might recognize it. We'll check the taxis that were cruising this neighborhood from midnight on. Sure, the police are doing it already. But an independent night hawk hackie mighn't rush into headquarters to tell how maybe he'd drove a murderer to or from the scene of the crime. I'll put some of my men on it."

"Mind if I let Nick Serento work on it?" Jim asked. "Nick has a lot of friends among taxi men and perhaps a driver would talk to him or me before they would even to a private detective."

"Sure. Let Nick go ahead."

Callers Find Duke Missing from Hotel

It was 20 minutes to noon when they walked into the small deserted lobby of the Carnation hotel. The clerk, a thin, dour man, eyed them with hostile suspicion.

"What's Duke Herndon's room number, Buddy?" Dan asked heartily. "He's expecting us."

"I'll ring his room," the clerk decided. "Who'll I say's calling?"

"Hallard," Jim said, "Jim Hallard."

"He ain't in, Mr. Hallard," the clerk informed him and there was malice in his small smile. "He got up and beat it right after you called him this morning."

"Get in," Dan invited, "and I'll drop you at your apartment on my way back to the office."

Jim stepped past him into the taxi and sat down while Dan gave the driver his address. Dan got in and closed the door.

"Well," Jim said, "it's still wide open after a hard morning's work. Anybody could have done it."

"No," Dan corrected him. "Only the person who did it could have done it and we'll find out who it was by eliminating everybody else. Right now, the police suspect everybody and they'll go on suspecting everybody that any clews lead them to. And that reminds me. How long do you think it'll take Ed Mercer to figure out that that diamond pin you found belongs to Miss Marshall?"

The question jolted Jim. He thought it would take a long time. He said so. But Dan smiled.

"Not when he starts adding up," he pointed out. "If he don't know, he will soon know she broke her engagement with you to marry Dick Barcland. Then you admitted you were in Barcland's apartment looking for letters you were willing to strangle him to get. Knowing Barcland, he'll figure blackmail right away. And how could Barcland be blackmailing you? By holding the letters you were looking for over Miss Marshall's head. Then, he saw you pick up that diamond pin and try to hide it. He even accused you of being sent there to get it by the woman who lost it. And he said she might have shot Barcland. Remember? Why, it's a cinch that he'll figure up to Miss Marshall. And when he does, he'll send for her."

"He won't find her," Jim told him grimly. "Ann is due at my apartment at noon. I'm seeing that she's under cover until we find Miles' killer and get those letters back."

"I was afraid of that," Dan sighed. "It looks like she's running out on the police, and running out don't look so good. It might get Ed thinking she was guilty."

"Of what? And why?" Jim demanded. "Why shouldn't she leave her studio, or Chicago or the United States, for that matter, if she wants to? Capt. Mercer can think what he likes. He can't make any charges. You can't arrest people on a hunch. If she stays, she'll have to answer questions that will expose Margaret. So she's going into hiding until the killer is found."

"It's your funeral," Dan said again as the cab swung to the curb in front of the Angel Arms, "And there's your undertaker," he grinned and nodded.

Jim followed the direction of his glance. The heavy set man with the mustache was looking in the window of a store across the street.

"I knew he'd be here waiting," Dan chuckled. "He's learning that much, anyhow. When you lose your fox, go back to his hole and wait."

Jim Tells Nick of Incriminating Papers

But Jim wasn't amused as he got out of the cab and strode toward the entrance. There was too much on his mind.

The door of Jim Hallard's apartment swung silently open as he reached it and he walked thru the hall into the living room, noting the two morning papers on the refectory table. They were neat and creased but Jim knew they had been read. He heard the door click shut behind him and then the turn of the bolt. Nick Serento appeared in his white serving coat and took Jim's coat and hat.

"There's a tail on you," he said.

"I know," Jim acknowledged. "Police."

"The Barcland job?"

"Yes," Jim admitted. "Come with me." He walked toward the bedroom, taking from his pocket the papers Paul Brand had given him. In the bedroom, he held them up for Nick's inspection. "Nick," he told him, "these papers are too hot to handle. They're accusations of murder on four people Miles Barcland left behind him. And none of the four could beat them, if the police ever got hold of them. I'm mailing four letters and an affidavit to my postoffice box. But I've got to hold this black book so I can reach it any minute. It's a record of Tony Monoco's killings that he kept himself in his own handwriting."

"That dumb punk," Nick said contemptuously.

"You're the best hiding place I can think of," Jim grinned, "unless you'd rather not take the chance."

"Quit stallin'," Nick growled, watching him.

"If Monoco ever finds out we've got this book," Jim warned, "he'll come after it with bombs and machine guns."

"Quit stallin'," Nick repeated. His black eyes were glowing.

He sat down at his desk as Nick vanished and wrote, "John Mahon, Postoffice Box 1440, Chicago, Ill.," on a heavy manila envelope. He put Bullock's affidavit and the letters of Duke Herndon and "Elfreda" into it, sealed it and stamped it with 12 three cent stamps. He looked up to see Nick standing stark naked waiting with the band-aids in his hand.

"Lie down," he said and broke out six band-aids. He carefully laid the black book along Nick's thigh and plastered it carefully there with the band-aids. When Nick stood up, he could hardly discern the book.

"All right," Jim said. "And there's something else you can do for me. Have you read the story in the papers?" Nick nodded. "Then you know that Dick Barcland met two women in his father's apartment but he can't remember who they were. We think they came there or left in taxicabs. See if you can find the drivers who drove them. Offer $50 reward to anybody who brings the information to you or me. Tell them we're not working with the police. We want that information for ourselves."

"O. K.," Nick said. He was almost enthusiastic.

"Now," Jim finished, "Check up in back and see if they have this building boxed. I'm getting a shave and a shower. I expect Miss Marshall any minute. Make her comfortable. I won't be over 20 minutes."

Detective on Guard in Front of Apartment

There was no one in sight as far as Nick could see and he could see up the alley as far as State street.

He went back into Jim's bedroom in time to see him walking from the bathroom. He had shaved. His hair was combed.

"Want your coffee in here?" Nick asked.

"No. In the living room. Anybody out back?"

Nick shook his head and went out into the living room. He looked again out the front window. The heavy set man was studying the display in a drug store window. Thru it he could see reflected the front of the Angel Arms and any one who entered or left it. Nick sneered again and the doorbell rang. He went to it and swung it open.

"Good morning, Nick," she said as she stepped past him. "Is Mr. Hallard here?"

"He's expecting you," Nick told her. "I'll tell him. Will you have a cup of coffee with him?"

"Yes," she accepted, "I'd like that."

Jim was coming into the living room as Nick swung open the kitchen door.

"Hello," he greeted softly.

"Jim," she whispered and her hand trembled.

"I'm not scared," she told him. "Why didn't you tell me it was you who found Miles? I didn't know it until I saw the papers."

Nick came in with the coffee urn, the cups and saucers, and the other appurtenances on the tray. Ann mechanically slipped out of her coat and poured the coffee. As they drank, he told her everything that had happened while Nick stood in the background, frankly listening. As Jim finished, he moved again to the front windows and looked down.

"Is he still there?" Jim asked.

"Yeh," Nick answered and kept staring down.

"Who is still there?" Ann asked.

"A detective," Jim told her. "They've let me loose on a long rope."

"I see," Ann said thoughtfully. "And you might lead them to me. If you don't, they'll add the letters you were looking for and the brooch and our broken engagement and the answer will be on me again. And I can't stand questioning."

"That's the way it is," Jim admitted. "You've got to stay out of this until the killer is found. Is there anybody you could visit for a while?"

"Not if the police announce they are looking for me," Ann said.

"We'll have a place," Jim assured her, "by the time they get around to you—if they do. It won't be for a day or two."

"It might be sooner," Nick said, staring into the street below. "A dick is coming in here."

"I mustn't be found here," Ann said and there was excitement but no panic in her voice. "You've got to hide me, Jim."

Jim picked up her coat and took her arm and led her to the bedroom.

"He won't be long," he told her. "I'll leave the door open so you can hear."

What Has Gone Before

Miles Barcland, Chicago financier, who has risen to power and riches thru blackmail, extortion, and bribery, receives a whispered death threat over the telephone in his hideout. Unable to recognize the voice or the sex of the whisperer, he searches thru documents in a secret compartment of his bedroom, hoping to get some clew. He chooses the four most incriminating—a death-threatening letter to him by Duke Herndon, bootlegger; a death-threatening letter and two love letters signed "Elfreda"; a record of murders ordered by Tony Monoco, racketeer, and an affidavit swearing that Drake Royal, gambler, killed a certain man. Miles turns over this evidence to Paul Brand, his lifelong friend. That night he attends the opening of a night club run by Monoco, where Lucille Day, Monoco's mistress, is the featured singer. Other guests at the opening include Miles' son Richard, Brand, Jim Hallard, oil executive and silent partner of Detective Dan O'Malley; Ann Marshall, Hallard's fiancee; Margaret and Herbert Severn, Ann's sister and brother-in-law; Duke Herndon, and Drake Royal. Miles is blackmailing Ann into breaking her engagement to Jim and marrying Richard by threatening to show Herbert letters Margaret wrote a suitor. With Miles looking on, Ann gives Jim back his ring. Lights suddenly go out in the night club and some one shoots at Miles but misses. Glaccus, an inventor, admits the shooting. Shortly after 3 o'clock the next morning Jim is awakened by what he thinks is his telephone ringing, but when he answers it the line is clear. He decides to go to Miles' hideout and demand Margaret's letters. When he reaches there he finds Richard drunk in the living room and Miles murdered in the bedroom. As he is picking up a brooch he thinks is Ann's, police step out of hiding and demand it. Some one had called police headquarters shortly after 3 a. m. and whispered the report of Miles' murder. Richard remembers having seen two different women come and go from his father's apartment that night, and later having been struck by some one, but he was too drunk to remember the women or his assailant. Brand gets O'Malley to work on the case and turns over the four documents Miles gave him the day before to Jim, who hopes to trade them to the murderer for Margaret's letters, in event the murderer stole the letters from Miles. Jim telephones Monoco, Herndon, and Royal, telling each about his having the documents, then goes to Miles' apartment and searches in vain for the secret compartment. The janitor of the apartment house where Miles had his hideout seems to recognize a picture of Ann when Jim shows it to him, but refuses to talk, saying he received a whispered threat over the telephone.

He walked back and sat down on the couch as the doorbell rang.

Nick came out of the kitchen and went to the door, slipped the bolt and opened it.

"Sergt. Bradley to see Mr. Hallard," the sergeant announced himself.

"Wait a minute," Nick told him, "I'll see if he's in."

He shut the door and turned and stood with his back to it, facing Jim. Jim signaled for him to open it, and Nick's eyes swept over the room to see that there wasn't anything visible that a visiting police sergeant should not see. Then he turned and opened the door.

"Come in," he said with a complete lack of fervor.

"Mr. Hallard," Sergt. Bradley said, "Capt. Mercer asked me to drop in and see if you'd mind riding down to the bureau with me," he apologetically explained.

"Is this an arrest?" Jim bluntly demanded.

"O, no!" The Sergeant was horrified. "The autopsy and the ballistic reports are due in and the Captain thought you might like to get them first hand——"

"And answer some questions," Jim completed. "And if I don't care to come along?"

"Why, that's all right," Sergt. Bradley assured him heartily, "only Dan O'Malley sort of promised you'd co-operate." He smiled apologetically at Jim.

Hallard Promises Ann He Will Be Careful

Jim grinned. "All right, Sergeant," he said. "If you'll excuse me a minute, I'll be right with you." He rose and walked into the bedroom.

In the bedroom, Jim stood holding Ann's arms as he spoke rapidly.

"Wait for 15 or 20 minutes," he said, "and then have Nick drive you home. Wait there until I call you. It will be some time this afternoon and I'll have a place for you to go to. Tell Nick I'll call him as soon as I'm finished at the homicide bureau."

Her arms moved under his hands and crept around his shoulders and she lifted her mouth against his.

"You'll be careful, won't you," she whispered. "Promise."

"I promise," he said, and kissed her again.

He went out into the living room.

"All right, Sergeant," Jim said as Nick held his coat for him and handed him the heavy envelope containing the letters and affidavit.

The door shut firmly behind him. Jim dropped the envelope into the mail chute at the elevator.

As they stepped into the Sergeant's car—his own and not a police car—Jim, watching the heavy set man, saw him staring at them, his mouth slightly open. As the car pulled away from the curb, he turned and strode purposefully into the drug store.

Sergt. Bradley disappeared thru the door of Capt. Mercer's office in the homicide bureau, but the door had scarcely closed behind him when he opened it again.

"O. K., Mr. Hallard," he said. "Will you step in?"

Capt. Mercer sat at his desk. He was looking past his telephone at the gun which had been found near Miles Barcland's body in the bedroom of his secret apartment that morning. Flanking him on either side were Sergt. Bradley, who had taken off his coat and slipped into a chair, and Dan O'Malley.

Capt. Mercer looked up at Jim and said heartily:

"Hello, Mr. Hallard. Sit down. I got a few routine questions to ask—when I get around to them." He picked up the telephone. "Did Hadley show up with Miss Marshall yet?" he asked. The answer evidently did not please him. "Sure he ought to be back," he growled. "I sent him out there more than an hour ago. Let me know as soon as they get here." He replaced the telephone and looked innocently at Jim.

But if he expected to see any signs of alarm, he was disappointed. Jim felt as tho some one had suddenly jolted him on the jaw. But he sat down carefully as the stenographer came in, took his place at his desk and threw open his pad.

"You needn't take this, Durkin," the Captain told the stenographer. "Wait till I start asking questions." He leaned over and picked up the gun and held it on its side in his hand. "The ballistics report on this gun," he continued, "ain't making this case any easier. It's Barcland's, all right. He took it out on a permit issued the first time in 1929 and renewed five times since. He claimed he needed a gun for protection because he was in the habit of handling large sums of money.

"This gun," the Captain went on, turning the revolver over in his hand, "shoots a .38 bullet." He broke it open with a movement of his thumb and flip of his wrist. It was empty. "When we found it in the bedroom last night, there were six shells in it. Two had been fired.

"But the thing is," the Captain said, "them shells weren't fired last night or even last week. This gun hasn't been shot off for quite a while." He put the barrel to his nose and smelled the muzzle. "It don't smell hardly at all," he announced, "and when it was shot off, it shot those two bullets because," he lifted the gun above his head and gazed upward thru the barrel, "the barrel is fouled but not bad. It's got just about the residue that shooting two bullets thru it would leave. Mr. Hallard, did he keep this gun up there in the apartment all the time?"

"I don't know," Jim answered. "I had never been in that apartment before."

"That's right," Mercer said carelessly and laid the gun down on the table. "You're the man that came after some letters Barcland had." His carelessness vanished and his eyes became piercing. "Who did you say wrote them letters?"

"I didn't say," Jim told him.

"You can say now," the Captain said significantly. "They were hot enough so you'd have killed Barcland to get them. Maybe the writer had the same idea. If they did, then we don't have to look any farther. If they didn't they must have an alibi. Our questioning them won't hurt anybody and it'll clear away some dead wood. Who wrote them?"

Jim grinned.

"You won't answer?"

"That's right," Jim nodded and sat there watching him.

"I didn't think you would," the Captain admitted gloomily. "You ain't the kind that breaks down easy."

He turned hopefully in his chair as the door opened. A policeman came in with a sheaf of papers and two small receptacles.

"The ballistic expert's report on the bullets taken from the body of Miles Barcland," he announced formally, "and his report on the bullets dug out of the woodwork of the Krazy Kat night club."

"These reports say the bullets that killed Barcland came out of a .32 caliber gun," he reported. He leaned over the receptacle containing the two bullets. "That's these two. These three are the bullets we dug out of the Krazy Kat wall after somebody shot them at Barcland there. Say! That's funny. The whole five were fired out of the same gun. Whoever killed Barcland was so anxious to get him that they went right to his hideaway apartment after missing him the first time. And it wasn't Claude Glaccus, the fellow who claimed he did it. He was in jail when Barcland was murdered!

"Now," he spoke directly to Jim, "all we got to do is find all the people that were at the Krazy Kat when Barcland was shot at and that also were at his apartment later that night. One of them will turn out to be the killer. You can help us because you were in both places. Who was at your table in the Krazy Kat?"

Captain Questions Jim About Miss Marshall

Jim's eyes became opaque but he answered readily.

"Miss Ann Marshall came with me," he said. "Richard Barcland stopped and had a drink. So did Mr. O'Malley."

"That," Capt. Mercer opined with theatrical thoughtfulness "is what you might call a coincidence. Three of the people that were at your table turned up at Barcland's apartment before, during or after he was killed. Where was Miss Marshall when Barcland was shot?"

"What time was that?"

"Around midnight."

"Did you leave right away?"

"No. We talked 15 or 20 minutes."

"What about?"

Jim grinned at him.

"All right," he grated. "You asked for it and I'm giving it to you. Cold turkey. She told you about the letters and sent you after them because they were the reason she'd broken her engagement to you, so she could marry young Barcland. Barcland was clubbing her with them. We know she broke her engagement with you in the Krazy Kat because people saw her hand you back your ring.

"After you left, she decided to go after those letters herself. So she went. She was one of the two women young Barcland claims he met in the apartment. Maybe she was the first one. Maybe she was the second. Maybe she was the one that pistol whipped him across the face when his father was shot. Now, did she tell you what she wrote in them letters and who she wrote them to?"

"She didn't write the letters I was after."

"Who owns that brooch you picked up in the apartment?"

"I don't know."

"You're no bargain," the Captain told him wearily. "I turned you loose this morning because Dan O'Malley, here, said you might be able to help us find the killer. So I let you go, free as air."

"With a detective following me," Jim reminded him. "I've got an interest in whoever killed Barcland. They either have the letters I want or they know where they are. But I can't do much with a policeman following me. Why don't you call off your dogs? Maybe I could help."

"You could help by telling me what I want to know about Miss Marshall and those letters." As Jim looked impatiently away, "All right," the Captain promised. "Whoever wrote those letters is going to be questioned. I don't say they will be a suspect. But we've got to know who they are. That's all. Don't leave town. Dan O'Malley is still responsible for you." The telephone rang and he picked it up. "Yes?—They turned him loose, eh. That's all right. I talked to him this morning. I can always get him when I want him. But put a man on him and keep him there. Barcland knows too much to be safe." He replaced the instrument. "Your friend Brand," he told Jim, "has just sprung young Barcland. I'll give you a break, Mr. Hallard. I'm calling off my dogs, as you say. Nobody will be trailing you."

Dan O'Malley got out of his chair as Jim walked toward the door. He caught up with him as it closed and they walked out of the building together.

"I told you Ed was a good copper," Dan said. "He figured out Miss Marshall from what Dick Barcland told him. They took Dick out just before you came in. Did you see her this noon?"

"Yes," Jim said bitterly, "and I told her to go home and get some things ready. I even sent Nick with her. They must have ridden right into the trap."

"Maybe she didn't go right home," Dan suggested.

"I thought of that, too," Jim told him. "There isn't much chance that she didn't but maybe I can stop her." He went into a drug store and bought a couple of slugs and called Ann's studio from a booth.

Helga answered. "This is Mr. Hallard, Helga," Jim said. "May I speak to Miss Marshall."

"Allo, Miss Winfield," was Helga's surprising greeting. "Miss Marshall she is not here. There is a man waiting for her in the studio. She say to tell you she cannot have the drawings for two, three days."

The click of the telephone as she hung up sent a wave of relief up Jim's spine. Helga was a smart girl. It looked as tho Ann had been warned. The man who was waiting there, he knew, was the detective, Hadley, whom Capt. Mercer had sent to pick up Ann.

"I know what the other man said," her companion interrupted. "He dumped me here and beat it. All right. He's at the Junction by this time and probably on his train. I don't believe he had time to get a doctor and he wouldn't have done it, anyhow. He left your bus at the station. Now I'm going to get to that station for the next train, or know the reason why. If by any miracle I meet any one I'll make him take me to the Junction first and then come back here along the road and look for you."

"You can't possibly walk——"

"I can walk, all right. Watch me."

Before she could protest he had got to his feet by the simple plan of rolling over, rising to one knee, and lifting himself to his feet with the help of his left arm and the balustrade of the staircase. For a moment he stood there, swaying.

"You can't——" Mollie began.

"Lady, shut up!" It was plain that the man was at the end of his patience. He checked his anger and spoke quietly.

"I've thought of your side of it. You know this road. You said so. You're little but you're tough. Get out now and hustle to the nearest house or gas station. There ought to be one within another mile or two. There you can get a car or telephone for one. On your way. If you can keep your mouth shut about me and Joe it will be wiser. Remember that."

"If you're bound to go," Mollie Pearce said steadily, "I'll help you."

"You'll do nothing of the sort." His voice broke with pain and impatience. "For the love of Mike, young lady, get onto the fact that you're a nuisance to me. I've got out of scrapes before. I'll get out of this one if you'll let me manage myself. Beat it! If you don't you'll be sorry."

He was all thug now and she knew it.

"All right. You don't leave me much choice!"

"Here, wait a minute." He caught her in his arms, held her close, and kissed her roughly.

"If you don't want a lot more of that," he said, holding her away from him and looking straight into her eyes, "get out of here!"

"You beast! You unspeakable beast!"

"That's the stuff. Now you know what you're up against. Get out!"

He released her, limped to the front door, threw it wide, and motioned her out into the storm with the left hand that had opened it. Mollie stumbled down the front steps, half blind with fury. As she ran along the path to the little front gate she heard him slam and bolt the door. This, she knew, was merely a final gesture. He wouldn't stay there long. In a few minutes he, too, would be "on his way."

The next morning Mollie Pearce opened the Boston newspaper without much interest. She should have been rested and alert. She had easily reached the familiar Trail garage the night before, had telephoned for a car and a driver in her home town 15 miles away, had reached home very wet and still very angry but safe, had vigorously cleaned her mouth, face, and neck with antiseptic soap, and had gone to bed with the briefest possible explanation to the members of her family. She had been in a slight collision, she told them, and had left her car in a garage for slight repairs. In the morning she would go back and retrieve it.

The tale was so bald and was told with such apparent indifference that her family was not much interested. Her brother offered to lend her his flivver and even to drive her over to the garage. She accepted the car but refused the companionship. She had some inquiries to make before she visited the Junction. Jimmy Haywood, the son of the Trail garage owner, would be glad to drive her brother's car back home. She had, she explained, some errands to do in her own car.

But she hadn't. All the information she wanted was supplied by Jimmy, who was plainly bursting with importance. His story began to pour from him even before she had got out of her brother's car.

"Say, Miss Pearce," he began, "guess what happened to me 'bout an hour after you lef' this place last night. I drove a burglar over to the Junction!"

"Jimmy, what do you mean?"

"Jest what I say. He come in here limpin', 'bout an hour after you left, an' he ast could I git him over to the Junction. I could. Dad had just come in to the garage an' the old flivver was outside waitin' fer me to go home to supper in it, so I drove the young fella to the Junction and he musta made the 7:30. I didn't wait, of couse. He didn't say nothin' when we wus drivin' over. He didn't even ast me the fare. But he give me $5 when I left him an' he tol' me to keep the change. I never got a break like that before!"

"But what makes you think he was——"

Mollie didn't have to ask the question. The lad couldn't stop now till he had finished.

"Somepin' was the matter with his arm," he went on. "He didn't say what it was but he looked pretty white. I wouldn't of thought of him again, tho, except for this in the Gazette this morning. See! They even put my pitcher in the paper! It's jest a snapshot of me when I played in our baseball team last year. Dad give it to them last night without tellin' me. It ain't very good. I guess nobody'd know who it was if it hadn't my name down under it," he added wistfully. "Would you know it was me, Miss Pearce?"

Mollie didn't hear the question. She had taken the newspaper the boy handed her, and was reading the account of last night's adventure. It was quite a lurid account for the staid Gazette to publish, but it ended tamely enough.

The slight collision on the Trail last night had been between a car owned by Miss Mollie Pearce and one driven by two men, now suspected of being criminals for whom the New York authorities were anxiously looking, after a holdup in a Fifth avenue jewelry shop the morning before. Their descriptions, given by the Junction's crew, and the descriptions sent out of two men, who were supposed to be in the Trail's neighborhood. These men had evidently had a collision there. Their automobile was found caught in a wrecked tree a mile or so from the Haywood garage.

The older crook had evidently helped himself to Miss Pearce's car, which was still navigable. It's ownership was traced by her license. He had reached the Junction, and had got safely away on the 5:02 for Boston, deserting the Pearce car and his injured companion. Also, it was clear that he had left the train before reaching Boston.

It had been impossible to reach Miss Pearce for her description of the episode, the article added. The younger man, known in the underworld as "Slim" McDonald, was remembered and described by the train crew of the 7:30. He, too, had disappeared before reaching Boston, but no one had noticed his departure from the train. Neither man had aroused suspicion of anything unusual among train or Junction employés, but all remembered that the younger man limped. Now both criminals had disappeared into thin air, which impressed the Gazette reporter as a "serious reflection on our police." He wrote a final paragraph about what might have happened if the police had been on their jobs.

Mollie handed back the newspaper to young Haywood, whose temporary presence in the public limelight had evidently dazed him. The boy drew a long breath and told his story all over. It was his hour of fame.

Mollie was very thoughtful as she drove on to the Junction with Jimmy to reclaim her own car, and listen to the gossip of the employés there. No one had noticed anything special about the older man. All had observed that when the younger man had shown up he limped and carried his right arm stiffly across his chest.

Note Is Reminder of Mollie's Accident

Then and later Mollie Pearce added few details to the accounts of the episode. She had been in the slight collision, yes, but both men had almost immediately left the scene of the accident. She recalled, however, then and many times later, young Haywood's last lament as she parted from him at the Junction.

"Gee, the things that fella could of told me if only I'd known who he was!"

She had another reminder of her encounter the next morning. It came in the form of a note, written on cheap paper, but in a clear hand, and postmarked Boston. It read:

"I had to make you mad for your own sake. It was the only way I could get rid of you, for you're a born ministering angel. Sorry I had to offend you. Thanks for your help. No more from me, ever."

Mollie read the note twice, then slowly tore it up and burned the pieces. But the note's prediction was only partly correct. Two days later there was another story in the morning Gazette, which she read at the breakfast table and carried away to her own room after the meal.

"Slim" McDonald, the report told the world, had been killed the night before in a pistol duel between him and the police, in a Boston rooming house. The police, the reporter wrote ironically, had taken no chances. Four of them, all armed, to whom his hiding place had been betrayed by some stool pigeon, had mounted to "Slim's" top floor room, and had exchanged pistol shots with him there until he and two of the officers fell. The officers would recover. "Slim" would not. He had died in an ambulance on his way to the hospital, with three bullets in his chest and one in his head.

"Slim" was handicapped, the report added, by the fact that, tho he was one of the crack shots in the underworld, his right arm had been broken, evidently in his automobile accident, and was strapped to his chest. He had done his shooting with his left hand; and in winging two men in that condition, the reporter thought, had lived up to his reputation as a killer. Nothing, the report added, had yet been seen of "Slim's" companion, who had evidently made a clean getaway.

Mollie picked up her desk scissors, cut out the report, and slowly put it away in one of the desk drawers. She was feeling very queer—dazed and even a bit dizzy. No one else, she decided, would ever hear from her any more details of her experience with "Slim" McDonald. She didn't want to talk about it. But once in her life, at least, and even in that moment she thrilled over it, she had really had an adventure!

College Shops Offer Latest in Campus Wardrobes

Counselors on Hand to Help Select Them

By Rea Seeger.

College wit and humor, along with a certain new aspect, reflecting the wartime obligations, pervades the college shop haunts of the prospective students and their cashtoting parents. For in these strongholds of fashions all round the town are the clever promotional ideas that add the spice.

For instance: one shop rallies to the theme of big top fun, circus lingo for the ads, circus colors and backgrounds for the showings of exciting and important new clothes. Another sequestered shop within a large store features the miniature swank of a college quad, complete with apple tree and red brick sorority houses, and so on. All the best fun of August are the newly opened college shops, ready for the first rush.

• • •

In these shops, as in former years, are the staffs of expert counselors, girls with actual experience and earned knowledge from virtually every important campus thruout the country. College fashions have been collected and passed by the board of censorship of these counselors, so the freshmen will be assured that every single piece of merchandise on display is okay. This means everything from lingerie to accessories. Also the new colors, contrasts, new fabrics, and accenting accessories.

Sloppy dressing is definitely frowned upon, even banned, by the counselor staffs this year. Maybe it's open rebellion on the part of the co-eds after too many years of casual, sloppy, and too big clothes. Maybe it's the competition from the uniformed-masculine critics.

Sweaters will not be worn three sizes too large, or too small. Skirts will swing with typical American swagger, and are made of fabrics that need a good pressing as well as the ability to keep that press. Jackets are tailored and smoothly fitted to the figurelines, especially those jackets forming the better and upper half of a suit. Loose, swagger type jackets fit snugly around the shoulder lines and, while casually loose, still achieve a neat and youthful, smart silhouette.

Good looking and infinitely flattering onepiece daytime dresses are star attractions. More and more of these day after day, uniform models are superseding the popularity of the dated sweater and skirt combine. You'll be pretty these next few years as you've never been before, pretty without any frou frou, pretty in an individualistic manner, because of the soft, dressmaker accents to these soft daytime dresses of jewel colored woolens, jerseys, and soft crêpes, together with velveteens and the new rage of the season, wide wale cotton corduroy.

• • •

A well selected college wardrobe takes time and thought, and not as much money as formerly. With the counselors to guide you away from tempting, but certainly not-quite-the-thing finds, your first impression on the campus will be a sensational success. Add the right accessories, and your future is assured. Save some of your allowance for party or dance dresses when you come home at Christmas, also a few of your extra pennies for the amusing whims and fancies that materialize only after a few weeks in school.

Sketched, seven brand new fashions featured in one of the most exciting of college showings, now available in a smart Chicago shop. Other finds, just as colorful, just as appealing, are in the same collection, and still other fascinating fashion shows for the college girls are featured in other shops and stores. Sunday, August 9.

An excellent day here for mending or improving social and family relations, also for cultivating inner talents and for planning the future. Week ahead is a very personal one with most of us; opportunity to make most of our best qualities.

Don't Neglect Either.

The successful man and woman are those who are continually improving their knowledge of both themselves and the world around them. Those who study only themselves fail because they do not understand their environment; those who study only the environment factors of life fail because they do not understand mankind. These two very large subjects must be taken together for proper growth.

There is a potent chemical rust remover available which will eliminate rust spots from house metals of all types, hardware, fixtures, cleaners, washers, etc., and help to keep these irreplaceable metals from deterioration and corrosion. . . . It is noninflammable and harmless to the hands and spreads on easily over a rusted area. . . . Then after it has been wiped off the cleaned area can be given a coat of wax in paste form for further protection. . . . This material which comes in different package sizes is not expensive as it costs about 45 cents for half a pint. . . . It also can be used as a primer over rusty surfaces before painting. . . . The manufacturers say this compound also can be used to clean vitreous enamel which has turned a brownish shade from rust. . . . It likewise will remove rust stains from chromium plating and corrosion and verdigris from brass, bronze, and copper, and loosen tightly rusted bolts, nuts, and springs.

Those Colonial Williamsburg colors which possess peculiar overtones which recapture the spirit and beauty of old Williamsburg are still available in a line which offers 14 of these colors. . . . Originally 16 colors were obtainable, but because of government needs the White House green and Governor's House yellow have been discontinued. . . . All the other colors are offered for selection, in case you are doing over some room where new decoration and preservation is needed, and where you can employ to advantage those traditional and exquisite colors of our Colonial days.

Glamor Type Debutante Is Soon to Pass

By Doris Blake.

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"Last summer I would have gone straight up to Maine to sail and play tennis, after graduation from school in June. This summer, I'm taking a course in stenography and getting ready to go to Barnard in the fall. One of my roommates has started on a Nurses' Aide course. The other is going to study chemistry at Massachusetts Tech. We are all determined to be trained in some useful and constructive field."

The foregoing comes from the lips of socially prominent Miss Lucy Aldrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Aldrich, who at the time of the above declaration a few weeks ago was taking in a forum in which youth was permitted the floor to expose its intention, plans, thoughts, and attitude toward clothes, appearance, and the new way of life on which so much depends.

Miss Aldrich pleaded for the interment of the word "debutante" and for what it stood formerly. As no girl of the young woman's acquaintance can bear having the word applied to her, she wonders why the term keeps on being used, since it represents, according to Miss Aldrich, a girl who had an enormous coming out party, stayed up very late, slept until 5, was photographed in restaurants, and went to another party at night. This was the program for weeks until the girl had to be sent away to rest up.

• • •

"Today there isn't such a girl, or, if there is, I don't know her."

Most of the young women who formerly would have been identified with the now extinct title, according to our source of information, are not taking war jobs, but it's not lack of interest in the war.

"We feel," our young spokesman explains, "that education is going to be vitally important when the war is over, and while we have the chance we want to get all we can!"

If there remain among the oldster class any members whose conversational joy is to bemoan the goings on among the young generation, they're due for interment along with the word "debutante." These young people have self-reliance. They're not only willing to earn a living, but are eager to, and they will not be guilty of taking jobs just for the fun of it, either. They want to do something constructive. On this point our young informant was very definite.

• • •

A slight blow may be deemed the lot of the older generation who have striven to provide their young with everything within their power in the remarks:

"None of us craves possessions. We don't want to be tied down by belongings. We know that we may be on the move. The boys we know are stationed all over the country and writing letters back. They've started us thinking. And when the war is over, we want to get out and see everything, perhaps live in other cities. We belong to the whole of America."

Unless we are badly misled, the world with this type having a constructive hand in it, is going to be a finer place in which to live, for the superficials will not count. The artificialities are doomed, even unto that governing the beauty realm. They're sick unto death of the term "glamor girl" and feel it, too, should be relegated to oblivion. That girl never did have a good time, according to Lucy Aldrich. She never did anything interesting. She was a bad imitation of a movie star. She was a Hollywood girl without talent.

There will be no more modeling after the movie pattern. They're too keen on individuality to want to copy any one. Or else they are too set in their ways.

"As I think it over, I realize we are pretty set. We haven't yet given up long hair, and we don't take very quickly to fads. For instance, the fad of staining the legs to imitate stockings. One or two girls at school tried it for fun, but in the end thought it too much trouble."

The chief horror of the group is, by their own confession, to look dressed up. To look madeup is far worse than looking dressed up, altho lipstick and powder couldn't be dispensed with, they say.

"We do care a lot about keeping the weight down, but there's no violent dieting. We simply stay away from fattening foods. Everyone I know wants to look terribly clean and healthy in the daytime, and as pretty as possible at night."

• • •

That clothes and appearance rate no dominant spot in the lives of these young people, but are relegated to their proper place in well balanced lives, is gleaned from Miss Aldrich's concluding remarks:

"We know perfectly well that the world is shaking. We know that, after the war, it is going to keep on shaking. We are all trying to prepare ourselves. Give us a little more time . . . . and we will."

And there's a pretty neat, unretouched picture of a member of a generation in which the future hope of America lies.

Clotilde Children's Patterns

The wardrobe needs of the younger generation are just as multiple as those of adults. There must be tailored models, semi-dressy styles, and the casual things for play hours. Today's three patterns are just such juvenile fashions. The two frocks will start Cissy's school wardrobe for fall.

No. 3573 is a tailored yet dressy frock with puffed sleeves, basque bodice and full skirt. The scalloped collar and the cuffs contrast. Both plain and printed materials will make up handsomely.

No 2593 makes a two-piece suit, just like the "station wagon" suits for adult silhouettes. Seersucker is the logical choice, but gingham and some of the other cottons will be pretty, too.

No. 2933 is a really adorable sunsuit, with lace or ruffling trimming the shoulderline and the bottoms of the panties.

Style No. 3573 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14. Size 12 requires 2½ yards of 35 inch material, with ⅝ yard contrasting.

Style No. 2593 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14. Size 8 requires 2⅝ yards of 35 inch material.

Style No. 2933 is designed for sizes 1, 2, and 3. Size 2 requires 1 yard of 35 inch material, 1 yard of ruffling, for play dress; ⅝ yard of 35 inch, 2 yards of ruffling for bolero; ⅝ yard of 35 inch, ¾ yard ruffling, for panties.

Each pattern costs 10 cents, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost.

Address orders for Clotilde Children's Fashions to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Annex, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully), plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey.

It's so easy to wear the wrong dress on your dates with service men, but you can avoid such a social error by wearing a "furlough frock," which is really a simple daytime model with just enough line and trimming to keep it feminine. For wives and sweethearts of soldiers, sailors, and marines I've concocted a basque frock, the only trimming of which is readymade rickrack braid.

The original of this model is created of navy blue, coarse-weave material resembling homespun. In spite of its dark color [which is forward-looking and just right for late summer] it's cool and porous and seems to resist both heat and wrinkling, so that I can wear it with the assurance of good grooming no matter how hectic the day. The rickrack trimming is white, and I used the wide kind in three rows, except at the neckline, where I used only one.

Style No. T-8783 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 39 inch material with 9½ yards of braid.

Adviser Gives Tips on Helping Child in Wartime

Fashions

By Angela

There are at least two gleeful days in the year for every child. One is the day school is dismissed and the other is that day in September when the fall term starts, a new grade, new studies, new friends, new teacher, and [here's where I come in] new clothes.

The red plaid jumper on the 6 year old at the top of the sketch is of cotton material and washable, of course, altho it looks much like a wool fabric. The pattern is printed in a way to resemble a woven pattern as in a woolen plaid. There is a separate little white blouse which makes easier the business of keeping clean. Under $2.

The very young sportswoman will set her eyes and her heart upon the separate skirt made in the manner of a wraparound, with brass buttons around the waist and down the front flap. It is red or navy flannel. The sport jacket is made in blue or dubonnet corduroy. Washable, you'll be pleased to know.

Girls from 7 to 14 can be fitted in the peasant dress. The full, gathered suspender skirt is of a blue or rose printed cotton, and a darling, white cotton peasant blouse with touches of colored embroidery tucks in at the waist.

Definitely a back to school costume is No. 4. Complete in every detail and including a bias corduroy skirt, matching waistcoat, white blouse [with French cuffs], and a small pencil and notebook tucked in the vest pocket. Each complete costume already is packed neatly in its own little box, ready and waiting to be slipped under your arm. For a small fee, of course. Under $4.

When the wind blows and the rain pours, a hooded, reversible coat is the thing to have. This same type of coat is available in a variety of plaids and colors, zipper or button closing, with or without the hood.

For information, call Angela, Superior 0200. Mail requests should be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Personal Kind of Comfort Badly Needed

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

We parents, in this wartime, should try to make as little change as possible in our children's lives. The familiar, in surroundings, in activities, and in the way we mothers and fathers treat our boys and girls, is a big, reassuring element in their daily life.

However, everything cannot remain the same. Even little children, at the most sheltered age, are not immune from the impact of war. At nursery school or kindergarten [if they attend], at home, and at play with other children, they are constantly bumping up against the war. In the "in between" years and in adolescence they feel its impact more, of course, but in a different way. So let us devote today's column to our little boys and girls, the war, and what we can do about that combination.

Such advice has to be general. It may help you to think back to other fundamental suggestions that have been made in these talks "for parents in wartime," and always the individual child and the individual home situation have to be taken into consideration. With those factors in mind, let us think about our small children.

It is a comfort to parents to know that their very small children, even tho kindergarten age, cannot imagine or see in the future what our anxieties and knowledge make very real to us. They can imagine only what they themselves have experienced. They may seem to understand because they pick up the terms that other people around them use. Sensing fear or anxiety, they may describe things with the same words as are current with adults, but which do not have the same meanings for them. For instance, one little boy understands the war as a big game to catch Hitler. Another very dependable child tells about his dreams of Hitler coming over here and taking everything away. To most small children Hitler symbolizes all "badness," and is the object of their feeling of antagonism.

Actually children will show fear less by their words than by their actions. They may be irritable, hard to please, restless, or they may even make the most of the chance to get special attention and privileges. A kindergarten teacher reported that, after the first air raid drill, there was next day an irritability and restlessness thruout the group that the children themselves couldn't connect with anything in particular. Try to treat all these behavior problems as normally as you can; try not to let any of your children, whatever their ages, live in anxious anticipation of dangers that do not exist.

The little child needs personal comfort. When a situation arises to cause actual fear, such as alarming war talk, drills, or an event of real danger, parents know from long experience that the best way to comfort a little child is to take him in their arms, to cuddle him close, or hold his hand. The only security he knows is the personal one of the grown people in his life, and their protection is essential to him in moments of insecurity and fear. This protected feeling can be given in the simplest and most direct fashion by giving the little child physical security and comfort.

In preparing for defense, all parents need to do is to remember their own childhood experiences and the things that have happened in the past with their children, to take note of the way they felt and acted so that when an emergency arises they will automatically do what will comfort and sustain each member of the family. The little child can feel your fears thru your touch, even tho your face and voice seem calm, but it is wise to remember that if you have confidence in yourself he too will be calm.

Another suggestion about the little child is to avoid too much drilling and preparation, but instead to give a few very simple and specific instructions and some small responsibility that is especially his to be occupied with—what he is to do, where he is to go, and a favorite toy to be taken with him. It would be well to shift his toys occasionally, so that he does not become too attached to one. Little children derive much comfort and reassurance from familiar things, so a well-loved object will help at once to make unfamiliar surroundings seem less strange and fearful.

• • •

One important bit of advice comes out of the experience of England. Let your children express their fears frankly. Don't let them try too hard to be brave. It is going to be perfectly natural for children, as well as adults, to be frightened by some things that may occur, even by the talk and uncertainty and preparations in the community. Let them see the naturalness of their fear. Let them express it. Try to be natural yourselves. Reassure them by the physical comfort of contact and warmth and food, and the possession of some favorite toy to cling to.

The major part of this article is based upon information in a leaflet entitled "To Parents in Wartime," prepared by the Children's Bureau, Washington, D. C.

How can the teacher help the untruthful child? Should sex be a matter for discussion at home or at school? These are just two topics which Gladys Huntington Bevans presents in her new 28 page booklet, "Talks with Teachers." Now available at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price 5 cents. Postpaid, 7 cents.

Fashions as I See Them

By Judith Cass

A thin, little white dress with attractive embroidery in some pretty, colorful shade at the neckline, waist, and sometimes on the skirt, too, is a favorite child's party frock with Lake Forest mothers. There were several little girls in variations of this dress at a Free France benefit Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster gave in their Lake Forest residence recently. Honey Harvey, the C. Daggett Harveys' young daughter, was wearing one of them. Her dress was trimmed in green and had a mock apron of the green as well. Bumpy Elting, who came to the party with her grandmother, Mrs. Samuel A. Rinaker, was wearing the dress with green inserts at the neck and waist. Bumpy has long, blonde hair and resembles her mother, Mrs. Winston Elting, and Honey's head is covered with light brown curls. . . . Blonde little Louise Smith, the Edward B. Smiths' tiny daughter, sat on her nurse's lap while having her likeness sketched by Mrs. Stewart Harvey. Louise's dress was a white top and blue skirt, and to keep her sitting quietly, "Nanny" was telling her a fairy story, which ended, somehow, with the question of how the little story girl was to get home. "In a taxi," cried modern little Miss Smith. . . . There's no denying that French born Mrs. Leander McCormick has a flair for clothes. There always is something distinctive and essentially chic about her costumes. At the French benefit she was wearing a perfectly simple little white dress, but over it was a magnificently tailored, heavy flannel blazer, collarless, of soft blue. It was the only such jacket at the party, for most of the other women had brought along for warmth that old standby, the hand-knit sweater, smart and pretty too, of course, but old-fashioned looking alongside Mrs. McCormick's wrap. At one side she pinned an engaging little leather rooster in red, white, and blue which she purchased from one of the French organizations participating in the benefit.

Mrs. Brewster's all white dress was outstanding among the many white ones there. Hers fitted snugly around the neck with a band of eyelet embroidery, which was repeated at the edge of the short sleeves, and just above the hem. The full skirt was skilfully gathered around the waistline to simulate an apron, and fastened with ties of self-material across the back, just as an apron is. . . . Mrs. Howard Linn, who also has a reputation for her clothes, was another in an utterly simple, short sleeved, white dress. Hers was of thin material. She was not wearing stockings, nor did she need them, for her legs are tanned a delightful color. On her feet were comfortable red wedge-soled shoes, and her white curls were bound up, East Indian fashion, in a handkerchief of a luscious, soft shade of pink, a few shades lighter than the deep pink sweater she tossed casually over one shoulder. . . . Mrs. Rinaker was one of the few who had foregone the overwhelming choice of red, white, and blue at the benefit. Her dress was of a deep chartreuse, and her fingertip length wool coat was of purple, an attractive but demanding combination, and one which a woman less stunning than Mrs. Rinaker could not carry off. Mrs. Rinaker was hatless, her heavy, long copper hair rolled up sleekly. . . . A stunning young woman, who is much in evidence in Lake Forest this summer, is Miss Franja Hutchins, the subdebutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert M. Hutchins. Tall and poised, with dark brown curls that frame her pretty face, Miss Hutchins attracts attention wherever she goes. Recently she was wearing a patriotic costume of red, white, and blue,

Two other tall women at a Lake Forest gathering recently were Mrs. Keith Brown, who has reddish gold curls, cut rather on the short side, and Mrs. Robert F. Carr Jr., whose glossy, dark brown locks still fall shoulder length, á la glamor girl. Mrs. Brown was wearing a white spectator sports dress, and a blue ribbed sweater. She was without stockings, as was Mrs. Carr, whose dress was of white, trimmed in red. Mrs. Nelson L. Barnes Jr. also was wearing white, a princess style dress that had mock corset lacings in red thru the midriff. Mrs. Paul Rowan has a becoming and attractive summer frock in linen in a color that is just off-white, but not quite what is known as "natural." It is printed here and there with double or triple size strawberries. . . . Also on the tall side is a young Winnetka matron, Mrs. Theodore Donaldson, the former Peggy Boyd. She is very blonde, and her wavy hair is cut in the new 3 inch length and curls up softly. One day recently she was wearing a powder blue linen frock, made on slim, straight lines, and unrelieved by any other color.

• • •

All in aqua blue was Mrs. Eugene du Pont III. one day recently. Her dress was of linen, monogrammed in cherry color. Drawn thru the strap of her white purse was a white sweater knit in an interesting pattern. White sweaters have a luxurious look about them somehow, and Miss Mary Mabbatt added infinite chic to a pretty little white dress with a red collar by adding a finely knit, white cashmere cardigan. Miss Polly and Miss Ann Porter have soft pastel colored wool coats to toss over their shoulders on chilly summer days. One wears pale yellow, the other pale blue. . . . It's the monogram on Mrs. Gilbert Osgood's white linen dress banded in blue that provides interest. The letters FBO, a good 3 or 4 inches high, are embroidered in blue right across the front of the bodice in a descending line. . . . A rainy day recently brought forth an interesting collection of raincoats, with everything from father's old mackinaw to cellophane rain capes. The smartest one we have seen in years was worn by Mrs. Joseph E. Rich, and it's safe to say that there won't be many more, for it was of white rubber. The coat was cut on tailored lines and shirred at the waistline so that it fitted well and was not in the least bulky. Mrs. Edwin Ryerson and Mrs. John P. Hooker are among those who protect their clothes with the ever-useful colorless rain cape, and Mrs. Osgood and Mrs. Thomas A. Connors have reversible coats, plaid on one side, plain on the other.

Crocheted Lace Edgings

By Ellen Bruce.

White crocheted laces for fall will be outstanding on "black-out" dresses. These three laces are excellent examples of somthing new under the sun. These same laces may be created in heavier thread and applied to curtains, tray cloths, doilies, and towels. The patterns are not difficult to execute and may be worked practically at "a mile a minute."

For instructions in crocheting the three new laces, No. 1144, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Sally's Young Guests to See Yankee Movie

By Sally Joy Brown.

Activities of the Sally Joy Brown department are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

Our party news is so good that I had a hard time keeping it to myself until today, boys and girls, and when I tell you about it I'm sure you'll understand why!

Now that the weather's pretty warm and sticky, it's great fun to slide into a nice cool movie theater, and when there's a program such as the one the Palace theater is soon to have, it seems like just the perfect place for my party guests on Aug. 20.

• • •

You'll see one of your favorite movie stars in a picture about the life of one of baseball's greatest players. It's "The Pride of the Yankees" featuring Gary Cooper, Teresa Wright, and Walter Brennan. You'll also see some of the famous Yankee players, including Babe Ruth and Bill Dickey.

A Walt Disney short will be an extra treat, featuring your old friend, Goofy, in "How to Play Baseball." Won't that be fun?

The date's Aug. 20, the place is the Palace theater, and 50 boys and 50 girls will be my guests at this party.

• • •

Want to come with me? Well, all you have to do is write a letter which will prove to me that you'd really and truly enjoy this program, and if you're sincerely eager to come, maybe you'll be selected as one of my guests.

Tell me anything you like, but be sure to include your full name, address, and your age when you write. If you forget a single one of those important items, you can't possibly be a winner.

The names of 100 youngsters who will be my guests on Aug. 20 will be printed in this column in next Sunday's TRIBUNE, and if you expect to find yours there, don't wait too long to write to Sally Joy Brown, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

• • •

Here are the names of the boys and girls who soon will receive personal invitations to come to our next party, which is to take place on Thursday, Aug. 13. We'll be off for Wrigley field to see the Chicago Cubs play the St. Louis Cardinals, so I'll see you all on Thursday!

Lechem Loaniem Aid to Have Annual Picnic

The Lechem Loaniem Ladies Aid society, a philanthropic group whose name signifies "bread for the poor," will hold its annual picnic today in Elm Tree grove, 6541 Irving Park road. Proceeds will be devoted to charity. Arrangements are under the direction of Mrs. Evelyn Moskowitz and Mrs. Sarah Baratz, who are assisted by Mrs. Anna Harris, president; Mrs. Ida Wankovsky, vice president, and Mrs. Lillian Elman, chairman of the board of directors.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, but not value. The column in this page contains offers to buy and sell. Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

This cover from Wasilewsk, Siberia, U. S. S. R., is shown thru the kindness of Dr. M. Feuer of Chicago. The large stamp showing the flag and airplanes at the top of a globe was issued in 1937 to commemorate the conquest of the Arctic regions by the Soviet union.

Victor H. Fulbius of Chicago is the fortunate possessor of a gutter block of four of the 25 cent green war stamps. This was found when the new stock of the stamps was being opened and was caused by a sheet which inadvertently became folded in the process of binding the 100 sheet books.

Altho war stamps have been illustrated by some publications and in one case in the original color, it is nevertheless illegal to reproduce them since they are direct obligations of the government and readers must content themselves with a description.

These stamps are printed by a process identical to that used for the current postage stamps and on the same machines. At one point they are handled in sheets of 400 stamps, and in this form 100 full sheets are placed in a stack with a sheet of thin cardboard above and below and the entire stack bound by stapling the side edges. The bound stack is then passed thru a cutting machine which quarters it, cutting along the center of a gutter provided for that purpose.

It sometimes happens, as in the case of the stamps in question, that a 400 size sheet becomes folded while being piled in the stack of 100 sheets. This fold of necessity must be in such a form that none of the corners protrude outside the edges of the stack or it would be detected at once and corrected. Such a fold has been the cause in times past of panes with 11 vertical rows instead of 10 and other freaks. Of course when there is an oversize sheet in one package there is bound to be a shortage in another. Postal clerks have learned to count the packages of 100 sheets twice and at opposite corners. In this check Mr. Fulbius discovered that he had 100 sheets in one count and 99 in the second.

Errors or freaks of this sort are seldom found by collectors unless they have the opportunity of examining quantities of unopened packages. Naturally the first one who discovers such things removes them from the stock so that they may be properly taken care of in the accounts.

The total first day sales of the 5 cent Chinese commemorative stamp on July 7 at Denver, Colo., were 257,946 copies, and 168,746 covers received the first-day postmark. Robert E. Fellers, superintendent of the division of stamps, represented the post-office department. The stamps were printed from plates 22954 and 22955. William A. Roach was the designer of this stamp and the engravers were Leo C. Kauffmann for the Lincoln portrait, Carl T. Arlt for Sun Yatsen's portrait, Rueben K. Barrick for the map and Axel W. Christensen for the frame, lettering and numerals.

The establishment of United States army postal service A. P. O.'s continues at a rapid rate. During the week ended July 25, 22 new numbers were assigned. As New York postoffice branches A. P. O.'s 510 to 519 inclusive were established effective July 15; Nos. 669 to 674 inclusive, effective July 18, and A. P. O. 882, effective June 5. As branches of San Francisco Nos. 715 to 719 were established effective July 18.

Marie Johnson, Box 185, Council Bluffs, Ia., has a large supply of patriotic poster stamps issued by the Hobart Arc Welding company. Any reader may obtain a few by sending Miss Johnson a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Frederic T. Metcalf, 1313 West Randolph street, is interested in learning whether or not the local members of the Bureau Issues association would care to form a Chicago chapter of that organization which would meet at regular intervals. Members who have not made a reply to Mr. Metcalf's letter should do so without delay.

Criticism from several sources has been directed against the philatelic societies which intend to hold conventions this summer in spite of the request of the director of defense transportation that conventions, etc., be canceled this year. The American Philatelic society defends its stand by quoting Joseph Eastman, director of defense transportation, who stated: "Vacations are desirable from the standpoint of public health, efficiency and morale, and vacation business has furnished a means of livelihood to many people in various parts of the country." In addition attention is called to the fact that philatelic conventions are really very small affairs and attract only a hundred or so delegates, with the bulk of the attendance coming from the convention city, and have never interfered with the regular traffic of railroads and other common carriers. Since Cleveland, where the convention of the American Philatelic society will be held, is only an overnight journey from the homes of half the population of the United States, it is believed there is no valid objection to the meeting as planned.

A special convention postoffice station will be in operation at the Hollenden hotel from Wednesday to next Sunday, and will be provided with a postmarking device reading "American Philatelic Society Convention Station, Cleveland, Ohio."

About 265 frames of stamps will be displayed, including the prize winning collection of United States offset printed stamps formed by Donald F. Lybarger, recorder of Cuyahoga county, Ohio. Each day during the convention an auction will be held with the entire proceeds going to the Army and Navy Relief fund. Donations of stamps, albums, etchings, coins, books, buttons, badges, etc., should be sent at once to Nelson P. LaGanke, Caxton Building, Cleveland.

North Shore Philatelic society will entertain the Chicago Philatelic society at the regular meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m., at the Edgewater Beach hotel. J. T. Hermansader, president of the latter society, will speak on "The History of the United States Postal System." North Shore Philatelic society has fostered interclub meetings for many years and believes that much good is accomplished thereby.

The postmaster general of Liberia has announced the appointment of Jacques Koerpel of Forest Hills, N. Y., as philatelic adviser to the government of Liberia. Mr. Koerpel was long associated with H. E. Harris & Co., stamp dealers of Boston, Mass., and will no doubt be able to advise the Liberian government how to make the most of the sales to collectors. Unfortunately the philatelic agency of Liberia, which by the way, is not located in Africa but in New York City, does not believe in selling direct to collectors but goes after the business wholesale and sells only to dealers.

Simple Luncheon Menus Favor Fresh Fruits in Season

Lavish Meals Out of Date, Unpatriotic

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1942: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Nobody entertains lavishly with a heavily laden table any more. That kind of dining would be grossly inappropriate these days. There are many company meals, of course, for even in wartime good friends should get together. But the menus are simple, and stress seasonable foods. Right now it's a season of fruits, so both family and company meals emphasize melons, peaches, grapes, and berries.

These luncheon menus are designed to please women, altho men will find them palatable, too. They aren't extravagant, and they don't require a great deal of preparation. But they're colorful, well balanced, and taste appealing. Well chosen linens, china [or pottery], and glassware will set them off beautifully.

Pretty flowered cotton and linen lunch cloths are attractive with these menus if you have rather plain dishes or glass ones. Dishes which have a good deal of pattern look best on plain colored cloths. Place mats always are lovely if you have a handsome table top to show off.

SUMMER LUNCHEON MENUS.

I.

Cheese Soufflé, Fondue or Omelet
Buttered Peas with Fresh Chopped Mint
Crusty Rolls, Currant Jelly
Salad Bowl: Sliced Honeydew, Quartered Plums, Lengthwise Slices of Banana, Fresh Berries, with Lemon and Honey Flavored Mayonnaise
Spice Cake Squares, Whipped Cream
Demi-tasse

II.

Fresh Corn Pudding
Stuffed Halves of Italian Squash
Tiny Pickled Beets
Cheese Toast Triangles*
Bowl of Fresh Fruit Salad, Whipped Cream Dressing [Peaches, Banana, Orange Sections, White Grapes, Nuts]
Macaroons
Hot or Iced Coffee or Tea

*Use a sharp cheese spread, smoked cheddar, for example.

III.

[One course]

Fresh Fruit Platter: Cantaloupe or Honeydew, Watermelon, Pineapple [if available], Grape Clusters, Peaches, Watercress and Mint Leaves for Garnish, Grape Sherbet, Honey French Dressing [pass separately]*
Cottage Cheese and Chives
Hot Blueberry Muffins

*A huge platter of the fruits may be served, or individual glass plates may be arranged with the sherbet used as a center around which to arrange fruit. This kind of luncheon can be perfectly beautiful to look at and delightful to eat if the fruits are carefully arranged and grouped.

IV.

Butter Fried Chicken Breasts with Wine Sauce or Mushroom Gravy on Steamed Brown or Wild Rice
Glazed Young Carrots
Tiny Biscuits or Muffins
Tossed Greens with Cheese French Dressing
Honeydew Section Topped with Orange Ice, Mint Leaf Garnish
Iced or Hot Tea or Coffee

V.

Sea Food au Gratin Served in Shells
Buttered Green Beans, Asparagus or Broccoli
Celery Curls Radishes Corn Sticks
Lemon Freeze [lemonade with ice cream ball in it]
Honey Cookies

Cheese Soufflé.

[Serves four or five.]

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 cup milk or tomato juice
- ½ teaspoon salt
- Few grains cayenne pepper
- ½ pound sharp process cheese, sliced
- 4 eggs, separated

Melt butter, blend in flour, and add milk or tomato juice. Cook and stir over low heat, or in the top of a double boiler, until smooth and thickened. Add seasonings and cheese. Stir until cheese has melted. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Fold them into the cheese sauce. Cool and fold in egg whites, which have been beaten until stiff. Pour into buttered baking dish, set in a pan of hot water, and bake at 350 degrees. Or bake in a slow oven, about 315 degrees, for one hour and 10 minutes. Serve at once. The soufflé may be baked in individual ramekins.

Wine Sauce for Chicken.

[For four to six servings.]

- 1½ cups tomatoes, strained
- ¾ cup sauterne or other white wine
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 6 green onions, chopped
- Sprinkle of garlic salt
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 small can sliced mushrooms
- Salt, pepper

Combine tomatoes and wine. Cook onions in butter until yellow, add garlic salt and flour. Add tomatoes and wine. Cook until smooth and thickened. Simmer for 20 minutes. When chicken has been fried golden brown remove it to a hot platter and pour sauce into the skillet. Stir and simmer so that sauce absorbs chicken flavor. Season to taste with salt and pepper and add mushrooms, with liquor. Pour over chicken to serve.

Junior Business Club Having 2d Summer Program

The Junior Business and Professional Women's club will hold the second of its summer "get togethers" at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street. Miss Blanche von Drasek has arranged the program, a talk by Miss Marjorie Holbert on her experiences in March of 1941 as a refugee from France.

War activities are being continued without interruption this summer by the group. The young women are doing hostess duty one night each month at the service center at 1249 South Wabash avenue.

Ladies of Isabella.

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

In midsummer, when the skin is sun-kissed enough to be even faintly rosy or tinged with tan, the powder shade that blended perfectly with your winter pallor won't do at all. If you adopt one with undertones that echo the changes in your skin tint, your makeup will be far more successful.

Comes the height of the summer, you'll notice that even tho you haven't taken time to lounge in the sun to court a deep coat of tan, your skin does have a slightly sun-kissed look. You're out doors more and maybe, in spite of yourself, some sun has given it a tone that makes it pinker or tanner than it is in the dead of winter.

It's absolutely essential for most women to change powder shades in midsummer, to avoid the shade that was keyed especially to the winter pallor. Something with deeper undertones will be more flattering, and less obvious on the skin.

The final test of the powder tint that suits to perfection is its naturalness on the skin. If powder is visible, the choice of a shade is a failure. All powder should do is give a dressed, finished look, not a coating of color that contrasts with the delicate color of the skin beneath it. The "mask makeup" is definitely out nowadays.

The way to test powder for your own skin tone is to dust some on generously, then smooth it down. If the skin finish is velvety, your natural color tones are neither obscured nor heightened too much, the powder is right.

In making your midsummer change of powder, remember, too, that a different texture might smooth out some of your makeup difficulties. In the winter, if your skin is extremely dry, you will need a quite different weight than you do in midsummer when the skin contains more natural oil or may even be downright oily. A powder that absorbs moisture to a certain extent is by far the best in summer.

Powder that "polka dots" after its been on for an hour is an abomination. Some of its tendency to do this can be overcome simply by proper application. Dust it on generously, then smooth it with a powder brush or a soft puff. Don't ever rub powder in.

Three Floral Designs

By Nancy Cabot.

Embroidered floral designs are popular for use on pillow tops, towels, and to be framed as wall plaques. These three dainty sprays are motifs which add charm to any pillow case or finger towel. The hot iron transfer pattern includes three motifs which measure from 4½x6½ to 5x13½ inches.

For the hot iron transfer pattern of the three floral sprays, No. 779, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

The Lady of the House

Wild Prairie Flower.

An old Hindu proverb holds that one-fourth of man's education comes from books, one-fourth from his associates, one-fourth from his work, and one-fourth from nature. Some one adds that nature is a rather reluctant teacher. More often it seems to me that we are reluctant learners.

Many of us are lamenting the disappearance of our wild flowers from the American landscapes, but only a few are doing something about it. John Muir, who grew up among the prairie flowers of southern Wisconsin, was the first to make an effort to establish a floral sanctuary in that region [about 1865]. Altho he was opposed at that time, he sowed the seed of an idea that has since borne fruit.

Flower lovers who know how to reproduce natural conditions are preserving interesting varieties in their home gardens. Land owners are allowing them to come back along fence rows and ungrazed woodlots. Nurserymen are developing the more showy ones for the garden. Best of all, interested persons are establishing sanctuaries for the wild flowers in their own habitats.

Indians and pioneer women knew a good deal about the use of some of these plants for food and medicine. Dyes were made of others. These had an important part not only in handicrafts, but in many Indian ceremonies.

Interesting legends are told of wildlings. Some months ago we told the orchis legend. Another concerns the familiar wild geranium. Once the prophet Mohammed had occasion to wash his shirt on the bank of a stream. He laid it on some mallows to dry. When the pale flowers discovered the honor conferred upon them, they blushed at the prophet's choice and turned into rosy geraniums.

Every one knows the ancient symbol of the iris which the empress Theodora [A. D. 527] bore on her crown. It was adopted by Louis VII. of France as emblem of his house. Hence the fleur de lis, lily of France, altho some maintain the emblem is the head of a lance.

[If you have had success in growing wild flowers in your garden, or know of outstanding wild flower preserves in the Chicagoland states, please report to this column.]

Water Lilies.

Floating on the ebon surface
Of silent waters cool as night
Water lilies, waxen jewels,
Grow for God's delight.

From the deep well of my sorrow
Snow white flames arise.
I wonder if they are noticed
By worlds above the skies!

—Anne Sapinhour.

Summer is one of the best times to visit grandma, and grandma seems to like it, too, along with—

Danny Joe.

My youngest grandson, Danny Joe,
Will very soon be five.
I wish that he would visit me,
He is so much alive.

The family is a unit.
When any of the six
Do something strange or funny,
A poem Gram will fix.

Then Danny Joe, forefinger raised,
A twinkle in his eye,
Will say, "That really happened.
Come on, Gram, make a pie."

One day he found a nickel
Instead of candy, gum.
"Let's buy some yeast! You know what?
Rolls, Gram, come on make some."

—Ella Merritt Bartlett.

Fantasy.

I stood at my window at midnight
And envied the slumbering world;
While there in the soft beaming moonlight,
Sweet visions and dreams were unfurled.
I heard your fond voice whisper gently,
Assuaging my sighs and my tears;
Your dear kindred spirit aroused me;
Once more I relived all the years.
Of happiness that long have vanished:
Of promises we could not keep.
United with you, woes were banished;
I smiled while the world was asleep.

—Zilla Vollmer Tietgen.

Aunt Ella's Almanac.

9. Today—First commencement held at Harvard college 300 years ago. No old grads around. No talk about summer vacation.
10. Monday—Hottish with blustery winds. Dry some herbs. Dry some berries. Dry some vegetables. Dry something. The Indians do. Or maybe you better wash the blankets.
11. Tuesday—Fulton's steamboat made a trial trip [1807]. Why not go for a boat ride? Remember those Sunday school excursions?
12. Wednesday—Hawaii annexed to the United States [1898]. My old Eclectic geography calls them the Sandwich Islands. There's an old engraving showing natives on the beach near Honolulu.
13. Thursday—Dry spell. Have you divided the lemon lilies? And how about the iris? Or would you rather make pickles?
15. Saturday—Panama Canal opened [1914]. Storms on the way somewhere. Calm yourself, calm yourself!

[Note: Aunt Ella has been irregular with her almanac, having been busy inventing a new aerial and aquatic torpedo designed like the torpedo fish found in the Mediterranean, Pacific, and Indian oceans. It offers the minimum of resistance to air and water, and throws an electric current before it hits. Fits right into the tail of a plane and kicks backward if desired.]

If you mislay something about the house, just follow the plan of the farmer's boy who found the cow by saying, "If I were a cow, where would I go?" He went there and there was the cow. Try it.—M. M.

Patterns by Clotilde

By Clotilde.

Autumn clothes already are beginning to appear on the fashion horizon, but don't let the style calendar fool you. You'll wear those handsome fall numbers for social occasions, true, but for everyday and for sports the thermometer defies fashion. Hence our offering of cool and comfortable sports models in the patterns today.

At the left, a backless, shoulderless model with wide, sturdy straps, heart shaped neckline, snug bodice, self-material belt and gracefully flared skirt. This frock is grand for tennis and spectator sports, and it's as smart as an honor student in awning stripes.

Center, that beflowered bathing suit you've been wanting all summer. It has a long torso and a full skirt.

Right, the nautical motif in a play-suit with matching skirt. The sailor collar is according to tradition, complete with the dickey, and the navy stripes run around the collar, around the sleeves and at the hemline of the button-down-the-front skirt.

Style No. 2891 is designed for sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 3½ yards of 35 inch material.

Style No. 3422 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20 and 36, 38 and 40 inch bust measurements. Size 16 requires 1¾ yards of 35 inch fabric for bathing suit; ⅝ yard for panties.

Style No. 3070 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 2⅛ yards of 35 inch material for middy; 1⅛ yards for shorts; 3 yards for skirt; 12¾ yards of braid.

Each pattern costs 10 cents, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost.

Home Owners' Queries

Chicago—[To the Home Building Editor].—We've been given some antique glass bottles, but they've been used for liquids which have given them a soapy look on the inside. Is there anything to remove this?—Mrs. J. Holmes.

Answer: Vinegar or denatured alcohol or a weak solution of muriatic acid may do the work. Or you might try an old-fashioned remedy: A handful of birdshot in the bottle, and then shake this up in warm soapsuds.

Chicago—[To the Home Building Editor].—What is meant by superheating of a house in warm weather to rid it of insect pests? Is this treatment effective?—Mrs. Thomas H.

Answer: Yes, superheating of a house in summer is one method of ridding it of insect pests. Maintain a dry heat of 130 degrees or so in your house for one or two hours. Open doors between rooms and closets and trunk lids, etc., so that all articles are heated. Close the outside doors and windows when you start heating plant and choose a hot, windless summer day. It might be well to remove any valuable paintings.

Jewish Women's Council Ending Summer Forums

Chicago section of the National Council of Jewish Women is concluding its summer series of consumer relations forums tomorrow with a health program.

Mrs. Gunther Plaunt, chairman of the series, will present Philip R. Davis, chief of the speakers' bureau of the Illinois State Council of Defense, at 10:30 o'clock in room 1708 of the Medical and Dental Arts building, 185 North Michigan avenue. His talk is scheduled under the title, "Health Is Wealth." Mr. Davis, a frequent speaker on public radio forums, is judge advocate of the Illinois department of the American Legion, chairman of the judicial selection committee of the Illinois Bar association, and vice chairman of the military affairs committee of the Chicago Bar association.

The summer forums have been an adjunct of the council's comprehensive war program, which is directed by Mrs. Mitchell Edelson. Mrs. William H. Sahud is president.

Chicago Woman's Club to Hear Herma Clark

"Illinois" is the theme song this month at the Chicago Woman's club, and the weekly programs are seeing a procession of writers and musicians of this region. At Wednesday's meeting, Herma Clark, who writes the "When Chicago Was Young" column in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE and the author of "The Elegant Eighties" and other books on local history, will speak at 11:15 o'clock, having for her theme, "When Illinois Was Young." Scotte Sloan, baritone, will conduct assembly singing. Mrs. Charles S. Pratt will be the presiding hostess at bridge in the afternoon in the club lounge.

Young Wives Need Not Be Embarrassed Concerning This Intimate Problem

Because of natural shyness or lack of confidence in the knowledge of friends the uninformed young wife often hesitates to seek the advice of others. Instead, she risks health and happiness by use of over-strong solutions of acids for feminine hygiene which can actually burn, scar and harm delicate tissue.

Today such risks are needless. Science has given womankind Zonite. So powerful, it kills instantly all germs and bacteria with which it comes in contact. Deodorizes—by actually destroying odors. Protects personal daintiness. Yet! Zonite is non-caustic, non-poisonous, safe for delicate tissues. Over 20,000,000 bottles bought. Get Zonite at your druggist today.

Wise Home Manager Takes Care of Electric Appliances

Most Copper, Rubber Is Used by War Plants

By Claire Winslow.

In these days of new economy it is a wise home manager who takes steps now to preserve electric appliances and cords instead of letting them deteriorate. Because war industries need copper and rubber it behooves all of us to look to those items in our homes which contain them and then make them last as long as we possibly can.

Electric cords, such as those used on lamps, on toasters and irons, and percolators and mixers have both copper and rubber in them. So, treat them gently.

Never jerk a cord loose from an electric wall plate by yanking it free. To disconnect it grasp the plug itself at the outlet and remove it with a firm, quick motion. When you are ready to start ironing with your electric iron always connect it at the iron first, then at the wall plate.

And never do it when your hands are wet, or even damp. Never let water come near the cord, either. One sure way to shorten the life of an electric cord is to wrap it tightly about the handle of an iron while that iron is still hot.

• • •

And coil it loosely, if you must coil it. A better way is to have a special place for these cords in a kitchen or pantry closet. Keep them all together, hung over a well rounded clothes hook. Or take two large spools and nail them to the closet wall at a convenient height and let the cords hang over them. This keeps them from getting knotted and twisted and is an easy way to prolong their usefulness.

It's never a good idea to push a lot of electric cords in a cabinet drawer. They are sure to get tangled and twisted and this wears out the insulation. Remember that any exposed wire resulting from threadbare insulation means possible electric shock or a blown fuse or a short circuit.

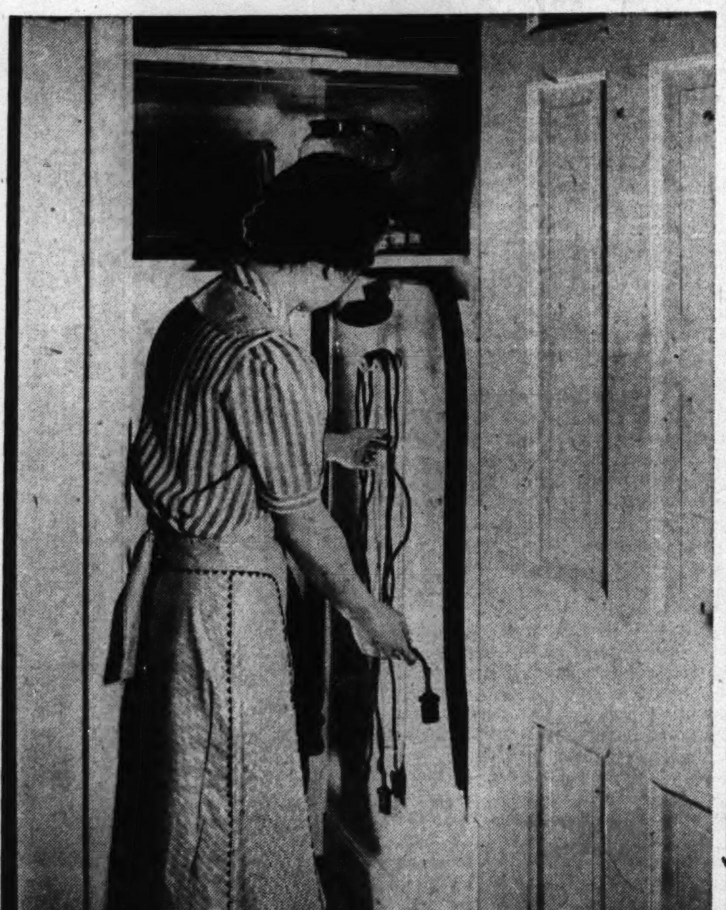
If a cord does become frayed it should be repaired immediately. If only the covering is worn, however, you can wind friction tape around the spot. A broken plug should not be patched; it requires expert repairing.

• • •

It is unwise to run an extension cord under a rug. If it is absolutely necessary to do this, however, be sure the cord is flat, not round. And never nail it to the wall or floor.

A final word of caution. There are no substitutes for fuses. A fuse is a safety device to warn you that something is wrong; makeshifts are no protection. If one blows out find out what caused this before you replace it. It may be a short circuit, defective wiring or an overloaded circuit.

When replacing a fuse make certain first that you are not standing on a damp floor. If the place is wet put a dry board down, or use a wooden chair. And be sure your hands are perfectly dry!



Electric cords are precious, these days, and will repay care with extra long service. When not in use hang them loosely over two large spools nailed to a closet wall, or over rounded clothes hooks.

Mary Hain Is Engaged to Cadet James G. Janes

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hain of West Lexington avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary, to Cadet James G. Janes, U. S. Army Air corps. Mr. Janes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Janes of Miami, Fla., attended the Pennsylvania State Teachers' colege.

If You Visit an Army Post, Mind Manners

By Helen Bartlett.

Army etiquet is pretty strict. Infractions of the rules are not tolerated, so if you want to be made welcome when you visit the army post where that special boy is hayfooting-strawfooting around the parade ground and if you want to be invited to come again, mind your manners. You, as a guest of the army, are expected to respect the regulations, too.

For instance, pay some observance to the rank of the soldier. While you are not expected to raise your hand in a smart salute, you should try to show the respect due a superior officer. This you can do by making proper introductions, for instance. Present the less superior officer to the more superior officer. Do not be noisy or conspicuous. And don't flirt with the general.

• • •

Don't expect your board bill, while in camp, to be footed by the government. You may have to live on ice cream and popcorn from the canteen during your visit.

Don't expect any special privileges, don't take any without permission, and don't encourage your favorite private to break a rule of the camp just for a lark. He will pay for it after you're gone.

Bring the boy a present, if you want to, but don't smuggle in something you know he is not permitted to have.

• • •

The boys in the army are obliged to look at gold braid, brass buttons, chevrons, and emblems all day long, so if you want to be a welcome sight, wear something feminine and leave the military motifs at home. Wear sensible shoes, too, because you can't taxi around on the caissons or in the jeeps. You walk when you want to get from here to there.

Remember when it is time to leave the camp and leave promptly. Don't practice missing the last train. And be sure your good-by is not a tearful one.

Harwichport and Hyannis Flower Shows Hold Interest

CAPE COD, MASS.

Flower shows in Harwichport and Hyannis proved focal points of interest last week for scores of Cape Cod vacationists. The exhibit Friday in Harwichport, the 10th to be sponsored by the garden club of Harwich, was unique in that the arrangements were divided among a series of several residences located in Ayer lane within a short distance of each other. Rooms of the homes lent themselves adequately to the different types of displays, giving a new approach to one of the club's outstanding projects of the year. Proceeds of the event went to a noble cause—the Harwich branch of the mobile canteen connected with Cape Cod chapter, American Red Cross.

Members of the garden club of Hyannis used the facilities of the Hyannis public library for staging their show on Tuesday. Among those inspecting the variety of exhibits were Mr. and Mrs. Howard D. Whitehouse of Chicago and Wianno, the latter being a member of the committee which served tea during the late afternoon hours.

• • •

Altho the Wianno club is always introducing new kinds of diversion for its club and cottage guests, the regular weekly events which have found favor with visitors at that watering place go on unabated. One of these programs which continues to hold interest is the Friday night keno party in the main clubhouse. The gathering which turned out for the party a week ago included in its number Mrs. Seymour Wheeler of Chicago, who has returned to Wianno after a visit there earlier in the summer. Mrs. Wheeler, who is occupying her lovely home in Sea View avenue, was joined during the last week by Mr. Wheeler.

While many of the visitors at Wianno indulge in the varied activities scheduled thru the week, there are others who find the resort to their liking because of its quiet, restful atmosphere. A Chicago couple enjoying this type of vacation are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Y. Freeman, who plan to remain at the club thru mid-August. Week-ends the Freemans are being joined at the colony by their son, Donald, a student at Princeton university.

• • •

Tiny tots, grandmothers, one grand pa and proud parents of Oyster Harbors' youngsters were on hand when the Oyster Harbors club held its animal fair last week. Conducted on the lower terrace of the club, the occasion brought forth a score of participants who gave the committee of four judges a difficult time in selecting prize winners. Just in the nick of time, as decisions were about to be made, 2 year old Dickie Hartog, son of Mrs. Harold A. Hartog of Chicago, arrived with a small eel to capture the prize for the most unusual animal. Dickie's cousin, Tina Cassinerio, daughter of Mrs. Ambrogio Cassinerio of Chicago, also went in for the unusual, contributing a crab to the entry list.

Following the pet show, the party adjourned to the porch where ice cream was served and all joined in singing songs. "Tina," who was christened Edna Turner Jeffery Cassinerio, and who is 3, touched all hearts by, of her own accord, requesting the orchestra to play "Onward Christian Soldiers" and singing a clear solo to the orchestra's accompaniment.

• • •

The small grandson of Mrs. Robert M. Roloson of Chicago, Jimmy Burns, son of Ensign and Mrs. Richard M. Burns of Framingham, Mass., was another youngster taking part in the exhibition of pets. The Burns family, which includes another young son, is with Mrs. Roloson for an indefinite stay, enjoying the private bathing beach at her beautiful home at the entrance of Seapuit river.

Tuesday night, when the club offers free movies for the colony, has come to be a popular time for entertaining at dinner, the guests adjourning afterward to view the cinema presentation. Hosts at dinner before the performance last week of "Citizen Kane" were the David Danglers of Lake Forest, who entertained in their home Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Rockwood of Cambridge, Mass., and Oyster Harbors and Judge and Mrs. Delano Putnam of Boston, Mass., also staying at Oyster Harbors.

Professor Polgar, master of mental telepathy and other feats of psychic phenomenon, presented a program at the club on Thursday night. Friday was marked by the weekly Cape Cod luncheon on the beach and this week-end finds men golfers playing in a sweepstakes tournament.

All of the Wianno colony's dancers are looking ahead to the evening when Edward and Isabell Sims, who introduced the Samba to Palm Beach, are going to give Wianno club guests their own interpretation of the dance. Ken Reeves, leader of the club orchestra, has obtained special orchestrations of this ballroom dance, native to Brazil.

Arrivals from Chicago at other colonies on the peninsula include Mrs. Robert Porter Kirby and her daughter, Cynthia, who are the guests for one month of Mrs. Kirby's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Chesley of South Yarmouth. Also vacationing in South Yarmouth are the Misses Helen Gunsaulus, assistant curator of oriental art at Chicago Art institute, and Helen MacKenzie, who reside in Chicago on the campus of the University of Chicago. Miss MacKenzie also is on the institute staff.

Mr. and Mrs. Earle Fox of Chicago and their children, Billy, Joyce and Sarah, are occupying a new cottage in a delightfully cool, wooded section of Bass River this season. Both Mr. Fox and his wife are actively engaged in doing their bit for the civilian defense committee of the town of Yarmouth. In between they spend considerable time with Mrs. Fox's father, E. B. Metzel of Highland Park, who is living in Hyannis thru the summer. Vacationing on the cape also gives Mr. Metzel an opportunity to enjoy visits with another daughter, Mrs. Ballard Bigbee, who also is a member of the Bass River colony.

Still other Chicagoans staying on the Cape are Miss Edna Kelly, who has been a guest of Miss Xoa M. Shafer in West Falmouth, and Charles Ferris of Glencoe. Mr. Ferris, who is soloist at the Methodist church in Glencoe, was heard in two anthems at the Dennis Union church last Sunday when Dean Ernest G. Holmes of Lehigh university, Bethlehem, Pa., supplied the pulpit.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1942: By Ely Culbertson.]

A declarer should not arbitrarily "place" a key card in a certain defender's hand unless success of his contract depends on that location. This is just another way of saying that wishful thinking should be avoided whenever possible. The sort of play made by the declarer in the following deal is entirely too common.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Rubber bridge.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	Pass	2 clubs	Pass
2 diamonds	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

The contract was supersound; indeed, I venture to say that many teams would reach [but not fulfill] a slam with the North-South hands.

West opened the heart five and declarer, after only a cursory inspection of dummy, automatically played low from that hand, confident that he would win three heart tricks by letting the lead ride to his own queen-jack. East spoiled his pleasant reverie by winning the trick with the king and promptly shifting to a low spade. Now, as may be seen, declarer was in serious difficulty—indeed, since the diamond and club finesses were offside he was completely stymied from this point on. He ducked the spade return [not that it mattered]; West won with the king and returned a spade, East's nine-spot forcing the ace. Now declarer tried the best percentage play by leading to dummy's diamond king and returning the club ten for a finesse. But West jumped on this trick with the club queen and played his remaining spade, which, of course, permitted East to run the spade suit and defeat the contract two tricks.

If this hand had occurred at match-point duplicate, declarer would have had a baffling problem to solve at the first trick. In that case it might not be good enough to insure the contract thru safety measures—extra tricks would be of paramount importance. Thus, at duplicate, declarer's reliance on the finesse of the heart king would not have been illogical. At rubber bridge, however, it was the height of folly. The obvious danger was that East might hold the heart king and immediately shift to South's weakness, spades, thereby establishing a number of spade tricks for his own side before South could count on running either of the minor suits. South was in no danger where hearts were concerned; even if he put up the ace, he was assured of a second stopper. That being so, it goes without saying that at rubber bridge, where the safety of the contract was the only consideration worthwhile, the heart ace should have been played and the clubs cleared immediately. Obviously this would have guaranteed the contract.

Bridge Problem.

The bid is no trump, and South leads. North and South are to win five tricks against any defense.

Solution: South leads the diamond ten. North discards the spade eight. If East wins and returns the diamond, South makes two diamonds, North discarding the spade queen and six. South leads a club, West and North duck. East leads the spade king, which South ducks. West must keep two clubs and shed a heart; so does North. The next spade South wins. What does West discard?

If East ducks the first diamond lead, South leads a club.

If East returns a club instead of the diamond at trick 2, West must cover or North will duck. North wins with club ace and leads spade six, which East cannot duck. South wins and leads diamond seven, following with a club, which gives North tricks in hearts and clubs.

The false opening is the club. West plays queen, North wins with ace and leads a spade. When South leads the diamond, East makes the queen and spade king, and gives South two diamond tricks. If North ducks club queen, West leads the king.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Aug. 3, 1894.

Dear Julia: I have just had a call from a charming young lady, Miss Grace Gassette, president of the Young Fortnightly club, and I sit here amazed at all I've been hearing of this youthful society's plans. Youthful it is in point of existence and youthful as to its membership. It was founded in 1890, Miss Gassette, daughter of Mr. Norman Gassette, a prominent citizen of Chicago, being its inspiration. She has, in a measure, done for the young women what Mrs. Kate Newell Doggett, who founded the Fortnightly, did for their elders. Miss Gassette felt that she and her contemporaries need to keep up their studies after leaving school, and so she has gathered around her the brightest girls of her acquaintance to form this new society. Like the Fortnightly, upon whose ideals it is formed, it is exclusive. One must, I judge, have brains, birth, and bullion to get into it. Some of the other officers and directors she mentioned are: Miss Mary Nixon, Florence Fargo, Helen Gilbert, Clara King, Florence Higginbotham, Adelaide Harding, well, that's all I recall. Their literary leader is Miss Elizabeth Risser.

Miss Grace Gassette.

The membership is limited to 75 and they have 50 enrolled. It has grown so rapidly that it now holds its meetings at the handsome Wellington hotel at the corner of Wabash avenue and Jackson street. At each meeting a member reads a paper on some literary topic, followed by discussion. In the preparation of her paper the essayist is assisted by the literary leader to the extent of having a list of references provided but in no other way. The research necessary gives the young ladies some mental exercise.

Martha doesn't belong to this young society, as she is older than most of the girls. I hope she will come into the older Fortnightly, and I think she will when she is invited. She was saying only a few weeks ago that she felt she needed to take up some serious studying, and I think she is about ready to accept membership in case she is asked. Of course, as a member I could propose her name, but I feel delicate about doing this. I believe some one else will think of it soon, and I'd rather it would come from some one else than Martha's mother. I wish Addie Hibbard Gregory would do it. Everyone loves and admires her so, any one she proposed would be unanimously elected to membership. We really should have new members coming in, to take the places of those who have died or have moved away. "People go to Heaven or to Heven-ston," is Will's way of putting it.

The Young Fortnightly has been addressed, Miss Gassette told me, by such distinguished women as Kate Field of Washington, D. C., Lillian Whiting, veteran newspaper woman, and Susan B. Anthony. [Doesn't her being invited to speak before these young women seem significant of their ideals? We shall have woman suffrage some day.] Another speaker has been Mrs. Charles Henrotin, president of the National Federation of Women's clubs.

We had hoped to be in Mackinac by this time, but Will has been detained in the city by an important law case which he feels needs his personal attention. It is pleasantly cool today, so I'm not complaining. He wants me to go without him, but I shouldn't enjoy it at all. I think he is pleased that I have stayed. We are a regular old Darby and Joan . . . not exactly tottering down the hill together, but a little inclined to forgo crowds and to sit quietly at home with books. Ever with love,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES

The Young Fortnightly, founded in 1890, merged with the Wednesday club and the two are now called the Contemporary club, meeting in the Fortnightly building, 120 Bellevue place. At last accounts, Grace Gassette was living in Paris.

Chicago Well Represented in New Hampshire

WHITE MOUNTAINS, N. H.

Despite transportation problems, many Chicago people again are finding their way to the White Mountains for their summer holidays, and last week-end brought a number of arrivals at the larger resorts. Each resort now has an interesting program of entertainment, including the great White Mountain favorite—putting matches—followed by tea. Tea itself is a glamorous festival these days, as hotels are rationed to 50 per cent of their usual stores of the beverage, hence one tea weekly is all most of them can manage. Sugar, too, enters into this problem, but up to now coffee still flows freely.

There has been great fun over the revival of napkin rings for linen conservation purposes at several resorts. While the printed slip of the paper napkin ring announces that guests still may have fresh napkins with each meal if they desire, the use of one napkin a day is greatly appreciated, and hotel patrons fall in line. Spalding Inn's men guests had a napkin folding contest recently with prizes for those who accomplished the feat most neatly. Bertrand Walker and Jesse Ambler of St. Louis were the winners.

• • •

Mrs. John T. Pirie of Lake Forest arrived at Spalding Inn, Whitefield, last Saturday and was accompanied for a stay of several weeks by Mrs. Laurence De Golyer of Chicago. With them also came Miss Margaret Enders and Mrs. Ralph H. James of Chicago. Mrs. Pirie joined her friend, Mrs. Frank H. Parsons of Brooklyn, N. Y., with whom she spent last season at the Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Love of Aurora, with their children, Suzanne and Richard, arrived to spend the month at the Mountain View House, Whitefield. Miss Helen R. Gilbert of Bellevue place also has arrived at the Mountain View, coming in time to enjoy the weekly putting party and tea on the terrace.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Leverone of Lake Shore drive, who were visitors at Crawford Notch last year, returned on Saturday and received a warm welcome from the many friends they had made while there. This resort is one of the most homelike places in the hills, where families return year after year.

Mrs. James McCahey and family of Chicago are expected this week at the Mount Washington hotel, Bretton Woods, for the remainder of the season.

• • •

Mrs. Henry Kern of Chicago is among those arriving during the coming week at the Mount Washington hotel, which is filled with a gay group of vacationers. This is the only resort where one may lunch al fresco, and daily on the terrace surrounding the Moon room, a semicircle dining place overlooking the Presidential Range and the deep cleft of Crawford Notch, large groups gather at the gay orange tables. The service is buffet.

Mrs. Ernest Poole and her group of Red Cross workers are busy these days, from Monday until Friday noon, at the Sunset Hill House workrooms in the former bachelor barracks. They are aiding the Littleton chapter in producing 48,000 surgical dressings for early delivery to the navy.

Bettina Bedwell Says:

No one group of American womanhood has such clear and firm ideas of what styles they want as college girls. People who concentrate on styles for the campus don't just dish 'em out. They send scouts to the campus to find out what's wanted by the girls, and then build their styles accordingly. It all comes from knowing your mind and refusing to budge from what you are convinced it best for your personal landscape in the way of clothes. Finding out ahead of time what the college girl will be willing to wear makes all the difference in what the makers of college girl clothes can sell and what they can't.

This coming fall the college girl wants quality, first and foremost, the surveys show. She will sacrifice other things before she will cut into her clothes budget, which averages from two to three hundred dollars, I am assured. She wants, first of all, a good suit, and she's equally firm about having a good coat. These two items she will, mostly, prefer to be classics.

Rugged Charm of Hot Springs Pleases Guests

By Cousin Eve.

HOT SPRINGS, VA.

The east is always heavily represented at Hot Cprings, Va. People from Baltimore, New York, Philadelphia, and Washington are in the majority, but this summer there's a large infiltration from Palm Beach. On their northward way a dozen families have stopped off, and joyously stayed on, with their cars, their dogs, their gay sports clothes.

The old regulars at the Homestead may draw long faces at bare legs, shorts, and slacks, but all the same they definitely add a picturesque note to the tennis lawn and are here to stay a while.

Among the innovations due to the Palm Beachites is a backgammon tournament, set for the coming week, after the manner of backgammon bouts at the Everglades club. Robert Appleton is the progenitor of the match.

• • •

The Palm Beach luncheon given by Col. and Mrs. LeRay Berdeau on Thursday at the Cascades Golf club was in honor of George Dobyne and Frederic Johnson, two leading citizens of Palm Beach. Mr. Johnson is president of the Bath and Tennis club, and Mr. Dobyne is the stepfather of John Charles Thomas, among other distinctions.

The Cascades club is a few miles down the winding mountain road and there was a hot blue haze that day over the golf links, and their frame of wooded hills. The clubhouse is a simple structure where golfers may have a good buffet lunch and take their breath at noon. Down in a hollow is an emerald green pool warranted to cool off the hottest visitor who jumps in. The water never rises above 60 and the entire layout at the Cascades club has a sort of rugged Scotch charm, which most golf addicts prefer to the more open Homestead course.

Mrs. Berdeau was looking like a little Persian princess in a white trousered suit, with a sort of long skirted basque. Her Persian chiffon headdress and pale green sandals to match were charming. At luncheon, the good news circulated about that at least three favorite clubs will be open at Palm Beach next season, the Seminole, the Everglades, and the Bath and Tennis. And Mr. Johnson was seen to lend an attentive ear to his hostess when she proposed a buffet of reducing foods, high in vitamins and low in calories, at the Bath and Tennis. Among the guests that day were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Appleton, Mrs. Addison Stillwell, her guest, Mrs. Seton Porter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dinsmore Tew, Mrs. Ralph Miller, Charles Monroe, and Laurens Hamilton.

This spot has been famous for decades, even generations, as a resort for honeymooners. This year there have been a score of army and navy men with their new wives, and this week Tommy Leiter arrived with his bride. She was Marion Oates of New York and is a black haired beauty with regular features and much verve. Tommy Leiter's grandmother, "Ma" Williams, has been here for some time, and has her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Stirling, with her as well as the young Leiters. Mrs. Stirling is the wife of our former envoy to Ireland and is an extra tall, slim woman, with gray hair, and the ruddy tan of a golfer.

Several diplomatic wives here this summer with their children run to exceptional height. Ray Atherton, former minister to Denmark and now in the state department, married a Miss Tooker, who is extremely tall and most attractive. Her sister, Mrs. Franklin M. Gunther, widow of the late American envoy to Rumania, is here in deep mourning. She, too, is a woman svelte, exceedingly tall, and with her sister is staying at the nearby Cascades inn.

Apropos of diplomats and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Armour have vanished from the scene after a short stay, and the rumor is that the American ambassador to Argentina will not return to Buenos Aires. He is said to be retiring from the service altogether. Mrs. Armour, who is a Russian by birth, is slim and vivacious, and she has lived long enough in South America to dress mostly in black, in plain, demure style.

• • •

There aren't as many South Americans here this year as last. For the moment the Espils of Argentina are in Washington, and the Argentine minister, Don Rodolfo Garcia, is here with an extremely pretty wife. Also the Peruvian councilor, Señor Juan Chavez, and Mme. Chavez are lively members of the colony. They speak fluent English and were among the 75 players who signed up for the bridge tournament Sunday night.

Charles Lochridge, the bridge expert, has discovered that people are fed up with the duplicate game and side step whenever one is announced. A duplicate game may trap you for a whole, long, boring evening. But in the bridge tournament the action is speedy. On Sunday night the tables were laid in the vast Empire room, names of partners were written on a big blackboard, and Mr. Lochridge auctioned off the players so well that one felt like a slave sold down the river. Six hundred and some odd dollars were raised by the bids, and opponents were drawn by lot. The names of the top players in Virginia were spread over the blackboard. Mrs. Breckenridge Long, wife of the assistant secretary of state, had Mrs. Ray Atherton for a partner. John G. Sachs, reputedly the best player among men on the premises, and Mrs. Lochridge were paired and Mme. Andor de Hertelendy and Mrs. John Newbold of Philadelphia. Garrard Winston, who has just come from New York, is a brilliant player and lasted well into the finals, and Mrs. Robert Appleton and Mrs. O'Malley Keyes, who are renowned for the excellence of their games, were eliminated among the first. It proved to be largely a scrimmage of luck, however well the winners played.

The cash awards went to Mrs. Seton Porter and George L. Richards. The runnersup were Mrs. Breckenridge Long and Mrs. Atherton, and a consolation prize was given to Mme. de Hertelendy and Mrs. Newbold.

Mrs. O'Malley Keyes has one of the cottages for the season, and this irrepressible Irish woman is supremely happy for the moment. Her youngest son, Vivian, a British naval officer, is here after a period of duty on convoy service. It's an odd thing, but one goes out to luncheon and hears quite openly from the British about disasters at sea—they tell you of 10 ships lost to submarines off Iceland out of a convoy of 45 vessels. Mostly they have scotch aboard, woolens, and men!

Young Vivian O'Malley Keyes is a tall, splendidly set up blond young man, very cheerful and calm. His handsome brothers and sisters are famous for the brilliant marriages they have made within the British realm.

Of the many distinguished matrons who parade to the movie theater of an evening not one has more attention than Mrs. Henry R. Rea, who is here with her family from Pittsburgh. Mrs. Rea shares with Mrs. Stotesbury the dual throne of Queen of Palm Beach in the winter, and she is a handsome woman, highly vivid and intelligent. When her husband, who was president of a great railroad, died, his widow succeeded in the control of this vast organization, and became the financial as well as a social queen in Pennsylvania.

The most admired infant who toddles along the veranda of a hot day is Christine Long Wilcox, granddaughter of the Breck Longs and only daughter of their only daughter, Christine. It wasn't so very far back, when the Longs had the embassy at Rome, that Christine was a debutante with a line of young Italian dukes and princes in the foreground. Now she is Mrs. Wilcox and the 20 month old Christine is an enchanting little doll with dark curls, big brown eyes, and a way with her!

Among the New York arrivals of the week are Mr. and Mrs. Willis Booth and Herbert Pratt, president of Pratt institute. From Illinois Mrs. John Ralston of Dixon has brought and young Lucile, for a whirl. Mrs. Ralston, unlike many other handsome young matrons of the day, gives her time to management of a large war industry, and has been a business executive ever since her widowhood seven years ago.

On Sunday night there was another of the celebrated beefsteak suppers in the open, when the whole glade was filled with picnic tables, and we trekked out thru the formal gardens. Two or three tree toads were giving a concert that night in the wisteria arbor, the young many colored dahlias were just showing their faces in the parterres, and the fragrance of box was like strong incense.

There were the buffets, hot and cold, the iced tea and coffee, the marvelous steaks, broiled chicken done over charcoal, the timely fruits, ices, and cheese. Where else in the world today are there picnics like unto that? And after supping to sit a while in the dusk and watch the stars find their way into the vault above. Sunday evenings could be dull, but they aren't. There is a concert in the lobby for those who like concerts, piano, violin, and cello, and ofttimes a vocal artist. But now the open season for tournaments is on, and Sunday night is a busy time. There are no movies and no dancing on Sunday. The guests turn out in great force at church Sunday morning, and there are three crowded services, Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Roman Catholic.

State Legion Auxiliary Is to Convene

Mrs. Mark W. Murrill. [Acme Photo.]

With but one purpose before them, and that the furthering of the war effort, delegates of the Illinois department of the American Legion auxiliary will meet in annual convention Saturday, Aug. 22, in Peoria. Their three day conference will draw Mrs. Mark W. Murrill from her home in Scituate, Mass., on her first official visit to this state since she was elected national president of the auxiliary last September in Milwaukee, Wis. Mrs. Murrill will address the convention on the second day of its meeting.

Her elevation to the presidency of the auxiliary placed Mrs. Murrill at the head of an organization representing 520,000 women. She brought to office 21 years of experience in Legion and auxiliary service.

The election held unusual interest for the Legionnaires as well as for their ladies, for it was the first time that a woman, who also was a Legion member, attained to the auxiliary's highest office.

• • •

When her husband and "the boys" get together to swap experiences of the first World war, Mrs. Murrill can match them with stories of her own "hitch" in the navy. Not yet out of her teens, Mrs. Murrill, then Mary Whitacre, was at her brother's heels to enlist when America declared war. She was assigned to naval intelligence, working from the first naval district's headquarters in Boston. Her transcripts of confidential reports on spies and saboteurs were daily dispatches to Washington. She had the rank of chief petty officer.

Mary Whitacre and Mark Murrill met on board the Scythia in 1927 when the second AEF returned to France for its convention in Paris. Shortly after their return, Miss Whitacre became Mrs. Murrill. The Murrills' have one daughter, Mary Elizabeth, who is 10 years old.

• • •

A charter member of the American Legion post of Roxbury, Mass., Mrs. Murrill has been active in both the Legion and auxiliary from the time of their organization. It was she who organized the Roxbury unit of the auxiliary.

She was one of the organizers of the Suffolk county district in Massachusetts, and served for two years as district director.

With the organization of the Massachusetts department of the auxiliary, Mrs. Murrill was secretary for seven years, later became vice president, and finally department president, which office she held for three years. For two years she represented the Massachusetts department on the national executive committee. In the national organization Mrs. Murrill headed the membership committee, was rehabilitation chairman representing the New England states, and supervised publication of the auxiliary's national magazine.

Illinois Garden Club Will Have All Day Picnic

With box lunches tucked under their arms, Garden Club of Illinois members will be headed early tomorrow for an all day picnic at historic Stone Gate lodge, Mrs. Louis E. Leverone's country estate on Half Day road, west of Highland Park. Mrs. Leverone is a member of the club's board of directors.

Mrs. Louis E. Leverone. [Casebeer Photo.]

This being the monthly meeting, the board has scheduled a conference with Mrs. Raymond Knotts, the president, for 11 o'clock. In the afternoon, Mrs. Bernice T. Van der Vries, Illinois congresswoman and co-chairman of the women's division of the state council of defense, will appear as guest speaker to give a talk on "Conservation and War Work." The program committee also will present Mrs. Mahlon Ogden Bradley of Highland Park in a flower arrangement demonstration, and Miss Jane Conrad of Winnetka, who will show flower and garden pictures. Working at a marble table in the formal garden, Mrs. Bradley will arrange bouquets for summer.

Plans for the day include walks and rides over the estate. The hostess' contribution to the picnic lunch will be a beverage and dessert.

Highland Park Garden guild members, whose president is Mrs. Dean McCormick, are to be co-hostesses. Anticipating that with tire and gasoline conservation being strictly adhered to by many, most of the members coming by train, the guild will have a country wagon at the North Western station in Highland Park to convey them to Stone Gate.

Famed Kimball Collection at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

The Art institute has a number of famous collections, and much of the value and beauty of the museum clusters around them. The W. W. Kimball collection is noted for its brilliant examples of English painting. The group of pictures came to the institute by bequest from Mrs. W. W. Kimball, who died in June, 1921. Her husband, William Wallace Kimball, died Dec. 14, 1904. He was born in Maine and grew up there, clerking in a store, teaching school, and finally trying his hand at traveling salesmanship. Hearing of a growing city in the west called Chicago he visited it, caught a vision of what its development might be, and settled down. In 1857 he became a dealer in organs and eventually he put on the market the well known piano which bears his name.

In 1865 Mr. Kimball married and his home at 18th street and Prairie avenue became noted for its magnificence and for its art treasures. It is odd today to pause in passing and reflect upon how Chicago itself has changed. Prairie avenue and those numbered streets which were the fashionable residential quarters of a half century ago are in quite different circumstances today. Meanwhile, the paintings which Mrs. Kimball was most instrumental in collecting are carrying on both for her and her husband, and for that Chicago of another era.

In 1905 Mrs. Kimball bought the Van Marcke "Castle in Hilly Country"; in 1912 the fine "Wooded Landscape," by Hobbema, the Dutch painter, was bought; in 1913 Rembrandt's famous "Portrait of My Father" was added to the collection. Two years later the beautiful "Lady Sarah Bunbury," by Sir Joshua Reynolds, became an outstanding acquisition. The finest Constable in existence, the dark, romantic "Stoke-by-Nayland," a typical English countryside, was purchased in this period.

The only important Turner in the Art institute collections is installed in the Kimball room. It is the celebrated "Dutch Fishing Boats"; in it is all the enchanting color for which Turner won world-wide recognition. A "Turner" sunset is still something more than a manner of speech. Those who know the depth and scope of Turner's palette visualize a sky flaming with a hundred drifting, harmonizing colors. Skies and ships were the two subjects on which Turner built his reputation.

Two interesting paintings by Gainsborough hang in the room. One is the famous portrait of the "Countess of Bristol" and the other is a less pretentious work, "Skirts of the Woods," a charming landscape. Sir Thomas Lawrence in his portrait of "Mrs. Wolff" shows to what an engaging extent a casual pose, set off by a dashing color combination, can enhance the beauty of a lovely woman. Another stunning portrait of a lady is the gentle "Lady Francis Russell," by George Romney.

In gallery 12 of the print department of the Art institute is an attractive and interesting exhibit of prints in color and black and white which cover in a bright and vivid way the changes in the character of London and Paris from the 17th century to, let us say, 1939. An intriguing direct comparison between London and Paris is given in the lithographs of Thomas Shotter Boys, whose seven views of each city are hung on opposite walls.

There is humor in the exhibit. James Gillray brings a smile to our lips with his colored etching. "Very Slippery Weather," and its daté, Feb. 10, 1808, does not put it one moment behind the times. Rowlandson, who had more than his fair share of the genius that sees the funny side of life and who also was one of the most brilliant water colorists England ever produced, is represented by two crowded, full of human interest prints presented by Mrs James Ward Thorne. Not to be outdone is John Leech, a great English draftsman of the 19th century, whose "Oh! The Merry, Merry Month of May" gives us figures dancing in the rain around the Maypole.

During the 19th century in the industrial revolution, London became one of the great ports of the world. Six prints by James McNeill Whistler demonstrate the fact with convincing detail. And not to forget one of the sights on a busy London street, at least before the present conditions and it may be true now [in all probability is], the famous London Bobby, in American slang "cop," there is an intriguing water color by Phil May, "Tramp and Bobby."

The exhibition is rich in examples of French life in the last century. Charlet's lithograph of "The Lithograph Seller" brings a nostalgic pang as one remembers the eternal shoppers in the Quai stalls. "Terrace of a Café, Night," by Vuillard depicts the sparkle of a night life which has now been quenched by a German curfew. If one can forget today and look back a number of years there is amusement to be found in the clever Daumier records of the dilemma of the pedestrian in traffic in the 1850s. His "How Convenient for Hurried People That They Have Enlarged the Streets" brings a laugh that is deepened to a chuckle at the sight of Toulouse-Lautrec's "Automobilist."

Several cases in the gallery display illustrated books of London and Paris of various periods. All in all, the exhibit is well worth seeing.

Louis Cheskin, who is a recognized Chicago artist and a well known teacher, has a good word to say for the Loop Art center, 429 South Wabash avenue, which has been reorganized into a coöperative type of art school with fees within the reach of all students and a staff of well known instructors. There are courses in drawing, painting, sculpture, interior decorating, and photography and a Sunday morning sketch class. The Loop Art center is built along the lines of the Roycroft shop which was conducted a few years ago by the writer, Elbert Hubbard, at East Aurora, N. Y. A similar atmosphere of combined school and shop is the goal of the present Chicago enterprise. According to Mr. Cheskin it offers many opportunities to the student artist.

Florence White Williams, noted Chicago landscape painter, has sent out the interesting news that the Hyde Park school has recently bought a painting of hers. The Parent-Teacher organization made the purchase to make a pair, which will hang in the school social room. Last year Miss Williams' painting was bought by the school as a memorial to Miss White, its former dean of women.

Florence White Williams is studying this summer at the Art institute [even accomplished painters have something to learn] and a little later she plans a painting trip not too far from Chicago. Miss Williams has a most attractive studio gallery at 1114 East 50th street, one of the pleasantest places in town at which to drop in for a few minutes' talk and a glimpse of good pictures.

Dr. Max Thorek, Chicago surgeon and distinguished photographer, was awarded first prize for photography at the recent exhibit of the American Physicians Art association held in connection with the annual convention of the American Medical association at Atlantic City.

A gold cup for the best sculpture was awarded to another Chicago surgeon, Dr. Adolph M. Brown. Dr. Brown also has created a number of latex masks for patients with facial disfigurements and his work has particular application now in view of our prospective wounded who with his help may have injuries caused by war or accident corrected in a lifelike manner when surgical treatment is inadvisable, or for interim treatment.

"MY SON IN SERVICE"

Every Speck of Celery Serves a Kitchen Purpose

Every speck of celery can be put to some flavorful or crunchy use.

As soon as celery comes to the kitchen, scrub in cold water. If it is wilted, soak 10 minutes in very cold water. This will help dislodge dirt as well as freshen.

Cut off tops and outside leaves, dry, and store in covered jar for later seasoning of soups, stews, and sauces. Chop the freshest leaves and add them to meat loaves, escalloped mixtures, or meat sauces.

Dice the coarse stalks, cover with cold water, and simmer covered for 10 minutes and you have a delicious, nutritious stock for soups, stews, potpies, or sauce blends. You can store this celery and stock covered for several days in a refrigerator.

Scene Is Set for Festival Lunch Friday

By Irene Steyskal.

The scene is set, to the last polished detail, for the 1942 Chicago Music Festival luncheon. On the festival director's desk, neatly typed, is the final draft of the program, the diagram for the speakers' table, the luncheon menu, a trinity of sheets that fairly emit an aura with their promise of brilliancy.

A glance at the program discovers that more than 100 persons will participate in the luncheon program next Friday in the Grand ballroom of the Palmer House. The list of 50 names for the speakers' table is a veritable "who's who" in the music, military, and club circles of the Chicago metropolitan area.

• • •

Starred names in the musical contingent this year are Dr. Rudolph Ganz, piano virtuoso, composer, conductor, musical educator, and noted wit, and Mme. Maria Kurenko, famous Russian soprano.

Philip Maxwell, the festival director, has enlisted Edward Barry and Cecil Smith, music and drama critics of THE TRIBUNE, to present the two special guests. Mr. Barry will introduce Dr. Ganz and Mr. Smith Mme. Kurenko.

Flanking these names in the musical contingent are a score of other celebrities, Nicolai Malko, Edith Mason, Henry Weber, Marion Claire, Edgar Nelson, Anna Kruetgen, to enumerate a few.

• • •

Clubwomen and the musical groups will see the familiar faces of many of their leaders at the speakers' table: Mrs. Preston L. Wettaw, Mrs. Charles S. Clark, Mrs. J. W. Heylman, Mrs. J. Royden Keith, Margery Maxwell Moorehead, Dr. Helen Howe, Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley, Mrs. Franklin M. Miller, Mrs. James G. Shakman, and others.

Mrs. Charles S. Clark. [Maurice Photo.]

Like the festival, to which it is a prelude, the luncheon this year is to be pitched in a military key, and the speakers' table will have visible evidence of this in the presence of Maj. Gen. George Grunert, commanding officer of the 6th corps area, and Mrs. Grunert, and Adm. John Downes, commandant of the 9th naval district, and Mrs. Downes.

• • •

To 30 trim young Scottish lassies from Milwaukee, the Kilty Girls' Drum and Trumpet corps, and their director, Frank C. Hoffman, will go the honor of posting colors for the 1942 festival luncheon. The invocation, a prayer composed during the first World war, will be given by Chaplain Erling C. Grevstad of Fort Sheridan. Capt. F. E. Hammond will be here with his Wing chorus from Chanute field at Rantoul and the spruce young men will sing the song of the army air corps and a Stephen Foster melody.

Capt. F. E. Hammond.

The festival luncheon guests will hear a solo on the Irish harp by Melville Clark, marimba and vibraharp selections by Clair Omar Musser, director of the festival marimba orchestra, and little Nancy Rose Zeller, one of Chicago's youngest prima donnas, who will sing the sprightly song, "We Did It Before, and We Can Do It Again."

• • •

For those cherishing nostalgic memories of close harmony quartets, the Johnson Sisters' quartet, which claims the distinction of being the only female barber shop ensemble, will sing some of the old time favorites. Carl Craven and Frank Bennett, who have been identified with the festival since its beginning, again will lead in assembly singing.

All reservations for the ballroom have been taken. There are tables still to be had, however, in the foyer.

LIVING IN WATERBURY, CONN.

Mrs. John A. Murnane, who is the former Esther Jane Springer, daughter of Mrs. George Ward Springer of Wilmette. She will make her home in Waterbury, Conn. Mr. Murnane is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Francis Murnane, of Waterbury. The wedding took place on June 30.

Women in War Work

—By India Moffett—

So much has been written about the need of typists, stenographers, and nurses in the present emergency that women who are specialists in other lines may be wondering how they can utilize their talents. The civil service commission has opportunities for women who have had technical training, particularly in science. A woman who has such training and is interested in a civil service assignment for the emergency should inquire at the information desk in room 1105 new postoffice building.

Women chemists are in demand. The war has created opportunities for them in navy yards, arsenals, and other government laboratories. The junior chemist receives $2,000 a year.

Applicants must have completed a full four year college course including or supplemented by 30 semester hours in chemistry. An alternative is offered to college seniors who show that they expect to complete the required college course within four months of the date of receipt of their application. No experience is necessary for this appointment, but it is desirable, of course. Duties of the job are implied in the name. The form announcement reads this way: "Duties—Under immediate supervision to assist in or to perform research, investigative, or other work in some branch of chemistry.

• • •

Women who would like to apply for appointments as radio workers under the classification of junior repairman trainee also may file at the new postoffice building. This appointment would mean training and employment in the signal corps, 6th corps area, war department. Opportunities will open as training schools are enlarged.

The training will include advanced instruction in the fundamentals of overhaul, maintenance, repair, and inspection of miscellaneous signal corps equipment, including radio, telephone, and telegraph, power and light equipment. The instruction takes eight hours a day, and trainees will not be permitted to hold any other job.

Technical experience or the possession of a license to operate an amateur radio station are classified as acceptable entrance prerequisites. Also acceptable are educational preparation such as one year of resident study in a school of engineering, a six months' technical radio course, the successful completion of a United States engineering defense course, or the completion of a technical radio correspondence course.

This is a six months' training course with pay, and the pay is $1,440 per year.

• • •

There also is competitive examination for process inspector, gas mask manufacture and assembly. Applicants must have the following qualifications: Three months of experience in the inspection of articles fabricated from metals, canvas, or other heavy textiles or leather; or three months as a production worker in the fabrication and/or assembly of metal textile, or leather articles; or any time equivalent to the first two.

In this work, an underinspector receives 54 cents an hour, and a minor inspector receives 42 cents. Any first or second class postoffice has application blanks for this job.

Women who can qualify also may apply for the following open examinations: Chief engineering aid at $2,600; principal engineering aid, $2,300; senior engineering aid, $2,000; engineering aid, $1,800, and assistant engineering aid, $1,620.

All applicants must show that they have been graduated from a standard four year high school or have successfully completed 14 units of high school study. Persons who do not meet the high school requirement, but who are otherwise qualified, may take a general test of two hours to fulfill the high school prerequisite.

• • •

These positions are under professional guidance and are to perform subprofessional engineering work such as assisting in surveys, the plotting of survey notes, the performing of engineering computations, the setting up and care of laboratory apparatus, the making of engineering tests and experiments, and related work as assigned.

Employment would be in the various government agencies in the states of Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin. Those who have the minimum education requirement of high school or 14 units of study, must have had engineering experience from two to six years. However, education may be substituted for experience, year for year, up to four years of college work.

Women have heretofore been discouraged as engineering students. Now is the golden opportunity for those who have been "guided" into history or English majors when their real preferences were science and mathematics. The concentrated defense training courses being offered under the United States bureau of education in Chicago colleges can help women to fulfill educational requirements quickly.

Announce Betrothal of Miss Ella Trone Hawkes

Mr. and Mrs. William Hawkes of Oak Park announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ella Trone Hawkes, to Lieut. David Farrar Mitchell, son of the late Dr. and Mrs. L. D. Mitchell of Arkansas City, Kas. Miss Hawkes attended the University of Chicago and was graduated from the Presbyterian hospital school of nursing. Lieut. Mitchell was graduated this year from the University of Illinois Dental school. He is stationed at an army field in the southwest.

Annabeth Hamity Engaged to Ensign Hilliard Graham

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hamity of 6914 Oglesby avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Annabeth, to Ensign Hilliard S. Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard A. Graham of 5112 Kimbark avenue. Miss Hamity was graduated from the University of Chicago. Ensign Graham, a graduate of Oberlin college, is an instructor at the naval reserve midshipmen's school at Northwestern university.

Miss Donnelly Reports:

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Arline Judge, film actress, reminds us that Balzac, the great French novelist, once said that "no woman has true beauty until she reaches the age of 30; only then has she understanding and poise, as well as youthful loveliness." "This impressed me so much," says the screen star, "that ever since I read it, at the age of 18, I have been working toward the goal of achieving fullest good looks by that age."

The slimly curved little actress, with soft brown hair and eyes, who has two handsome sons, insists that the secret of youth comes mostly from within. "To stay young," she insists, "you must either be born with humor and curiosity or you must realize their impjortance and develop them. Like youth, you must have faith in life and a willingness to take chances. And you should have a purpose for living, either ambition for yourself or for others."

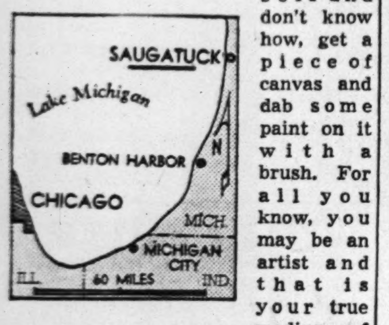
Like to Paint? Maybe You're a Real Artist!

By Freida Zylstra.

(Pictures in Roto Section.)

If you have something to say and words fail you, or if you want to express yourself and don't know how, get a piece of canvas and dab some paint on it with a brush. For all you know, you may be an artist and that is your true medium of expression. If you have a spark of ability, take it to a summer school of art and let one of the instructors discover you. Remember: "All passes; art alone endures." That motto, painted on the wooden ox-head gatepost, welcomes you as you enter the Art Institute of Chicago's summer school of painting at Ox Bow inn, Saugatuck, Mich.



After you have been at the school for a few days you will discover that most of the artists there are just people like yourself. Maybe you're there to spend two weeks in a completely different field and atmosphere and with people whose interests are far removed from shop talk at the office.

There was one young, pretty secretary who had spent 50 weeks working in an advertising agency. She wanted to spend this year's vacation in a different way without doing too much traveling on her precious auto tires, such as she and the other girls had done on previous vacations.

She didn't know whether she was seriously interested in art. She thought if she signed up for a two weeks' beginner's course in the summer school it would be a nice sample of what's expected of artists. Then she would be better prepared to decide about more extensive courses later.

At first she felt very much restrained and inhibited at her attempts at painting. She joined the big outdoor class in the shade of the pine tree and sat down on the grass, the way some of the other students did, with their legs folded and water color paintbooks on their laps. Others were standing in front of professional looking easels, but she thought if she used one of those her tender expressions in paint would be too exposed and conspicuous to the trained eyes of the other artists.

• • •

They were all supposed to paint the same empty green canoe, overturned on the water's edge. They could include the tree, a little water, and bright sand, if they wanted to. She didn't make her first attempt very elaborate, figuring the less she had in the picture the fewer mistakes she could make.

The brush didn't work so well at the start, and the combinations of water colors she mixed were a constant surprise to her.

When the class was dismissed the students were told to save their work and hand it in for criticism at the weekly print concourse, where masters of the brush would analyze each print and tell the class what they considered a pleasing composition or a harmonious color combination.

Our secretary dreaded that first criticism, as most beginners do. She thought if she hid her picture of the contorted, yellow, blue-green canoe and the bluish black water and sky [she was afraid one could very well do for the other], no one would miss it. She tucked the small picture behind a huge one that was leaning against the exhibit board. It went unnoticed until the last, when the instructor asked if she had nothing to show for the day's work. She made herself and her picture more conspicuous than ever when she had to say she thought it was under the big one.

But the instructor, realizing how sensitive the beginners can be, had only encouraging and complimentary remarks to make—once he learned which was top and bottom of the picture.

The summer school was established as a branch of the institute in 1910. For 30 years its popularity has been increasing.

The school is situated in the kind of a spot you'd choose for a three months' summer home or camp. High, wooded dunes and windswept ones, water lilies afloat on the fresh water lagoon, tall pine trees, and gnarled tree trunks make for a perfect natural setting that is an inspiration to the budding artists as well as the full fledged ones. You see, nature and art are so closely related that you must learn to understand both of them to appreciate either.

Is it true that barbed wire has been strung along the beaches of southern Maine? R. F. B.

This rumor is one of the many false reports that have been circulated regarding conditions on the Atlantic seacoast. Maine's beaches are having a nightly dim-out; otherwise, conditions there are the same as before the war. There are no barbed wire entanglements.

LILIES OF THE FIELD.

Pa Porte, Ind., July 19.—To the Travel Editor: In THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of July 19, Frederic Babcock wrote of his trip thru the middle west under the heading: "Nearer Fields as Alluring as Farther Ones."

I know part of the trip he took, and I have learned from my own observations that there are a great many beautiful places close to home.

Mr. Babcock told how the Illinois countryside in July was "alive with tiger lilies and hollyhocks." I believe he was mistaken in one particular. They were not tiger lilies; they probably were Tawny Day lily fulva. There are thousands of them around here.

"WHERE'S WELDER WATSON?"

"WAR WORK IN WYOMING—TOOK A Super Coach West!"

WELDER WATSON wields a powerful weapon in this war of production. And Super Coach takes him where that weapon is needed. If you, too, require Super Coach service in doing your part, you will find the "going" better by following these suggestions: (1) Plan trips well in advance; go during midweek if possible. (2) Consult your bus agent to find out which schedules are least crowded. (3) Get tickets early. Limit yourself to one traveling bag, if possible.

Door County Golfers Open Tournament

EPHRAIM, WIS.

The event to which all Door county golfers look forward each summer has been scheduled for this coming week with the qualifying rounds for the annual Peninsula Park tournament to be played tomorrow. Enthusiasts from various villages in the peninsula will participate in the different classes for both men and women. Owen Carl, who comes with his family to Fish Creek each summer from Kansas for his vacation, will be entering to defend the championship. J. Spencer Gould of Kirkwood, Mo., a runner-up in previous years, will again be present to provide keen competition in the championship class.

Mrs. Gould, winner in the women's division for the last three years and her sister, Mrs. Henry Chomeau, former runner-up, will also be participating again this season. Mr. and Mrs. Chester D. Tripp, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Sanford, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bentley are among other Ephraim summer residents regularly seen tramping up and down the hills of this woodland bordered course.

Last week a mixed two ball foursome tournament provided fun and thrills for peninsula park golfers with Mrs. Anderson Payne, formerly Miss Helen Worrall, woman's champion here a few years ago, and Charles Clemenson winning the honors.

• • •

Honors in another sport, sailing, were won last week-end during the annual Ephraim regatta when Charles Butler and Warren Davis Jr., representing the Ephraim club by virtue of having earned the highest number of points in previous races this season, succeeded in keeping the trophy here in spite of keen competition furnished by the best sailors from the Menominee and Marinette, Fish Creek, and Escanaba clubs.

Enthusiastic praise was given Miss Margaret Brown, who has been coming north from Chicago to spend week-ends with her uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Sanborn, for bringing her boat in second in the Vail cup race with the assistance of Mr. Sanborn as crew.

Malcolm Vail added greatly to the success of the regatta by keeping the crowd well informed thru a loud speaking system of the progress of events thruout the day.

The "Stowaway" placed second in the three legs of the Escanaba cruising race in which it was entered, losing first honors by only a matter of seconds. Mr. and Mrs. Warren Davis were aboard during the race as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Horween. At the Menominee stopover, Marion Horween and Carol Yeomans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yeomans of Winnetka, joined the "crew" for the remainder of the race, having come to that point by train. Marion completed her summer school course this week and is bringing Miss Martha Franey of St. Louis to Ephraim this week-end to be her guest for the balance of the summer. Mrs. Horween, the girls, and Mr. and Mrs. Davis will drive north next week to join Mr. Horween for a Georgian bay cruise. The latter left Tuesday for an extended sailing trip with his two sons, Ralph and Freddie, Arthur Hutchinson of Lake Forest and Charles Butler of Madison, aboard their 54 foot ketch.

• • •

Activities for those who have interests in other than sport fields continue to be provided by the Peninsula Arts association. The flower show being held this week-end at the Peninsula Players outdoor theater is the result of the coöperation of many of the most ardent gardeners in this area including Mrs. Herbert A. MacPherson, Mrs. Donald F. Boynton, Mrs. Carl T. Wilson, formerly Miss Katherine Scherstrom, Mrs. Roy E. Hanson, Mrs. Elizabeth Mudd, Mrs. W. H. Ryan, Miss Anne Walton, and Mrs. Arthur Byfield. The association is again sponsoring a children's art class. Mrs. George Martin of Evanston has been assisting in the organization of the work, which is being supervised by Miss Ruth Leatherman of Hinsdale, a Sister bay summer resident.

LIEUTENANT AND BRIDE LIVING IN WEST

Lieut. and Mrs. David M. Sharer Jr., who were married on July 27 in the Country Church of the City, will make their home on the west coast, where Lieut. Sharer is stationed. Women Voters on Record for High Tax Rate

The echoes of Pearl Harbor still were loudly reverberating in the nation's ears and most of the country was only beginning to grasp the portent, when leaders of the League of Women Voters met to take stock of their organization's resources and determine how they might best be converted to war service.

It was plain, from history, that a war put the machinery of government to a crucial test, and that final victory or failure was largely determined by the efficiency or inefficiency of the operation of government in the emergency. The women concluded that their nonpartisan league for good government was engaged in one of the most important jobs that faced the nation; their blueprint for war service was drawn and ready, calling only for intensification and expansion of effort.

• • •

That meeting set the league's eye in unblinking vigilance, for the duration, on the federal congress, on the state assembly, and on the council of local government.

In the figurative optic of the national league, bent upon Washington, patience has been diminishing and disapproval growing during the last several months for those congressmen and senators who have been warily pussyfooting their way on the 1942 tax issue. If they were listening last week, they heard a sharp rebuke from league headquarters.

As the senate finance committee took over jurisdiction of the tax bill, which the lower house had pared down by 2½ billion dollars from the treasury's figure, the league bluntly charged the senate with responsibility for an "adequate" tax measure. League spokesmen declared in favor of a tax bill even greater than the 8 billion 700 million in revenues which the treasury recommended. Heavy taxes would be "cheaper in the long run" than inflation, they asserted.

• • •

League views were set forth in a leaflet for national distribution under the heading, "Next Year's Taxes—Will They Be Adequate? It's Up to the Senate!"

In its broadside the league charges that both the house bill and treasury program are seriously defective in the personal income tax provisions. "Neither set of proposals recognizes the need for putting a brake on inflation by taxing away a large part of the money people have in excess of what can be spent on the diminishing supply of goods and services" is the argument advanced in the leaflet.

Should congress fail to develop the income tax "on an adequate scale," league members foresee that a large federal sales tax of 10 per cent, or even a higher rate, "may very soon be necessary."

• • •

Indications of growing opposition to the withholding tax plan in the senate has spurred the Illinois league to new efforts in its public campaign for the speedy collection of next year's tax.

The withholding tax, as voted by the house of representatives, would require the taxpayer to meet his entire 1942 tax obligation next year and would take, in addition, 5 per cent of his 1943 income; in 1944 10 per cent of his taxable income would be withheld, and he would pay also the remainder of his 1943 obligation; in 1945 the system would be in full operation, with 10 per cent of taxable income being withheld, and the taxpayer being required to meet his full tax bill for the year.

Mrs. Florence Fifer Bohrer, president of the Illinois league, explains that "the League of Women Voters believes the objective should be taxes sufficient to meet, to the fullest possible extent, the cost of the war and to lighten the postwar debt, and sufficient taxes to decrease the inflationary funds now in the hands of the public to spend."

• • •

The objection that the withholding tax would be an expensive tax to administer, Mrs. Bohrer maintains, is offset by the much greater amount which it is estimated a sales tax would cost to administer. "With the tax bill 2½ billion dollars short of the minimum required, we continue to believe the lowered exemptions and the withholding tax are necessary if we are to avoid the sales tax," Mrs. Bohrer asserts.

On the state front the Illinois league is renewing its health drive. "Health, as usual," the leaders declare, falls short of the war program. All member leagues are being urged to arouse the public to the need for county public health units.

• • •

In a newly published pamphlet the league discloses that tuberculosis in the state has been increasing 10 per cent since 1940, that syphilis shows an increase of 13 per cent in the first quarter of 1942, and that smallpox is not adequately controled.

The Illinois league and other state groups are seeking enabling legislation which will permit units of public health to be set up in the counties where they are most needed. Mrs. Bohrer and Mrs. Edward Nix represent the league on the executive committee of the state-wide public health committee which is directing the campaign.

Hollyhocks Add Color to Charlevoix

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

There's an old New England saying that where hollyhocks grow there are ancestors. When you stop to think about it, it is a nice thought. One associates hollyhocks with spool beds, gateleg tables, home made bread and cookies and children and kindliness.

To a New Englander the Little Traverse Bay region is probably regarded as "backwoods country." Nevertheless, there must have been a goodly number of charming ancestors, judging from the gorgeous array of hollyhocks. Nowhere else do they grow in such profusion and in such colors, ranging from creamy white to the various shades of pink and into deep crimson. They grow wild around every old farmhouse, every cottage, every fence, and seem a fitting background to homes that have been lived in and to the gracious living still to be found here.

Nowhere is the gracious living so exemplified nor do the hollyhocks grow in such riotous profusion as at the Chicago club with its lovely and spacious summer homes and beautiful gardens.

• • •

Thursday was Mrs. Solomon A. Smith's birthday. In the afternoon she gave a most charming tea in her cottage but didn't tell any one of the occasion. However, the cottagers had found it out, and when Mr. and Mrs. Smith went to the club for their dinner they were greeted by their many friends. In the center of the table was an ocetillo cactus and in the center was a miniature house, a replica of the cover of Mrs. Smith's well known and delightful book, "The House in the Tree." A lighted piece of punk formed the chimney so real smoke issued from it, and all around the cactus were miniature bunnies and all sorts of small animals. And of course, there was the traditional birthday cake.

Numerous children are at the club now, and the beach is a gay scene with all the activities. Mrs. John Stuart's daughter, Mrs. George A. Poole Jr., has arrived with her two sons, George IV. and Shumway. Mrs. Harris Whiting has her daughter and son-in-law and their children, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Abbott Jr., and Joan and John Hagley, with her for the month. Mrs. James H. Douglas Jr. is at the club with her son, Robert and his friend, Laurie Robbins. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ives and their son, Timothy, will spend the rest of the season at the club. Mrs. James Ovendorff and Mrs. Robert G. McGann of Lake Forest, are also guests at the club.

• • •

Out on the lawn at the Dr. Eugene Talbot's cottage is a magnificent stone lion. When the Talbots arrived last week, their friends at the club, instigated by Mrs. Joseph King, had decorated the lion with garlands of carrots, onions, radishes, and all kinds of vegetables. Not to be outdone, Dr. Talbot crowned it with his derby.

The junior George S. Chappells believe in going where the fish are, so, Thursday after a six o'clock breakfast, they motored to Allanson and were well rewarded with a nice string of walleyed pike.

Just 23 years ago a group of Chicagoans summering at the Chicago club persuaded Mrs. Fox, whose cooking was renowned thruout the country, to serve them dinners occasionally. The Foxes had a rambling white farmhouse overlooking Horton's bay and had their own cows, chickens and vegetable garden. Their homemade rolls, fried chicken, corn on the cob became so popular with the resorters that some one suggested a name. Mr. Fox, at that time had brick red hair, so Mrs. Robert Stuart suggested Red Fox Inn, and that is the name it bears today. The food has even improved with the years, and is the sort that one dreams of romantically as "the kind mother used to make." There's nothing of the inn about it. It's just a cheery farmhouse with home cooking. The Forsyth Tramels and Bill McGuires entertained a group of their Belvedere club friends for dinner Thursday night and afterward went to the opening dance at the Belvedere club casino.

• • •

Also on Horton's bay is Dilworth's, equally famous for its excellent food. On Tuesday Mrs. Walter Ware entertained a group of friends at luncheon there. Her guests included Mrs. Robert Stuart and her two guests, Mrs. James Douglas and Mrs. Ernest Noell, Mrs. Robert Wheeler, Mrs. William Waller, Mrs. Eckhart Williams and her sister, Mrs. Raymond Wilson, who is visiting Mrs. Williams at present, Mrs. Charles Pike and Mrs. William Stevens of Detroit, and Mrs. William Frey of Cincinnati.

The Wares have the Robert Wares' two boys, Jack and Ralph, with them for a few weeks, and their son, Gordon, has arrived for a couple of weeks holiday before going into active service.

The winter of war work has taught women the satisfaction that comes from a job well done. So, after a month of much needed rest, the cottagers at Harbor Point were anxious to be active again. A committee was organized among whom were Mrs. Nelson L. Barnes, Mrs. Henry Barkhausen, Mrs. William Waller, and Mrs. William Bush. They have become affiliated with Harbor Springs chapter of the Red Cross, and every Tuesday and Thursday meet in the convent at the Springs to make surgical dressings. It is their aim to make 9,000 dressings in the five weeks which are left. Mrs. Waller and Mrs. Bush spent two days in Petoskey at the congressional institute of the Red Cross, in order to become trained assistants and are in charge of packing and supplies for the workroom. Mrs. Joseph E. Otis, Mrs. Edwin P. Dewes, Mrs. Rensselaer W. Cox, Miss Marion Smith, and Mrs. Robert Hyman have also signed up to assist with the work.

• • •

Altho Mrs. Barkhausen and Mr. Kenneth Burgess have not seen each other in some time, they are from the same small town in Wisconsin and grew up together. So on Saturday night Mrs. Barkhausen gave a dinner party at the Little Harbor club in honor of the Burgesses. Last Sunday night Mrs. William Waller entertained at dinner at the club for her house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Howard O'Brien. On Friday Mrs. Robert Hyman had a dinner in her home in honor of the O'Briens. Mrs. Hyman will give a luncheon next Wednesday at the Little Harbor club. There will be a fashion show that afternoon with the girls from the Point modeling. Wednesday night will begin a series of grill steak dinners out of doors on the terrace of the club.

Mrs. Dewes' daughter, Mrs. Richard K. Juergens, has arrived for a couple of weeks' visit with her mother. The Frederick Woodruffs of Joliet, and their daughter, Kay, are at the Harbor Point club for the remainder of the month. Dr. and Mrs. Frank Brawley will arrive Aug. 14 to visit the LeRoy Kramers.

Before the Thursday night family dinner at the club, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gordon gave a cocktail party for their friends at the Point. Also entertaining at a dinner were the Kramers and Mrs. Barkhausen.

Supper Party to Benefit Day Nursery

By Judith Cass

The Children's Civic theater, which is sponsored by the Chicago Drama league, played to a capacity house last Monday night in Thorne Hall on Northwestern university's downtown campus at its first August performance. An original dramatization of Rip van Winkle, a streamlined version of "The Rivals," and a circus ballet are on the program for tomorrow night. Mrs. William Vogelback, president of the league, will return to the city from Michigan in time for the show. Mrs. William Haywood, chairman of the theater, will entertain at dinner at the Traffic club before going to the performance, which is open to the public, admission free.

The knitting and sewing, needlework and volunteer groups of the Junior board of Northwestern University settlement will meet for tea at the home of Mrs. William Campbell in Evanston on Wednesday. The groups are busy making articles to order and for the board's annual fall exhibit. Mrs. George Wolf Jr. is in charge of the Red Cross work done by members.

Instead of having a benefit to raise funds for its summer project, that of sending children to the House in the Woods summer camp, the members have decided to finance the children's outings themselves. The board sent about 150 children to the camp last year.

Being welcomed back to Hinsdale after an honorable discharge from the army is Theodore Mohlman, with his wife and their two children. Mr. Mohlman is one of the guiding spirits of the Oak Brook Horse show which started yesterday at the Oak Brook Polo club in Hinsdale and which will continue all day today. Much in evidence about the show grounds will be a group of young women selling war stamps and bonds, an institution that is universal in this wartime summer. Carts and wagons have been brought out of their resting places to take part in the driving classes that are being featured this year.

The Ravinia Festival season will draw to a close with the usual party for sponsors and workers tonight in Ravinia Park. Pierre Monteux, guest conductor during the last week, and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will contribute a little light entertainment beginning at 8 o'clock. The Budapest String Quartet, which will be heard this week in the park, and the glee club from the Great Lakes Naval Training station, also will take part in the program. For the convenience of those who wish to remain in the park after the afternoon performance, or for those who come early tonight, a buffet supper at 50 cents a person will be served.

• • •

Next Saturday brings a novel sort of benefit, one that was planned by the directors of the North Avenue Day nursery. It is to be a sports and supper party at the Winnetka home of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney S. Gorham, who have a swimming pool, badminton and tennis courts, and plenty of space indoors to take care of the guests in case it rains. Each director is inviting 10 couples—there are 30 directors—so the large gathering will be composed for the most part of friends and friends' friends, so to speak.

The supper will be either a "box lunch" one, or an informal barbecue, with hamburgers and frankfurters broiled on outdoor grills. There will be a bar on the terrace and at the swimming pool, and strolling musicians for dancing and songs. Mrs. John H. Noyes, Mrs. Theron T. Chapman, Mrs. Robert F. Carr Jr., Mrs. Samuel A. Culbertson II., Mrs. John I. Marshall Jr., and Mrs. Robert McKenna are some of those active in making arrangements for the party.

Mackinac Isle Has Salvage, Scrap Drives

MACKINAC ISLAND, MICH.

Scrap and salvage drives, a patriotic pageant and a community benefit garden party vied for attention here this week as cottagers and hotel guests plunged into August vacation activities. The high spot of the week was the patriotic display on Main street greeting visitors from cruise ships. Store windows were filled with patriotic posters, bunting, and army-approved photographs of war plants, appeals for scrap and salvage. Streets were gay with the American colors flying.

Service men were much in prominence as the result of island hotels offering a 25 per cent reduction in rates to all members of the armed forces in uniform, who were invited to spend furloughs and leaves here.

• • •

A scrap and salvage depot was set up, featured by a dramatic display of scrap articles showing to what war use cast off materials and junk is put. Youngsters from cottages and hotels organized "commando" units and scoured the west and east bluffs, where the cottagers hold forth, in the quest of scrap to bring by the pony cart load to the dock for shipment.

The highlight of the week-end for summer residents and visitors is to be the showing tomorrow night of the patriotic pageant "You Can Defend America," which has been shown in 160 cities the last year or so. It will be offered in the casino of the Grand hotel. About 90 are in the cast. Members of the troupe, which has traveled the country for more than a year, are here this summer rehearsing and planning their tour, which gets under way next fall.

• • •

Thursday afternoon the Women's Guild of Mackinac Island will hold a benefit garden party in the lovely gardens of the West Bluff summer cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Burrows of Chicago. The committee includes Mrs. John L. Cochran, Mrs. Peter G. S. Mero, Mrs. E. Wilfred Puttkamer, all of Chicago, and island summer cottagers; and Mrs. Sara Doherty and Mrs. M. H. Benjamin of Mackinac Island.

There will be dancing in the Burrows stables and in the garden, door prizes and refreshments. Ponies will be supplied for the children to ride.

The cottage colony was augmented this week by the arrival from Chicago of the Carl E. Wickmans of Wilmette, who have opened their summer place atop Mission hill. They brought with them Mr. and Mrs. William N. John of Minneapolis, who will stay two weeks.

• • •

Golf is the principal interest of guests staying with the John L. Cochrans. Mrs. Cochran has been entertaining Mrs. Donald Ryerson, Mrs. Samuel Walker, and Mrs. John Anderson Kings, all of Lake Forest. Mr. Cochran is expected at his West Bluff cottage in a few days. Coming this week are Miss Elizabeth Peabody and Mrs. Farley Hopkins, both of Lake Forest, and Mrs. Stewart Johnston of Winnetka.

Pittsfield Garden Center Will Hear Talk by Mrs. King

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

Mrs. Francis King of South Hartford, N. Y., the former Louisa Yeomans of Chicago and an authority on gardening, is the guest of Mrs. William Felton Barrett [Margery Barker] at Sky farm, North Egremont. Mrs. Barrett gave a dinner for her guest last night and is having a luncheon in her honor on Tuesday. Yesterday Mrs. W. Rockwood Gibbs was a luncheon hostess for Mrs. King at Red Lion inn in Stockbridge. Other guests included Mrs. Barrett, Mrs. George O. Forbes of Rockford, Mrs. Owen Johnson, Mrs. Rodney Proctor, and Mrs. Race W. Paddock.

Mrs. Proctor is to have a luncheon party tomorrow at Orleton farm, Stockbridge, in compliment to Mrs. King, who later will give an address at Berkshire Garden center on "A Potpourri of Gardening." The Richmond Garden club is to attend, and Mrs. Gibbs is to pour at the tea. Mrs. King is to be the honored guest at a luncheon given by Mrs. George O. Forbes at Orchard farm, North Egremont, today, and Mrs. Albert Spalding, wife of the violinist, also is to entertain for her next week at Aston Magna, Great Barrington.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Holloway of Glencoe have opened Tamarack in Tyringham and will remain until October. George Allen Holloway of New York has joined Mrs. Holloway at Pittsfield. Her brother, Dr. Franklin K. Paddock, a captain in the army, is now at Camp Eustis, Va.

Mrs. Perry M. Shepard [Eleanor Ogden West] and daughter, Miss Deborah S. Shepard, following a visit with Mrs. Donald F. McPherson at Pittsfield, have joined Lieut. Col. Shepard, now stationed at Richmond, Va.

Gov. Leverett Saltonstall is honorary chairman of the gala benefit for Russian war relief at Tanglewood in Lenox next Friday, for which Dr. Serge Koussevitzky and students at the Berkshire Music center are giving their service. Edward Clark Carter, chairman of the Institute of Pacific Relations, is head of the general committee, on which also are Mrs. Sidney Coe Howard, widow of the playwright; Mrs. Bruce Crane, and Dr. James Phinny Baxter III., president of Williams college.

Mrs. James Ransom Walker is having as guests at Fair Acres, Stockbridge, her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wirt D. Walker of Lake Shore drive; her sister, Mrs. David Shields Cook of the Drake hotel, and Mrs. Tracy C. Drake of Chicago and Laguna Beach, Cal.

Mrs. Thomas H. Blodgett and her daughter, Mrs. Livingston Hall, are on a bicycle trip across the state from Great Pine farm, Great Barrington, to visit friends near Boston.

Announce Engagement of Minette Kositchek

Dr. and Mrs. Sol B. Kositchek of 3740 Lake Shore drive announce the engagement of their daughter, Minette, to Lieut. Nathan Zimmerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Zimmerman of Pine Grove avenue. Miss Kositchek attended Milwaukee-Downer college.

Dim-outs Bring Simplicity to Beverly, Mass.

BEVERLY, MASS.

For the summer sojourners from Chicago and other cities who are on the north shore, the change in the pace of life stands out in notable contrast to the happier days before the war. Activities not only in social life but at the yacht and country clubs have taken on a simplicity which made the shore so inviting in the days before baronial estates and fortune-costing mansion houses.

This summer has brought out a seemingly new appreciation of home life and home entertaining. There are luncheons, teas and dinner parties as usual, but the larger programs, the dinner parties and dances with their elaborate preparations and lavish entertaining are few. With the dim-outs affecting homes all along the shore, the gasoline and tire rationing and the inability to get experienced household help combined with the number of men in the service has made a marked difference in the social calendar.

• • •

For a quarter century church fairs have always been a feature of the summer season at the fashionable churches. These have been held as usual, but the number of booths have been reduced and offerings combined. There have been no cabaret shows or dances on the programs and all of the activities have been so arranged that patrons may be at home soon after sunset. Beach parties, always gay, are no longer favored for want of the beaches, which have been closed to such events after sunset. All this has made daytime programs liveller, but evening events much quieter.

Mrs. Orr Milton Allyn has returned to her home in Urbana, Ill., after a north shore stay, coming on to attend the wedding of her daughter Miss Eunice Gilkerson Allyn to John Perkins Schurcliffe of Boston and Argilla road, Ipswich.

MARRIED JUNE 20

Mrs. George F. Witteman, the former Lillian Mary Hermes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hermes of Chicago. Her marriage to the son of Mrs. Katherine Witteman took place on June 20 at Our Lady of Victory church. Mr. Witteman and his bride went to Madeline Island, Wis., on their wedding trip.

[Jenart Photo.]

An interesting plan is being worked out on the north shore to unite all the relief organizations of the united nations into one group, all for a common cause. The program was outlined at a gathering held at Avalon, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill of Washington at Prides Crossing. Among those attending were Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter of Chicago and Beverly Cove and Mrs. Richard T. Crane of Chicago and Castle Hill, Ipswich.

Members of the Ipswich and Essex historical societies were entertained this week by Cornelius Crane, son of Mrs. Crane. The trip from the Essex shore was made in motor boats to the noted Choate Island now owned by Mr. Crane. They visited the old mansion house and enjoyed luncheon there. Mr. Crane recently turned over the island to the state and it will be used for the development of the sheep raising program. Mr. Crane provided a large flock of sheep for use in carrying out the program.

After a pleasant visit on the north shore, Lewis O. Megowen has returned to his Chicago home. He visited his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. R. Lee Megowen of Chicago, at Shirecliff on the shore road at Magnolia. The Megowen children, William and Miss Nancy Megowen, are with them for the summer.

• • •

Mrs. Carleton B. Swift, the former Lila Leonard, has been here from Chicago for a north shore tarry with her father, Arthur G. Leonard of Chicago, at Druimteac, his north shore home out on Eastern Point in Gloucester. The Leonard family have been coming to the north shore for many years, and the Leonard home is one of the most attractive places in the Gloucester colony.

The C. Groverman Ellises of Wayne, Ill., are at their Eastern Point summer home in Gloucester for the long season on the north shore.

John Clay Jr., son of the John Clays of Chicago who are at Finisterre, the Clay summer home out on Eastern Point, is attending the summer school at Harvard university.

Barbara Blanchflower Engaged to H. B. Dodge
